State says no claimant, no possession and no 17th century ship

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

It's got all the elements of a flashy Hollywood action flick—French dignitaries, deep-sea archeology, sabotage, a 330-year-old ship and a U.S. Federal Marshall—and it also has all the paperwork of an IRS audit.

The latest chapter in the saga of 17th Century French Ship Le Griffon hunter and head of Great Lakes Exploration Group (GLEG) Stephen Libert finds Libert still battling with the state of Michigan over possession of what may or may not be the ship's remnants.

"The facts are straightforward," stated the State of Michigan in documents it filed on Dec. 23, 2008 in Western District, Northern Division of Michigan's United States District Court. "GLEG asserts that it has discovered a shipwreck in Lake Michigan. GLEG alleges that the wreck is the Griffin [sic]. GLEG seeks to be declared the owner and/or salvor of the defendant shipwreck."

In the pleading for a dismissal of the case, the state asserted, among several claims, that it has immunity due to the 11th Amendment—which basically states that a citizen cannot sue a state—and further stated that, not only did no one make claim to the alleged ship when the State of Michigan noticed it in two newspapers, but a state diving expedition revealed no ship.

FAILURE TO CLAIM POSSESSION?

Libert and his colleague, historian and a member of the Chicago-Paris Sister City Committee Rich Gross, said France indicated interest in the ship's potential location several years ago. And, furthermore, foreign countries deal with the U.S.

Lasater says goodbye

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater may be hanging up his sheriff's badge after 32 years in office at year's end, but he isn't ready for retirement.

"I've still got a lot of gas left in the tank," Lasater, 70, said when he sat down with the News-Review for an interview in mid-December.

Lasater, who took office on Jan. 1, 1976, after defeating Milo Sumner both in the primary and general election, will leave office today, Wednesday, as the second-longest serving sheriff in Michigan history.

According to Michigan Sheriff's Association Executive Director Terrence Jungel, the longest serving sheriff in the state is former Charlevoix man involved in break in Police in Petoskey have arrested three people in connection with a break in at a Petoskey auto repair-business last week.

Petoskey Department of Public Safety Lt. Anthony Rice said police arrested Lee Edward Harcourt-Thomas, 24, of Petoskey; Caleb Gilbert Blatt, 20, of Charlevoix; and Matthew David Barnes, 23, of Petoskey on Saturday after police received a tip from an area salvage yard of some men attempting to sell some suspected stolen material.

The tip led police to execute a search warrant on Liberty Street in Petoskey, which led them to arrest the men on charges of breaking and entering with intent, and receiving and concealing stolen property.

Police said shortly after midnight on Jan. 1 someone broke into Jim's Radiator Shop on Grace Street through a door and stole radiators and heater cores for vehicles.

All three men remained lodged in the Emmet County Jail, Monday, in lieu of a $20,000 bond.

Rice said police are continuing their investigation into possible links between this crime and others in the area.

Petoskey police were assisted in the investigation by the Charlevoix and Antrim county sheriff's offices and the Michigan State Police.

Charlevoix County Road Commission down $2 million in two years

CHRISTINA ROHN NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

The Charlevoix County Road Commission, like any other road commission in the state, is hurting financially.

During the past two years, the commission's budget has decreased by more than $2 million.

In 2007, the commission's total budget was $6,260,969.33, and by 2008, the budget had decreased to $5,516,444.52.

On Wednesday, Dec. 31, during its regular meeting, the road commission board unanimously approved its 2009 budget — $4,190,999.75.

Patrick Harmon, manager of the road commission, said he believes a number of factors have contributed to the extreme drop in their funds.

"Our revenues are decreasing due to less gallons of gas sold and license plates, also people may be down to one car or are leaving the state," he said. "Most of it, I'd say, is due to the sale of gasoline."

According to Harmon, the state currently collects 19 cents per gallon of gas sold statewide and pools it together, eventually distributing 39.1 percent to the Michigan Department of Transportation, 39.1 percent to county road commissions and the remaining 21.8 percent to cities and villages.

Harmon said unless this formula changes, things could get worse for local road commissions.

"The only way it's going to change is if our legislators in Lansing change the way we're funded," he said.

Harmon said he is uncertain about what the future has in store, but is positive that they will overcome every obstacle.

"We'll make it — it's tough, but we'll manage," he said. "I don't know what it's going to look like come April or May; if we have to cut services or lay people off, we'll deal with it at that time."

"The last thing we want to do here is lay people off... if roads don't get patched or roads don't get graded, ultimately the traffic and the taxpayers suffer for that."

Harmon said people shouldn't worry this winter about the roads being clear.

"One-third of our budget is snow removal, and we're always going to do our winter maintenance," he said. "We're trying to cut back on salt when we can, but we're going to try to provide the same level of service as we've always done." Contact Christina Rohn at crohn@petoskeynews.com.

Representative sworn in for last time, Kevin Elsenheimer begins final of three terms

State Representative Kevin Elsenheimer (R-Kewadin), (left), was sworn in by Traverse City Circuit Judge Thomas Power recently. Elsenheimer, serving the final of three terms due to state term limits, took his oath of office at the Grand Traverse County courthouse before friends, family and local dignitaries. All 110 state representatives will take a ceremonial oath of office on the House floor in Lansing on Jan. 14. "I give my thanks to the people of Northern Michigan for again giving me the privilege of representing them in Lansing," said Elsenheimer during the ceremony. "Their confidence in me and the support they have given over the years has been tremendous. Everyone can be assured serving the local needs of our region remains my top priority as the Legislature works to restore our state economy and create jobs for area residents." Elsenheimer will also serve as the House Republican leader for the 2009-2010 legislative session, having been elected by his Lansing colleagues in November.

Excuse me what did you say?

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

Believe half of what you see and none of what you hear especially if you are losing your ability to hear. D o you find yourself moving physically closer to someone speaking to you only to realize you are in their personal space or worst yet in their lap? In restaurants does the conversation become so difficult to hear you find yourself not speaking or smiling and saying yes like a foreigner in an old movie? Are your eyes beginning to squint as if that will help you to hear well? Yes to all the above for me. I realized this was my own problem while speaking to a classroom full of students and a child in the back of the room asked me a question. I requested him to repeat himself as if to show more interest. Truth be told I really couldn't hear a word he said. After the third attempt at answering his question the remaining students sitting nearby translated for me. To start the New Year in better shape mentally and sensory-wise I decided it was time for both my husband and I to seek treatment. Making the decision was hard for me personally. I went forward first feeling like a scout testing the waters so my husband would surely follow. Hmm...he's not following. Taking that first leap was difficult as I felt older than my years having to make this move in my life. I returned from my visit to report back to the troops. I cheerfully told my husband the delightful, attentive woman at the desk who greeted me for a hearing test looks just like my mom IF she had blonde hair. To which my husband replied, "She's blind?" Hearing loss of husband confirmed. Questions you may want to ask yourself: Do you feel like people just mumble and not speak clearly? Are family and friends politely or not so kindly asking you to turn the TV down?

If this is happening more frequently, it's time to be honest with yourself and make a decision on what you can do to add to your quality of life and others around you. Hearing aids improve relationships at least that's what the book I was asked to read is telling me. You will find yourself not saying "excuse me" so much and turning to others to ask them to repeat themselves. The atmosphere in your home will be calmer as well. The TV and radio will be at a manageable level so the neighbors during the summer months won't call and ask you to change the channel. One good thing has occurred. My sense of sight reading has improved. I can quickly read closed caption on TV while walking on the treadmill at the gym. Thinking all of this was age related was my first mistake. While watching the History Channel with dad who is 92 years young I kept raising the volume. Now he was the one that I thought couldn't hear well. I took him in for a medical check up and asked about verifying hearing loss in those Clark Gable-like ears.

Turns out he just needed a professional cleaning which happens often to individuals who are diabetic. Once we returned home he asked why the TV was on so loud and if I could stop yelling. I have since found that hearing loss is not age related but genetic unless you have suffered some type of injury that created the hearing loss. Some couples create a co-dependent behavior. Men are usually more resistant to getting hearing aids. What usually occurs is his wife or significant other interprets messages repeating what words are missed. Your spouse may become so adept at answering for you that you may actually believe you can hear perfectly. They become a 'sonic servant' so to speak. If you are increasing this demand on your spouse it is time to become dependent on your own ears. When your children and friends become frustrated with your unwillingness to get help it could lead to emotional feelings of hurt and isolation. Now you will probably respond, "The cost is too high". Expense is another reason we sometimes avoid getting hearing assistance. Yep, I need to re-upholster a chair in my living room and the oven I have owned for 16 years actually wore out. She just rolled over and died on New Year's Eve. My oven wasn't ready to face another year but I am not ready to face another year of not hearing well. The oven and chair will get taken care of eventually. Only 20 percent of people who suffer from hearing loss seek treatment through hearing aids according to the consumer handbook on Hearing Loss and Hearing Aids. My 2009 buzz word for hearing aids. Thank-you sweet lady Christmas

What can we say about Bev Boss that so many people don't already know? We can say she is the driving force behind Charlevoix's Community Christmas Project. We can say she selflessly spends the holidays worrying about how hundreds of local families are going to be fed and clothed and give gifts to their children. We can say that Santa Claus doesn't have a thing on this wonderful woman. Not only did Boss and her Community Christmas Project drum up enough support to help 240 families in the Charlevoix School District with food, clothes and toys, but 850 individuals were served. Boss has served as chairman of the project since 2002 and says she is still trying to fill the large shoes of her predecessor. A n d , while she said the project can make her own family's Christmas a little hectic, she wouldn't trade it for anything. "Oh my gosh, I do it because it's a job that needs to be done and the satisfaction of people telling us they wouldn't have had a Christmas if we didn't help them," she said. "It makes my Christmas better knowing I helped someone else have a nice Christmas." Boss thanked Bethany Lutheran Church and Community Reformed Church for the use of their facilities. "They treated us like queens, so we'll definitely be going back," she said. While Boss works with a committee of nearly 20, there are more than 50 people, some behind the scenes who work to make the project a reality every year. "I really enjoy working with the people on the committee," she said. "What a wonderful group of people." Since the project is sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Society, it garners members from all different area churches. "We operate solely on contributions. We don't go out with our little tin cups in the street," Boss said. "We just send letters to churches and anybody that wants to help is welcome." She added, "I think we're very lucky and I was absolutely amazed this year—you know times are getting tough—but a small community like Charlevoix is hard to beat. They saw need and they stepped up to help their neighbors and kids and they made our job easy." The project went from serving 160 families when Boss took over to this year's 240 families. "The surprising thing is we had about an equal number of adults and children," she said. "Before we used to be heavy on children, but we have been getting a lot of senior citizens (who) just don't have enough food."

Anyone who would like to donate cash or goods or even their time to the project can call Boss at 547-2078. And as for sweet lady Christmas, "As long as the good Lord gives me enough good health, I plan on working. Christmas is a wonderful season and it gives me motivation to enjoy my Christmas even more." We'd also like to thank a host of project committee members including Rosemary Horton, Mary Eveleigh, Lois Lewis, Joan Lemerand, Russ Bolt, Mary Plude, Carolyn Batdorf, Sharon Delaney and Joan Balch. Mail your financial donation to Carolyn Batdorf C/O Charlevoix Community Christmas Project, 04903 Marion Center Road, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

LETTERS to the editor

BIDDING SCRUTINY

Editor: A copy of the Charlevoix Courier just reached me and the issue included a report of the granting of the contract for the much awaited trout stream project.

I do believe that the newly refurbished East Park, the associated marina facility and without doubt the performance pavilion is another one of the great additions to the general welfare of the city that has been completed in the last several years.

The addition of the trout stream in the Park will be the icing on the cake and will cement the public opinion that these facilities are absolutely the best-leading edge downtown improvements having been tailored to our specific community. Assuming that the editorial content is accurate, I do question the description of the actual letting of the contract. While I accept that the final decision process may allow for a little wiggle room provided in the contract language, on the surface it appears that the lowest bidder of the two—I think equally qualified—bidding companies did not in fact win the bid. It seemingly was swept under the rug as a "mere $700." My concern is that we may be reaching back to the bad old, and not so old, days and ignoring the very important question of a system of integrity that all American citizens deserve and can rely on. Our current national news is full of stories describing abuses to the system. Surely we in Charlevoix are better than that. Lowell Blossom

PALESTINE CAUSE OF TRAGEDY

Editor:

The plight of the Palestinian people is indeed a tragic one. The security barrier built by Israel was meant to protect the citizens of Israel including their frightened children from suicide bombers. Remember school buses, restaurants, shopping centers are all fair game. It has worked, there have been less suicide bomb attacks since the walls have been built.

Until the Palestinian powers that be think more about their citizens than of the destruction of Israel, life for the Palestinian people will remain tragic.

DNR urges hunters to complete online survey

Compiled data to track next year's deer population

NOAH FOWLE NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

If you got a big buck this year, the Michigan DNR wants to hear about it. And even if you did not, they still want to hear about it.

Through an online survey, the state's DNR wants to get as much input as possible from the near 760,000 hunters who bought licenses this year. Information they are looking for includes everything from how long hunters spent in the woods to how many deer they saw and how successful, or unsuccessful they were.

Brian Mastenbrook, a wildlife biologist in the DNR's Gaylord office, said preliminary data shows that numbers in the Upper Peninsula were down, but kills throughout the Lower Peninsula increased. "Although we can never answer the question of how many deer were killed and how many are out there completely, the survey is another way to get a better handle on it," he said. "People telling us what they did gives us another index to help us manage what's out there." Once the DNR has a final estimate on the number of deer killed in the 2008 season, they will plug it into a model that estimates what the 2009 deer population will be, and that in turn helps them determine how many licenses to sell the following season. Mary Dettloff, a spokesperson for the DNR, said both the online survey, available at michigan.gov/dnr, and those mailed to random license holders is a critical piece to the DNR's ongoing task to manage the state's wildlife resources.

A day of services for those in need

Human service agencies in Emmet and Charlevoix counties are once again joining forces for the second annual Project Connect.

Project Connect aims to connect people in need with a range of health and human services needed to improve their lives.

The event will be from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 5, at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Petoskey. All participants will be provided with a hot meal and bags of food, personal care items and household goods to take home. A clothing area will allow guests to select clothing for themselves and their families.

"Project Connect cuts through the red tape that so often makes it difficult for people in need to access the services they need," said Jamie Winters, chair of the Homeless Continuum of Care workgroup of the Charlevoix-Emmet Human Services Coordinating Body (HSCB) and Safe Home Coordinator for the Women's Resource Center. "By bringing together all of the services in one place, in one day, we can make an immediate difference in the lives of many."

While more than 40 non-profit agencies, businesses and service providers will participate in the event, providing services, goods, benefits sign-up, direct referrals and more on-site, Lorraine Manary, coordinator of the HSCB, said volunteer assistance is needed both in advance and at the event. Event coordinators are also encouraging more agencies and businesses to participate and are seeking donations of goods and funds to support the event. All donations are tax-deductible and donors will receive a tax acknowledgment.

For more information about Project Connect, or to volunteer goods, services or funds, contact Martha Lancaster at 487-1006 or via e-mail at info@charemunitiedway.org or Lorraine Manary at 347-6701 or via e-mail at info@char-em-hscb.org.

Christmas wishes come true for local family

MARCI SINGER
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

When Debbie Drew of East Jordan learned that St. Marys Cement of Charlevoix was willing to help those in need with their heating bills this holiday season, she knew there was something more she could do.

"I found out this family had their heat turned off and was using a portable electric heater," Drew said. "I also found out they have two children ages 4 and 6."

As Drew made contacts to help them, she learned they also had their electricity turned off.

"I immediately went to a nearby hotel and checked a room out for them for a week not even caring if I had to pick up the bill," she said.

When she contacted St. Marys Cement, who was going to help out with the heat bill, Drew told plant manager Dirk Cox what she had done.

"He wanted to take this a step further," she said. "He had me pick up groceries for them and gifts for the children."

Drew said Save A Lot food store in East Jordan also donated a ham, a fruit basket and 5 percent off the grocery bill when she told them what she was doing.

"St. Marys Cement is very generous and caring," she said. "Mr. Cox realized it is very hard to care for two young children and have a Christmas dinner in a hotel room so he wanted to move them to a place with a kitchen."

While Cox was making accommodation arrangements, Drew and her four children spent a day decorating a tree and wrapping presents for the whole family. By Sunday, Dec. 21, they were ready to surprise the family.

"The children and I told them we needed to show them something. I gathered their two children along with their mother and headed to the Weather-vane Hotel," Drew said.

As they approached the door to the room, Drew said there was a note on the door saying Santa had to come early.

"The children's eyes were big and their parents overwhelmed. Finally to see tears of happiness instead of sadness sent a warmth deep down inside of me," Drew said. "My children's faces seemed to glow seeing the results of these acts of kindness."

For Drew, helping someone else, no matter who it is, makes her feel good inside.

"When I lost my daughter last January in a snowmobile accident I had to learn to lean on others. It was hard for me to accept help at first but now I know I really needed it—even from people I didn't know," she said.

Although it is a very difficult time of year, Drew said keeping very busy helping others is therapeutic for her and she's grateful to St. Marys Cement for giving her the opportunity to help them help others.

"I have learned no matter how hard it is to accept help we all need it in some way. Any act of kindness is worth more than words can say," she said.

Planning for Water Runoff with Permeable Pavers

With ever-increasing levels of development, natural, open land is rapidly being replaced with impervious surfaces such as asphalt roadways, parking lots, and buildings. As a result, the management of stormwater runoff is becoming increasingly important. To address this issue, Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council recently held a presentation to introduce one alternative to traditional asphalt and concrete surfaces. Representatives from Unilock discussed permeable pavers as an excellent example of a stormwater Best Management Practice (BMP) to encourage infiltration of stormwater runoff. Additional information about the use of permeable pavers and stormwater runoff prevention is available by contacting Jennifer Gelb, Restoration Ecologist or Valerie Olinik-Damstra, Watershed Coordinator, at Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council by calling (231) 347-1181. Pictured are (from right) Jennifer Gelb and Valerie Olinik-Damstra from Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council seen here talking with representatives from Unilock about the use of permeable pavers as an example of a stormwater Best Management Practice (BMP) to encourage infiltration of stormwater runoff.

Tipping station proposed for Charlevoix Township

American Waste's garbage transfer station first in area in several years

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Striving to keep up with demand for sanitation removal, American Waste hopes to build a tipping station in Charlevoix Township just off U.S. 31 across the road from the Charlevoix Country Club.

The northern Michigan company, which offers garbage and solid waste removal services, serves Charlevoix and the surrounding 10 counties.

"The Charlevoix County Planning Commission makes the decision as to whether or not the proposed facility is in compliance with the approved County Solid Waste Management Plan," said Charlevoix County Planner Larry Sullivan. "The MDEQ (Michigan Department of Environmental Quality) is the state agency that actually permits solid waste facilities."

If approved by the Charlevoix County Planning Commission, the tipping station would operate under part 115 of the Michigan Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, PA 451 of 1994, as amended.

While it is unknown how much garbage the facility would see or how many trucks would come in and out of the property annually, Sullivan said the planning commission's only concern is whether the plan complies with the county's waste management plan.

"Whether it's 100 trucks a day or one truck a year, it would be considered a type 'A' transfer station," Sullivan said. "From the county's perspective, the proposed facility will either comply or not comply with our approved plan. If it complies, we must issue a letter of consistency."

A type "A" transfer station is one wherein smaller trucks are mechanically dumped at the station so larger trucks can be mechanically loaded.

Sullivan explained that it is a fancy way of saying the trucks are filled using either a large claw, or a hydraulic ramp and sometimes larger trucks drive into a depression in the ground and garbage is dumped from smaller trucks into the larger trucks headed for landfills.

A type "B" transfer station would include a traditional garbage dump wherein a single person with, for instance, a pick-up truck load of garbage bags would dump them.

While the plan appears to leave room for potential expansion and an increase in the number of buildings, Sullivan said it appears as though the initial construction would be limited to a 80 to 90 feet by 150 feet building.

Sullivan stressed that the plan is tentative and has yet to be approved.

Several smaller transfer stations exist in the county, but they are equipped only to handle residential or smaller quantities of construction and industrial waste.

"These existing operating transfer stations are located in Boyne Valley Township on Addis Road, on Old M-75 in Melrose Township north of the unincorporated village of Walloon, in East Jordan and in St. James Township on Beaver Island," Sullivan said. "Three larger transfer stations have been licensed in the past but are not currently being operated. One is on US-31 South near Way Transportation, the second is located on Bells Bay Road and the third is located at the site of the Cedar Ridge Landfill."

Sullivan also stressed that this project, if approved, would only constitute a transfer station and not a landfill or dump.

A spokesman for American Waste did not return calls by press time.

Lost one skier, gained three

Charlevoix-East Jordan
Veteran coach Sue Miller is excited about the potential and the attitude of both her teams.

"Overall, it's a great group of kids to work with," Miller said. "We've had a lot of dryland training and those sessions have been great. Personality wise, we have a very spirited team."

Charlevoix-East Jordan lost four-time All-Stater Katherine Rowley — one of the area's all-time best skiers — but do return a strong trio in Amanda Fritsch, Emily Bajko and Mary Gocha, all of whom played key roles in helping the team to a fourth-place finish in last year's state meet.

Other girl skiers include Jenna Kirby, Christina Rossell, Ellen Boyer, Hailey Crick and Alexandria Lobenherr.

For the Charlevoix-East Jordan boys, Michael Cardwell returns as does Joe Midakatsu, Tanner Fisher and Luke Hauley. Other boy skiers are Jordan Hagen, Paul Stolt, Brian Shuler, Justin Williams and Varun Archarya.

"It's been a great season so far," Miller said. "Now, we're looking forward to actual racing and the competitive aspect. Our biggest goal is to have fun and become better racers."

Charlevoix wrestling goes 2-3

The Charlevoix wrestling team earned a pair of wins en route to finishing 2-3 and in a fourth-place tie at the Alpena Tournament.

The Rayders earned victories over Cheboygan, 36-30, and Rudyard, 42-30; and fell to Grayling, 66-12; Alpena, 54-27; and Traverse City Central, 47-15.

Alpena won the tournament, while Rogers City was second and Grayling placed third.

For the Rayders, Zeke Daman finished with a 5-0 record on the day, while Matt Golovich went 4-1. Daman was named the tournament's outstanding lightweight wrestler by tournament coaches.

Daman, wrestling at 130 pounds, pinned Grayling's Dan Cval in one minute, 38 seconds; earned a 10-6 decision over Alpena's John Truss; pinned Rudyard's Jake Perry in 1:16; and earned a 19-3 decision over Pico Biaz of T.C. Central. Daman won one other match by void.

Golovich picked up three wins via pin as he stuck Alpena's Zack Piper, 1:10; Rudyard's Chad Mensard, 1:50; and T.C. Central's Alex Laser, 1:27. Golovich's other win came on a void.

Charlevoix's Chris Evens, 215, also finished 4-1, pinning Alpena's Chad Bruski in 1:44; Cheboygan's Dave Charboneau in 1:45; and Rudyard's Logan Perry in 2:34. He also defeated T.C. Central's Scott Rademaker.

Also for the Rayders, Clay Hese, 189, recorded two pins, the first over Cheboygan's Eric Reimus, the second over Rudyard's Dylan King; Chris Waha, 135, pinned Rudyard's Tyler Griffith; and Curtis Russell, 103, pinned Grayling's Abandoned shipwreck in jeopardy?

State Department and not in individual state governments as a rule.

"I did research their claim. France has been working on this with the State Department since 2005," Gross said. "They thought they had done a submission of a claim when they contacted the State Department and presented them with documents that support the connection that it is a state (France's) ship."

In fact, according to Gross, France submitted the documentation of ownership to the State Department twice and followed that with an official meeting between a French ambassador and personnel from the State Department.

"The State Department presented to the court that evidence but the judge felt the information wasn't relevant and therefore didn't accept the claim," Libert added.

Despite publishing notices in mid-July, 2008, in both the Grand Rapids Press and Marquette Mining Journal, the State of Michigan says no owner came forward.

The state added, "Several federal courts have held that the failure of an interested party to lay claim to a shipwreck after publication of the required notice is proof of abandonment."

But, Libert scoffed, "Do you think French officials are reading the Grand Rapids and Marquette papers?"

NO SHIP TO BE FOUND?
The court ordered Libert's group to provide the state with the wreck's coordinates and the state dove on said coordinates on Oct. 21 and 22.

"These divers found nothing, however, that could possibly be the remnants of a 17th century sailing vessel, with the exception of one wooden timber protruding from the lake bed," the state stated.

Libert said they didn't look hard enough.

"If you walk outside with 100 $1 bills and the wind blows them away it's a dynamic area—it's constantly moving," he said. "Now imagine walking around with your eyes closed and trying to find any of those bills. That's what it's like trying to find artifacts underwater, and I guarantee you with the dives they made there is no way in the world they could possibly locate everything we've done over the years."

He added, "They make it sound like there's nothing down there. If they would have gone another 20 feet they would have seen part of a deck section."

AN ABANDONED SHIP?
Even if a shipwreck was in Lake Michigan's depths, and even if it were Le Griffon, the state says it was abandoned long ago.

"It would be reasonable to infer from the fact that the Griffin sank over 300 years ago, that the wreck of this vessel is today abandoned on the bottom of Lake Michigan," the state stated.

However, Libert said, the act of a captain and crew abandoning ship to save their lives, and the act of a country officially abandoning a sunken ship are two very different things.

But, Libert's most pressing worry is about potential treasure hunters because, he claims, the state should have been more clandestine in their dive.

"I received a call from our people in Michigan that someone was tampering with the area," said Libert, who has spots in the area who watch for suspicious vessels. "The state had a legal right to go out there, but you'd think they would have notified us and the Marshall's office."

He added, "For seven years I kept the site protected and now it's been breached because the state didn't take the proper security precautions. As soon as the weather changes I can tell you it will happen—it will be looted."

State officials did not respond to questions about Libert's claims by press time.

A MEETING WITH FRANCE
"We're still not 100 percent sure it is the Griffon, but the State of Michigan is spending a hell of a lot of money to fight something they say does not exist," Libert said. "The state's saying that, even if it is the Griffon, France didn't jump in and make a claim, so the state owns it."

Gross met with the French Counsel General in Chicago on Tuesday, Dec. 30, 2008 to discuss the matter.

"When France brought their documentation to the State Department, they thought they had filed a claim," Gross said. "The State Department was supposed to translate those documents and have them evaluated to see if they supported the claim and to my knowledge that was never done."

He added, "We've got a total breakdown in communication with the State Department, but France realizes this is a state (French) vessel and they want to claim it."

Gross said the French will now file a claim as soon as possible despite the state's assertion that the time for claiming ownership has passed.

"This is an absolute quagmire of a lawsuit and we haven't even identified this vessel," Gross said. "The proper way to do this is to identify the ship and then talk about it."

He added, "This belongs in museums as an artifact for any body to enjoy. By fighting this the State of Michigan is really promoting people just pillaging ships. Their stance is one of putting people on the defensive."

Sheriff steps down

Lenawee County Sheriff Richard Germond who served 36 years from 1965-2000.

In that time, Lasater said he's seen some major changes in the office he's overseen.

When he took office the jail typically saw a daily population from one to six people who were usually in for a break-in or an alcohol-related offense. Today the jail houses around 50 people daily who are in for the entire range of offenses.

Technology also has come a long way. Not only has the advent of the computer brought a whole new dimension to both crime and investigative work, but even technology used for traffic patrol has changed drastically.

"The first radar unit I saw literally took up the entire trunk of the car," Lasater said. "Today they're about as big as the palm of your hand."

Lasater said some of the events that will stick with him the most from his tenure are the many tragedies he's had to deal with.

"I've knocked on 85 doors," Lasater said of the many death notifications he's made.

Although it's the worst part of the job it's one he's always done himself.

"I always had the philosophy that (notifications) are not a deputy's job. That's my job. And I can't just walk up to the house and say 'I'm sorry.' It's in my make-up that I have to get involved," Lasater said.

The sheriff said he suspects his concern for handling such difficult matters himself goes back to his youth when a counsel and her friend were killed in an accident and his family felt the police handled the notification process poorly.

"I think that stuck in my mind," he said.

That same hands-on philosophy put Lasater in harm's way on numerous occasions over the years. On several occasions he's negotiated face-to-face with barricaded gunmen, he was twice knocked unconscious by a suspect and in 2002 was seriously injured when a man on which he was trying to serve court papers rammed the barrel of a shotgun in his face.

Originally from Arkansas, after serving in the U.S. Air Force, and earning a degree in education from Arkansas State University, Lasater came to Northern Michigan where he worked as a school teacher in Boyne City, then as a counselor for the intermediate school district. He then became the area's first district court probation officer. He then began working summers as a marine patrol officer, then a part-time deputy sheriff, which ultimately led him to run for sheriff.

He said nothing could really have prepared him for some of the difficult aspects of the job, such as dealing with tragedies.

"Whenever I got a call in the middle of the night when my kids were growing up... when I'd come home after dealing with it, I'd go to each of their rooms and just sit there with them for a few minutes. That seemed to be therapeutic," Lasater said.

The sheriff said the high-profile nature of the job was also something to which he had to get accustomed.

"George Thomas Lasater is a very reserved, quiet, stay under-the-radar, low profile person, and yet I'm placed in a very high profile position... that's out of my comfort realm," Lasater said.

Lasater said the decision to not seek re-election was a very difficult one, and one he wasn't quite ready to make.

"I made a promise to (incoming Charlevoix County Sheriff) Don (Schneider) four years ago that I wouldn't run again," Lasater said. "He's been loyal and I wanted to give him a chance. Four years rolled by and I said to myself, 'George, what did you do?' So, you have to be careful what you promise."

Lasater said he's proud of the department's many accomplishments over the years — from adding a sub-station to Boyne Falls shortly after taking office, to the work he and his staff did on difficult cases such as the Merriman murder case which ended in a conviction earlier this year.

He said one case he would like to have solved before leaving office is the April 15, 1988 disappearance of Victoria Marie Saliz, who was 69 when she was last seen near her Boyne Valley Township home.

So what's next for a man who has defined himself by his position for 32 years?

If he has his way, he won't be rocking away his days on a front porch or taking vacations to make up for the years of being on call around the clock.

Boyne City Mayor Eleanor Stackus (left) hugs Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater as city commissioners Chuck Vondra (back left) and Ron Grunch applaud after she presented Lasater with a certificate of appreciation from the city commission at its Dec. 16 meeting.

Lasater said he hopes to get a job working as a chief of police for a small town, or perhaps open his own investigation business.

"I'm ready to go back to work on Jan. 2," he said.

As Lasater, an avid fan of the Old West, prepares to ride off into the sunset Wednesday, he said he's grateful for all the people he's worked with over the years.

"I also have to give a lot of credit to my family," the sheriff said. "I'm sure that my kids had to pay some dues over the years, but they never complained about it."

"I'm just so grateful to the citizens of Charlevoix County for allowing me to live out my childhood dream," Lasater said.

Committee aims to preserve local history

Earl Young houses could be next

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Determines not to allow any more buildings with historical significance to fall to the developer's blade, a group of concerned Charlevoix citizens is taking action.

Both the Charlevoix Historic District Commission and the Charlevoix Historic District Study Committee are working to help ensure numerous local features will be here for decades to come.

"We're interested in preserving Charlevoix history through creating historical districts that would protect architecture and neighborhood character," said study committee chairman and vice-chairman of the historic district commission Mary Adams.

It would help increase tourism and when people visit cities that have historic districts, they spend more dollars than average tourists.

City Planner Mike Spencer, in a memo to city council, outlined events which spurred the current actions.

"The demolition of the Appletree Building in 2003, the former office of Earl Young, located on Bridge Street in the Downtown Business District was very controversial and thus resulted in the establishment of an ad hoc committee. The ad hoc historical preservation committee was established by city council on Sept. 2, 2004 and was tasked with studying the feasibility of historic districts within the city," he stated.

The committee has two members from both the DDA, city council, chamber of commerce, historical society and the city planning commission.

The committee was, through their own accord, later dissolved and the historic district study committee was formed in its stead.

"City council made a resolution to appoint a historic district study committee on Jan. 17, 2005, who has the responsibility to undertake a photographic inventory of all resources in the proposed district, research the history of the district, and write the preliminary report," Spencer stated.

"The study report includes the history of the proposed district, a statement of significance—association with significant events, and design/construction significance—historical research on the buildings in the designated area; a photographic inventory, resource counts and resource percentages."

When the report is finished, it will be sent to the Michigan State Historic Preservation Office, the Michigan Historic Commission and the state's historic preservation review board for review.

City council: Sign ordinance stands
Businesses off the main drag unhappy with decisionBENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Signs, signs, everywhere signs.

They direct you to hospital, police, restaurants and historical attractions, but what happens when your business is down a side street and your hopes to attract clientele with a sign the city says you cannot erect?

"I get people in here every day asking where something is because the signage is so poor," said Tony Duerr, owner of Pine River Books, a used book store located a short walk down Park Avenue from Charlevoix's main drag.

"They don't know where the banks are, they don't know where teller machines are, they have no idea where the Earl Young houses are."

He added, "We need to do a much better job on wayfinding. Make ourselves more welcoming to visitors to our town."

Duerr, along with several other Park Avenue businesses which include the Alcove Cafe, Treasure Chest nautical gift shop and Panache Hair Studio had hoped to get permission from the city to erect what they feel is a modest sign on the south wall of the Talula building at 115 Bridge St., right at the corner of Bridge and Park.

However, city council recently adopted their sign ordinance with minor language changes and no provision for a pedestrian wayfinding sign.

"Those of us who operate businesses that are not on Bridge Street have had a big problem getting no need," Duerr said. "Pedestrians in large numbers walk up and down Bridge Street but are not aware that there are businesses on the side street."

Duerr, who has been working on the matter of what he calls "pedestrian friendly signs" for two years, said city council's reasoning for refusing the signs is a complete

CORRECTIONS

Due to incorrect information provided to Charlevoix Courier, it was stated in the "Best of the Best," page 10 of the Dec. 31 edition of Charlevoix Courier that the Oktoberfest was brought to Charlevoix by Mick and Lori Randall. The festival was sponsored by St. Mary Parish's fun and fellowship committee.

The proposed sanitation transfer station story, which appeared on Page 10 of the Jan. 7 Charlevoix Courier incorrectly stated that the station is proposed for Charlevoix Township when it is actually proposed for Hayes Township.

Due to reporter error it was stated in the Jan. 7 edition of Charlevoix Courier that Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater took office after defeating Milo Sumner. It should have read that he defeated Philo Sumner.

BENJAMIN J. GOHS, EDITOR

County roads waiting on Washington

Hoping for help from president-elect Barack Obama's economic stimulus plan

CHRISTINA ROHN
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

The Charlevoix County Road Commission is waiting on Washington before moving forward on three large projects this year worth more than $9.4 million.

The road commission said it's looking to do road rehabilitation for both Ellsworth Road and Boyne City/Charlevoix Road, as well as new construction on a maintenance garage on Beaver Island.

Patrick Harmon, manager of the road commission, said he is hoping that Charlevoix County will get a piece of the $775 billion U.S. economic stimulus plan, which president-elect Barack Obama is expected to propose within the first months of his presidency, to fund its projects.

"I want to be ready here — if we can get these projects done with that stimulus package it would be huge to Charlevoix County, to our businesses and to our taxpayers," Harmon said.

Obama's stimulus plan, if passed, would be a combination of tax cuts ($1,000 for couples and $500 for individuals) and infrastructure spending.

According to the Associated Press, the nation's governors are pushing a wish list of $136 billion in job-producing public works projects — mainly road and bridge repairs.

Obama told the Associated Press recently that his plan would "make the single largest new investment in our national infrastructure since President Eisenhower established the Interstate Highway System in the 1950s."

Harmon said this plan could be a great relief to their road commission as well as taxpayers.

"There's talk of the stimulus package being 100 percent (for project funding) — if that's the case, we don't have to use our millage funding," he said.

In fall of last year, residents of Charlevoix County approved a county-wide millage that would fund road construction, including repaving and black top.

Harmon said he is still unclear as to how everything will shake out, but is hopeful that Obama's plan will give the county a much-needed boost.

"Who knows how this will turn out, if it's 100 percent, it's a real sweet deal," he said. "If this stimulus package doesn't happen, (the projects) are going to have to fall back on the millage."

The road commission is hoping to complete three projects in 2009, which include the rehabilitation of 13.65 miles of Boyne City/Charlevoix Road between the Boyne City limit and Western Avenue. They have plans to widen the road's two lanes by one foot each (from 11 feet to 12 feet), adding four-to-eight-foot paved shoulders. This total project cost is expected to be $6,826,800.

The Ellsworth Road project is estimated to cost $1,879,400. It would encompass 3.79 miles of the road between the Charlevoix/Antrim county line and the East Jordan westerly city limit. This road would also be widened from 11 feet to 12 feet for each lane, with three-to-eight-foot paved shoulders.

The road commission is also proposing to rebuild a maintenance garage on Beaver Island, which would be between 9,000-10,000 square feet, and would cost around $760,000. The current building is more than 80 years old, and is around 2,000 square feet.

Shirley Roloff, Charlevoix County commissioner, said she believes the Beaver Island garage is desperately needed.

"We've been looking at this (project) for 10 years, so when I saw this (proposal), I was pleased," she said.

Harmon agreed that something needed to be done on the island, and soon.

"That building was there in the '20s — it's very, very small — we outgrew that building 15 years ago," he said. "It's in rough shape; I'm embarrassed by it."

Charlevoix resident John Haggard made a proposal to the road commission board to consider paving Ellsworth and the Boyne/City Charlevoix roads with concrete instead of asphalt to stimulate the local economy.

"I know (concrete) is possibly more expensive than blacktop, but you've also got St. Marys (Cement) here — we're talking local dollars and local manufacturing to take care of the locals," he said. "There's a chance here to reduce oil, go more green and employ locals."

Keith Ogden, Charlevoix County road commissioner, said there were several problems with this proposal.

"(Concrete) basically doubles the material costs — you're upping the cost significantly," he said. "The problem with concrete is that at the 10-year mark, 12 at the latest, you get joint failure, so you run into a maintenance problem, and it's a big problem — concrete doesn't give, it collapses."

"For up here, we don't think concrete on the road is a viable alternative ... I think asphalt is the way to go."

Doug Way, chairman of the Charlevoix County Road Commission, said this discussion wasn't over just yet.

"I want to thank John (Haggard) for his idea — I like it, I like what you're saying," he said. "We'll continue to look at this."

Guard rail on drawbridge repaired

NOAH FOWLE
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

One of the Charlevoix drawbridge's guardrails lay broken along the sidewalk early Monday morning. Although the cause of the damage to the north-east guardrail is still unknown, plans to repair it are already in place.

Tom Irvin, the maintenance superintendent for the north region of MDOT, said because the bridge was not open to regular maritime traffic the repairs are not a high priority.

"I know that it has been damaged, and it's been turned over to the state wide crew," he said. "If this had happened in season, it would already be fixed."

Neither MDOT officials nor Charlevoix Police received reports of criminal damage to the guardrail or of an automobile accident along the bridge.

"We don't know anything about it," said police chief Gerard Doan. "It could have been the wind."

Irvin said he had no details on the damage, but did not rule out weather as the cause.

"It could be weather related," he said. Now fixed, one of the Charlevoix drawbridge's guardrails lay broken along the sidewalk early last week.

OPINIONS yours & ours

Failed marriages a blight on humanity

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Stephen Guthrie

It's a sad sight, a sorry state of affairs. The parade of failed marriages continues marching through our community. It is particularly frustrating for a counselor, because too often the couples who come to counseling wait until things have gotten so bad that one has already given up. And once a husband or wife has crossed that line there's seemingly nothing left to do with that marriage but fill out the death certificate.

When we sit and reconstruct what went wrong I find a predictable pattern that unfolds in six steps.

In the first step, one or the other begins to behave differently in a way that brings tension into the union. It might be a flirtatious wife, a husband gambling away his paycheck, or either of them becoming so argumentative as to border on emotional abuse.

Thrown in a pinch of financial stress in the family budget, plus a dash of poor communications, and you have a recipe for a marriage in distress.

Now at step two, tension builds until tears, accusations, and slamming doors become the norm in the household.

Husbands and wives become like strangers. Common goals, and even common courtesy, fall by the wayside.

At this point, if this marriage was a body in so much physical pain someone would take it to a doctor, maybe even the emergency room.

People seem to have an amazing capacity to endure emotional pain, and those who would rush to the ER for a hangnail will live with heartache, sorrow, and depression until their marriage is mush.

At step three in our predictable pattern, the spouse whose behavior did not change becomes alarmed.

They see where this is heading, and it frightens them. They begin to sound the alarm bell with their wavering spouse, but because the quality and quantity of meaningful communication is so poor what is meant as a warning comes across as an accusation.

The spouse whose behavior changed digs in, levels a few accusations of their own, and makes it clear they don't see a problem.

"Get over it" is their attitude, and the clear message is they are not going to inconvenience themselves in the least in the interest of marital health.

Somewhere in step three the concerned spouse begs the wavering spouse to go with them to counseling or to visit with their pastor. That overture is often rejected out-of-hand. Counselors and pastors are judgmental and might ask me to stop what I'm doing, reasons the wavering spouse.

And besides, counselors cost money. I know you're upset, they tell the concerned spouse, but things aren't that bad.

Next thing you know it's step six, and light bulbs are popping on above the head of the wavering spouse who did not want to invest in saving the marriage. Yikes, this must be serious, they suddenly realize, and this has the potential to cost me a lot of money.

They suddenly see themselves working two jobs to pay child support and living in a little apartment.

And suddenly, they don't want to lose their marriage. What to do? "Honey," they ask, "is it too late to go to counseling?"

The sad reality is it probably is too late. Typically, the newly enlightened spouse sits in my office highly motivated to do whatever it takes to salvage the union. They weep, they beg, they bargain.

But from my chair I see the emptiness in the eyes of the spouse who has given up. Somewhere deep in their heart a switch has been flipped and the lights are out on this marriage.

They have come to counseling not to try any heroic measure to save their union, but to have me tell their spouse it's all over.

And that is a sad sight, a sorry state of affairs.

When you read "The Origin of Species", you clearly see its author, not expressing an opinion, but accumulating mountains of evidence.

The opinion of a hundred creationists does not balance the evidence accumulated by Darwin and thousands of investigators over more than 150 years. Again, choosing experts is a serious business.

When I crossed that Iowa bridge and saw what appeared to me to be nearly miraculous, only to have an expert explain that I did not know enough to provide a simple explanation, I learned a serious lesson about the difference between opinion and evidence. Evidence wins, every time.

Consider two concerns about which strong opinions are commonly expressed: Global warming and evolution.

It is extremely difficult to find a climatologist, someone who has a lifetime trying to understand climate, who has not concluded that the earth is warming rapidly and that human activity is at least part of the cause.

It is not difficult at all to hear from politicians, commentators and concerned citizens, a wide range of opinion.

Climate change is harder to see directly than is anchor ice, but the conclusions of climatologists collecting and analyzing evidence overwhelmingly point to rapid climate change. The opinion, loudly and effectively expressed by one hundred Rush Limbaugh's does not balance the evidence from one serious climatologist. We need to be careful who we choose as experts.

Those penny-headed liberal scientists actually know a great deal about how the world works. It is essentially impossible to find a serious, well-trained biologist who does not acknowledge that evolution by natural selection explains the bewildering variety of organisms that populate the earth. It is not difficult to find people with very strong opinions about how the world came to be.

It is impossible to read Charles Darwin's careful lifetime of gathered evidence without accepting the broad outlines of his conclusions.

RESOURCE CENTER APPRECIATIVE

Editor:

The holiday season is behind us but the spirit of goodwill shown by the Northern Michigan community will long be remembered by all of us at the Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan (WRC). The WRC Harvest Food and Supply Drive, which benefits the Safe Home, brought forth an outpouring of donations of non-perishable food and household goods. Through the generosity of local service groups, schools, churches, businesses, clubs, and individuals the Safe Home pantry is stocked with food and supplies, and many families in need have received holiday gifts and cheer.

The WRC offers the only shelter for survivors of domestic abuse in Emmet, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Otsego, and Antrim counties, providing emergency shelter 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Last year alone, 177 women and children took refuge at Safe Home to escape the danger of physical, emotional, and/or verbal abuse. An average of 7 people stayed at the Safe Home each day of the year.

Over 7,100 complete meals were provided to residents in addition to clothing, toiletries, diapers, and all other daily needs. Local support received from the community during the Harvest Food and Supply Drive, and throughout the year, plays a critical role in the WRC's ability to provide these vital services to survivors of domestic abuse and their children.

Thank-you to everyone who has given so generously to make a positive difference in our community through your gifts to the WRC. We greatly appreciate your support.

Sincerely,
Jamie Winters

Snowmobile trail maintenance approved

A bipartisan plan that will help maintain and improve the grooming operations on the state's snowmobile trails was approved by the Senate last Thursday and sent to the governor, said Sen. Jason Allen, chair of the Senate Commerce and Tourism Committee, who sponsored a key bill in the package.

Allen said the Michigan Snowmobile Association believes its members will be unable to continue grooming operations unless there is an increase in the trail permit fee.

Effective July 1, 2009, the current snowmobile registration fee will go from $22 to $30 and the fine for operating a snowmobile without a registration will rise from $50 to $200.

Senate Bill 1489 specifies that $5 from each registration fee may be used to purchase lands, lease lands, and secure easements to expand trails. Under Senate Bill 1490, sponsored by Sen. James Banta, D-Bay City, $8 from each registration shall be deposited in a new snowmobile trail easement account.

Snowmobiling is an integral part of tourism in northern Michigan and throughout the state, Allen said.

By protecting the trails we have, and expanding them for the future, we are making a wise investment.

Maintaining these trails properly will attract visitors and enhance the safety of everyone using them.

Ice forms under water: fact or fiction?

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

For most of my working life I have walked to work. We lived about two miles from Luther College, and I usually walked that distance, daily, summer and winter.

My route included a bridge across the Upper Iowa River, a medium sized stream with areas where water flowed a few feet deep over rocky shoals.

One very cold January morning, my look at the river caused me a serious double take.

The rocks visible in the bottom of the stream were covered with several inches of ice. I stared in disbelief.

I knew that ice is lighter than water and that bodies of water freeze from the top down, not from the bottom up.

I grew up in Minnesota, with ten thousand lakes, and every one of them was covered with winter ice.

I knew that ice floated. If someone had told me that ice formed on the bottom of streams, I would have doubted them.

If I had been shown a picture of such ice, I might have thought it had been doctored in some way. However, it is difficult to doubt the direct evidence of one's eyes.

I rushed to the Biology Department to report what I viewed as something close to miraculous.

The resident aquatic biologist said calmly, "Oh, yes, that's called anchor ice. It forms in very cold weather when the rocks are well below freezing temperature."

My miracle event turned out to have a very ordinary explanation by someone who had studied lakes and streams more than I had.

I have taken the story of anchor ice as a sort of parable of how we may misunderstand or misinterpret events without some expert help.

An expert in this case is not a powerful person with a strong opinion, it is someone who has actually studied a problem or situation, collected evidence and come to a conclusion. Evidence really should trump opinion, even if the opinion is expressed very loudly or very publicly.

Consider two concerns about which strong opinions are commonly expressed: Global warming and evolution.

It is extremely difficult to find a climatologist, someone who has a lifetime trying to understand climate, who has not concluded that the earth is warming rapidly and that human activity is at least part of the cause.

Horse Liniment Erases Pain

HALLEAH, FL. — An ingredient often used to treat inflammation in racehorses' legs, is now back on the market in its original doctor recommended formula.

According to a national drug store survey, the formula at one time became so popular that it rose to the top of pharmacy sales for topical pain relievers. But the company marketing the product at the time changed the formula and sales plummeted. One of the inventors of the original formula has brought it back to the market under the trade name ARTH ARREST and says it can relieve pain for millions.

ARTH ARREST works by a dual mechanism whereby one ingredient relieves pain immediately, while a second ingredient seeks out and destroys the pain messenger signal before it can be sent to the brain. Considered a medical miracle by some, the ARTH ARREST formula is useful in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

ARTH ARREST is available in a convenient roll-on applicator at pharmacies without a prescription or call 1-800-339-1301. Now at: Central Rexall Drug Store 301 Bridge St. 547-2424

SUBMITTED BY ZITA WINN

Buddy the Round Lake white goose passed away earlier last week. Buddy spent the last eight springs, summers and falls floating around Round Lake, peering residents and tourists for a leaf of lettuce or just a little attention. Because he did not fly, and survival on the lake became too tough, Buddy wintered at a farm in Atwood. His best friend and caretaker Dave Guanci would catch and move Buddy back and forth from Atwood to Round Lake and kept Buddy fed; recruiting helpers to continue his feeding schedule if he had to leave town. Dave lovingly spoiled Buddy by providing a float in his boathouse if Buddy wanted to get out of the water and there was a feeding bowl suspended within easy reach, just above water level. Buddy had an unusually loud honk that was easily recognizable. He didn't like horns of any type and felt the need to honk back at every horn he heard. The Emerald Isle and Beaver Islander horns signaling departure especially annoyed him, but any car alarm honking downtown also got a return honk from Buddy. Many boaters were aware of his horn issue and would playfully honk at him to show his talent to their friends. Buddy knew his name, so if you called to him across the lake—Dave just had to whistle—he would actually make a wake in the "no wake zone" to get to you ... and the food you held. Buddy was a very interesting character if you took the time to get to know him, which many did. It is believed that Buddy was probably just dropped off in Charlevoix one day eight years ago—lucky for him and us.

Suit against old Norwood board dropped

Suit against new Norwood board to be filed

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The proverbial dust had not even settled on the settlement between the Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety, the Wynkoops and the Norwood Township Board over the so-called third lawsuit before more litigation was in the works.

Spurred by what he called a blatant violation of his rights, Wayne Wynkoop felt his most recent application for a special use permit to allow his proposed Norwood Limestone Mine should have been reviewed by the proper authorities.

"We are in the process of filing against the township in Grand Rapids federal court," Wynkoop said. "By them deciding not to process our special use permit, they have violated my 14th Amendment right to due process."

Wynkoop submitted his most recent special use permit application in recent weeks, but it was decided during a closed session meeting of the Norwood Township Board's Dec. 20 special meeting, that the board would not allow Wynkoop's application to be submitted until his appeals court cases were decided or dropped.

Norwood Township Supervisor Frank Hamilton said, while he was unaware of Wynkoop's plan to file suit, the decision not to view his application was based on an opinion by township attorney Bryan Graham.

"It was almost common sense," Hamilton said. "We'll process his application, he just has to drop the appeals."

According to Norwood Township's own zoning rules and regulations, the township is allowed to amend, supplement or change the ordinance, following a recommendation of the planning commission, which apparently was not done prior to the Dec. 20 decision to reject Wynkoop's application from being reviewed.

According to planning commission vice-chairman Tom Mielke never happened.

"The planning commission had nothing to do with this," Mielke said.

Norwood Township Zoning Administrator Janet Person, in an e-mailed response to questions, stated that she knows of no language in the township's zoning which says you don't have to review a permit application.

"They're acting as though they amended the ordinance, but they didn't get a recommendation from the planning commission," Wynkoop said.

"By their action they have really violated their own ordinance."

Person said every permit is reviewed for administrative correctness under the ordinance.

"This could take minutes to days to complete," she stated. "I did not decide not to review it prior to Dec. 20. That decision was taken out of my hands by the township board, via a letter from their attorney."

This most recent threat to litigate comes just days after the Jan. 6 dismissal of the third lawsuit against Wynkoop which was brought by the citizens group against Wynkoop, his wife and the township for alleged environmental violations including allegations of draining wetlands, flooding wetlands, and putting Norwood residents' health in jeopardy.

However, the case was dismissed after the citizens group made a deal with Wynkoop that, if he sent a letter to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources claiming he would consider an offer to sell them his land, they would drop the case.

"It's beyond me," Wynkoop said. "They were saying that I was putting everyone in danger and destroying the wildlife, but all it took was me sending a letter to the DNR to get the case dropped."

Wynkoop still has two appeals of lower court rulings waiting for a decision on whether to be heard by the Michigan Supreme Court.

However, due to the high court's case load, it is possible the cases will never be heard.

High school boys' basketball: BIG, BIG WIN for Rayders

A long road ahead, for sure. Sull, Charlevoix's 62-59 victory over Traverse City St. Francis on Tuesday, Jan. 6 was about as big as they come in January in high school boys' basketball.

Weston Bryan scored nine of his 22 points in the fourth quarter as the Rayders knocked off their rivals to the south in an early season showdown. And, in the process, Charlevoix took over sole possession of first place in the Lake Michigan Conference, and gave itself a heaping helping of confidence.

"I think we were struggling a little bit early (in the season), trying to figure out who we are and learning how much effort we have to put into what it takes to be good," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "The last week of Christmas break the kids kind of realized we have to do something a little different."

St. Francis entered the game 6-0 overall and ranked No. 2 in the Associated Press Class C state poll. Among the Gladiators' early season victims was Class A Rochester, 49-31; Class A Alpena, 63-31; and defending Class C state runner-up Flint Beecher, 62-39.

As it stands today, the Rayders — an honorable mention in the state poll — are 4-1 overall and 2-0 in the league. St. Francis dropped into a second-place tie with East Jordan and Boyne City, both of whom lost their respective first league games on Tuesday as well.

"I think it really helps our kids because it shows them that if we play together and work hard, we can have a really good season," Haske said.

Charlevoix led by as many as 10 points in the first half and maintained a slim advantage throughout much of the second half. St. Francis seized a 52-50 lead with about three minutes remaining, forcing the Rayders to dig deep.

What they found was vintage Charlevoix: An uncanny ability to emerge victorious in a pressure-packed nail-biter. Among Bryan's down-the-stretch heroics was a three-point play.

"Weston Bryan hit a couple big shots and we just kind of hung in there," Haske said. "I thought our kids showed great poise tonight. We knew they weren't going to go away. Our kids did a great job of responding and staying in the game."

Justin Friske added 14 points, Thomas Parrish had nine and Brock Yenglin added eight for the Rayders, who are scheduled to play at St. Francis on Wednesday, Feb. 11. Friske and Yenglin grabbed five rebounds each.

Holden Greiner and Cory Williams scored 16 points each and Ian Sheldon had 12 for the Gladiators.

St. Francis won the JV game, 43-33.

Stingrays bring home trophy

The Charlevoix Stingrays started the new year out with a second-place trophy from the Harbor Springs Invitational on Saturday, Jan. 3.

The coach said it was truly a team effort by every swimmer to take home the team's first competition trophy.

Every single swimmer scored points and received individual awards for their swimming. Placing in the top three in their events include Alex Gooch (14), Kristen Gooch (15), Chrystal Schenanski (17), Casey Riley (16), Christina Baruti (7).

MHSAA 2008-09 Scholar-Athlete Award

The applicants for the Michigan High School Athletic Association's Scholar-Athlete Award for the 2008-09 school year have been announced.

• Beaver Island - Caitlin Boyle

• Charlevoix - Weston A Bryan, Marnie Christina Greene, Michael Heckendorn, Ellise Noel Smolenyak and Katherine Sue Withrow

The program, which has been recognizing student-athletes since the 1989-90 school year, will honor 32 individuals who represent their member school in at least one sport in which the Association sponsors a post-season tournament. Farm Bureau Insurance underwrites the Scholar-Athlete Award, and presents a $1,000 scholarship to each individual.

Scholarships are awarded proportionately by school classification and the number of student-athletes involved in those classes; and two at-large honorees will also be selected. A total of 12 scholarships will be awarded to Class A student-athletes, 6 female and 6 male; 8 scholarships will be awarded to Class B student-athletes, 4 female and 4 male; 6 scholarships will be awarded to Class C student-athletes, 3 female and 3 male; and 4 scholarships will be awarded to Class D student-athletes, 2 female and 2 male.

A school could submit as many applications as there are scholarships available in their classification. Of 504 schools which submitted applicants, 63 submitted the maximum allowed.

This year, 2008 applications were received.

All will be presented with certificates commemorating their achievement. Additional Scholar-Athlete information, including a complete list of scholarship nominees, can be found on the MHSAA Web site at the following address: <http://www.mhsaa.com/recognition/sahome.htm>.

The applications will be judged next week by a 69-member committee of school coaches, counselors, faculty members, administrators and board members from MHSAA member schools, from which the 120 finalists and 32 scholarship recipients will be selected. Finalists will be announced on February 3. Class C and D scholarship recipients will be announced on February 17; Class B scholarship recipients will be announced on February 24; and Class A scholarship recipients will be announced on March 3. All announcements will be made on the MHSAA Web site.

To honor the 32 Scholar-Athlete Award recipients, a ceremony will take place during half-time of the Class C Boys Basketball Finals at the Breslin Student Events Center in East Lansing on March 28.

To be eligible for the award, students must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.50 (on a 4.0 scale), and have previously won a varsity letter in at least one sport in which the MHSAA sponsors a post-season tournament. Students were also asked to respond to a series of short essay questions, submit two letters of recommendation and submit a 500-word essay on the importance of sportsmanship in educational athletics.

Farm Bureau Insurance, one of Michigan's major insurers, has a statewide force of over 400 agents serving more than 380,000 Michigan policyholders. Besides providing life, home auto, farm, business and retirement insurance, the company also sponsors lifesaving, real-time Doppler weather tracking systems in several Michigan communities.

The MHSAA is a private, not-for-profit corporation of voluntary membership by over 1,600 public and private senior high schools and junior high/middle schools which exists to develop common rules for athletic eligibility and competition. No government funds or tax dollars support the MHSAA, which was the first such association nationally to not accept membership dues or tournament entry fees from schools. Member schools which enforce these rules are permitted to participate in MHSAA tournaments, which attract approximately 1.6 million spectators each year.

Prep boys' basketball: Not let down for Rayders

STEVE FOLEY
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER
BOYNE CITY — Any potential sign of a letdown was quickly put to rest Thursday by Charlevoix.

Fresh off a big Lake Michigan Conference victory over Traverse City St. Francis just two days prior, Charlevoix went back to work and topped Boyne City, 66-41, in a scrappy, workmanlike affair at the Boyne City High School gym.

The Rayders, 5-1 overall, 3-0 league and an honorable mention selection in the Associated Press Class C state poll, used their height advantage in the middle as they scored on numerous high percentage shots and putbacks.

"We all just worked hard and we knew we all had to stay focused after our win over St. Francis," said Charlevoix senior Justin Friske, who scored a game-high 20 points. "We couldn't let our heads get to us and it's always a good battle when we play Boyne."

Battling a defensive-minded Rambler team and struggling early from the outside, the Rayders quickly went inside for a spark.

"We were struggling early on," Charlevoix coach Keith Haske said. "Any type of perimeter shot wasn't falling and every timeout we said we had to get the ball to Justin (Friske) because we knew he was going to be on."

Friske scored the final two baskets of the first quarter inside to put the Rayders in front 15-5, then added two more buckets from within five feet as Charlevoix's advantage increased to 19-7 early in the second.

"Having an inside presence was key because our shots weren't falling early," Friske said. "Our coaches just told us to keep grinding it out down low because we knew they (Boyne City) didn't have a lot of height."

Thomas Parrish connected on a 3-pointer to give the Rayders a 22-12 advantage midway through the second. The triple opened a 9-0 run, which included two more Friske baskets, as the Rayders took a 29-16 half-time lead.

"I was really pleased," Haske said. "The thing we've been harping on with these kids is every time you step on the court is you have to play to a certain level of competition and I was really pleased with that here."

"We competed hard right from the opening tip and didn't have any letdown defensively."

Applying their signature full-court defensive pressure, the Rayders went on a 12-0 run midway through the third quarter to increase their advantage to 48-24. At the end of the third, the Rayders were firmly in command, 52-29.

"We're getting to the point now hopefully where every time we step onto the court, we're doing so with a certain mindset and we weren't doing that early in the year," Haske said. "That's been our biggest thing, but I was happy with this game. We just wore them down after a while."

Weston Bryan finished with 14 points, seven rebounds and five steals for the Rayders, while Parrish added 10 points. Friske also collected nine rebounds, while Brock Yinglin had five rebounds.

The Rayders, who had every player on the roster score at least a point, kept the foot on the gas in the fourth quarter and connected on 7-of-12 free throws.

Charlevoix shot 15-of-25 from the line, while Boyne City was just 8-of-25 from the stripe.

"That's (free throw shooting) clearly a problem and it's been addressed in practice," Boyne coach John Hertel said. "We came into this game shooting 52 percent on the season. It's something we didn't correct here and it's a big point of emphasis right now."

For the Ramblers, 2-3, 1-2, Ryan Musser had 12 points and eight rebounds, while Tyler Urman added nine points and Trevor Kruzel, seven points and six rebounds.

"We got off to somewhat of a slow start," Hertel said. "Especially on the offensive end and give Charlevoix credit because they play good defense. They know what they're doing and they do it well."

"We have to keep looking to continue to adjust and I thought we did a good job of that in the second half. We felt there were certain things we could do, but Charlevoix did a good job of taking those things away."

Charlevoix won the JV game, 70-52. For the Rayders, Joe Filipiak had 18 points, while Matthew Klooster added 17. Travis Lapeer and Jay Redman had 12 points apiece for Boyne City.

What could possibly be blooming in January?

Petals, Charlevoix's newest flower shop, of course

After working for some of the most prestigious hotels in Las Vegas, Kari Davis chose to bring her design expertise to a more family-friendly atmosphere.

With 16 years of experience arranging flowers for everything from funerals and weddings to making bouquets for amorous couples, Davis now has her own flower shop.

"I was born and raised in Vegas," she said. "We had three young children and wanted to raise them in a different place and we were actually here on vacation in 2000 and my husband saw an ad ... and he got the job and we moved here five weeks later."

Davis worked at a couple local flower shops until earlier this winter when she opened Petals in Birdie Whitley's old beauty shop next to the Clothing Company and across the street from the Masonic Lodge and Subway restaurant.

"I absolutely love it and I enjoy working with brides," she said. "Weddings are my specialty—that's what I do best."

Davis said her work is very rewarding.

"I just love having my own business," she said. "We do silk arrangements, custom floral arrangements and I have trucks coming in every day so if there is something they're looking for, we are happy to get it for them."

she said.

Petals also delivers as far away as Petoskey, East Jordan and Ellsworth in addition to shipping across the country for Internet orders.

Petals is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturdays.

Davis employs two, Janice Hilligan, the store manager, and Davis' father, who Davis said is a jack of all trades and an ace with a mop and broom.

"We have a fun crew," she said. "The people who work here make it very fun and different."

In addition to flora of all kinds, Davis will also soon be offering flower design classes.

Be sure to check out her Web site www.charlevoixflorist.com for information on classes, specials and more.

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union paid a bonus dividend in excess of $212,000 to its membership on Dec. 31, 2008.

This is the second time in three years that the Bay Winds Board of Directors has declared a bonus dividend to its member owners.

"Members are more than just customers, they are our lifeblood," said David Leusink, President and CEO. "This is our way of saying thanks for our members support and participation."

The bonus dividend was based on earnings from qualifying share accounts and/or interest paid on applicable loans in 2008. The active participation of borrowers and savers created a 2008 above and beyond expectations.

"Partnership and participation is the backbone of our strength," Leusink said. "As you might expect, response to the bonus dividend has been very positive, given the state of our economy. There is financial strength in numbers; this dividend underscores that principal."

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union was founded in 1969, and today serves the residents of Charlevoix, Emmet and northern Antrim counties.

Bay Winds Federal Credit Union has more than 20,000 members and $95 million in assets.

As a not-for-profit financial cooperative, Bay Winds Federal Credit Union is committed to investing in community and the prudent management of risk. This philosophy has enabled Bay Winds to grow and provide members lower loan rates, higher savings dividends and personalized service that differentiates Bay Winds from other types of financial institutions. This is the credit union philosophy of sharing the wealth, at work.

So far, Charlevoix has one official historic property: The train depot at Depot Beach, which was designated as such in February, 2007.

However, Adams said, there are many others in the area which she would like to see protected.

Properties must qualify under state guidelines as historic.

For example, they must be at least 50 years old, though age alone does not always determine a structure's historical significance.

According to Spencer, a building, structure, object, site or district must have association with significant people or events, have unique design or construction and be significant at the local or state level.

He also said the structure or site cannot have been drastically changed from its original character.

Following their success in getting the train depot's status, the committee attempted to have the downtown business district made a historical district, but it was determined that too many of the structures have undergone significant changes to qualify under state guidelines.

Spencer was careful to point out that he is merely acting as an informational resource to the committees and explained that he is not working to pass any historic districts in the city.

"It is very important that those buildings we have left do not continue to be demolished," Adams said. "We must preserve the buildings for future generations and maintain the quality of life and quaintness of the City of Charlevoix."

Though it may sound innocuous to some, Adams said she knows some property owners will not be in favor of having their building labeled as historic.

"We're not trying to shove anything down anyone's throat," she said. "We've had a lot of interest both ways. But, I'd say we've had more local support that opposition."

Adams added, "We're not trying to take away property rights; we're trying to work with owners to help them protect and preserve assets."

Both the opinions of property owners and the public in general will be taken into consideration before any properties are labeled as historic. And, Spencer said, a property can be designated as historic even if the property owner does not wish it to be.

"We want to hear from both sides," Adams added. The committees will continue to meet on a monthly basis and a public hearing, which has yet to be scheduled, will occur this summer to determine the rate of interest, if any, on designating an undetermined number of Earl Young homes as historical properties.

Spencer can be reached by calling 547-3265. The study committee meets at 5:30 p.m., the first Wednesday of each month in city council chambers.

The historic district commission meets at 5 p.m., the first Wednesday, every other month beginning with March 4, in city council chambers.

This house at the corner of Clinton and Park in Charlevoix is one of many designed by famed architect Earl Young. Now that that train depot at Depot Beach has been named a historic property through local efforts, some of the areas Earl Young homes could be next. The Charlevoix Historic District Commission and the Charlevoix Historic District Study Committee are working currently to determine whether the structures will qualify and if there is sufficient public desire to designate them as historic.

farce. "Council wants very much to come up with ideas to deal with this issue," said Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. "Council's always been very pro business ... doing anything we can do to promote business, but this one kind of ties our hands with an administrative nightmare."

Carlson said that, since the highway advertising act prohibits off-premises signs which can be read from a highway, council is reluctant to allow the Park Avenue businesses to post their sign.

"The highway advertising act prohibits off-premises signs that are readable ... by motorists driving down the highway," Duerr said. "The signs we're proposing are small pedestrian signs that would not be read by motorists, that could not be read by motorists."

Duerr added that, while city council will not allow the smaller pedestrian signs, they have approved much larger banners—for events such as blood banks.

"(They) claim that those will not violate the highway advertising act despite the fact that they are intended to be read by motorists."

ists because the placement of these banners will be within the highway right of way and not adjacent."

However, said Duerr, a retired lawyer, this is not legal.

"They have no authority to authorize encroachment on the right of way by the placement of non traffic control signs within the right of way," he said. "They seem to ignore that. They are unusually sensitive to our small pedestrian-friendly signs and the risk that the transportation department might seek to regulate them but blithely ignore the fact that they are authorizing encroachment within the highway."

Duerr's claims seem to be upheld by state officials. According to Michigan Department of Transportation highway advertising specialist Melissa J. Staffeld, placing an advertising sign in the highway right of way "is considered encroachment and is illegal ... There are MDOT approved signs that you will see within the right of way, but those are placed by MDOT or placed by an entity contracted through MDOT."

However, Spencer said the law deals with permanent signs and not necessarily temporary banners.

"The city has been allowing those banners," he said. "And, to my knowledge, the city has not been called on those banners they've been putting up for many, many years."

Spencer said the other distinction is that the city's banners are generally for nonprofit events such as blood banks, and not advertising for private businesses.

Duerr said he challenges the city to get a legal opinion that says the city retains the right to encroach on the highway right of way.

"No careful attorney would not get such an opinion," Duerr added. Carlson said side street business owners will get some relief in the way of kiosks which will be placed in the downtown area at an as-of-yet undetermined time.

The economic platform is changing quickly and it is critical that we are poised and prepared to compete in the new economy." Lori Meeder, Director, Entrepreneurial Division, NLEA.

Cold weather doesn't stop them

Charlevoix jogger Carl Gray refused to let near zero temperatures stop him from his daily routine. Although Gray did say he shortened his Jan. 16 run to five miles due to the icy winds. Gray is training for several local marathons this summer.

Untold story coming to the silver screen

Polar bears of Michigan fought in World War I

BENJAMIN GOHS

The war ended, but they kept fighting... and dying.

Thousands of men from all over Michigan fought in a little known conflict near the end of World War I in the darkest depths of Russian wasteland, and one former Detroit is working to tell their story.

"My grandfather I always knew was in World War I and that he went to some place really different than other soldiers," said documentarian, writer, director and actress Pamela Peak, now of California. "While most of them were going to France and over to Europe, he and 5,500 Michigan soldiers were shipped to northern Russia and they didn't find out they were going to go until after they got to England and they saw long underwear on the ship and said 'What's this all about?'"

The men, known as Polar Bears, were sent to Archangel, Russia, to quell the Bolshevik, or communist, revolution which began when the communists broke off from being an ally to the force

Charlevoix schools could face $1.7 M shortfall

Public input sought on budget woes

BENJAMIN GOHS

EDITOR
Going into their 2009/2010 budget discussions, the Charlevoix Public Schools fund balance was $1.7 million, of which $300,000 to $350,000 will go to operating expenses.

Worse yet, all this does not include the enormous shortfall expected for next year's budget.

"We are looking at anywhere from 800,000 to a million dollar deficit and that is based on two things one is a net decrease in students by about 45 students and that equates to about alone 379,000 decrease in state aid and by all accounts we're anticipating a decrease in state aid next year.

Charlevoix schools, like many others, are simply graduating more students than they are enrolling.

"We have tracked our students and we lose very few students to other school districts," Janek said. "The ones we lose leave the area because of the economy leave the area or leave the state. Our enrollment has been declining over the last six years. Currently we're about 200 less students than we were."

Along with more than 400 Michigan school districts facing declining enrollment.

The state aid fund is in a $38 million deficit. The projected deficit for the next fiscal year which begins in June is more than $246 million.

"Our revenue is created by two sources: property taxes and sales taxes," Janek said. "When you experience a decrease in those, you have a shortfall in revenue."

Worse than not receiving revenue.

First round of cuts to bldg. dept.

County seeks to hedge department's looming deficit

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Like enormous dominoes one by one the faltering economy is knocking flat stores, factories and entire industries.

People either unemployed or unsure about their current jobs are less likely to build or renovate a home, which translates into fewer jobs for contractors, which means fewer permits purchased from the building department, which means less revenue for the department.

"The lack of building activity means there are not the funds necessary to support the department," said Charlevoix County Building and Safety Department head Ken Doty. "This is so that we don't go into a deficit like we did last year."

With two positions slated to be slashed from the Charlevoix County Building and Safety Department, Doty and the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners are looking to take care of potential financial shortfalls before they happen.

The building department, which had employed seven full and part-time individuals, is losing a part-time electrical inspector and a full-time building inspector/plan reviewer which could save the department as much as $75,000 this year.

"We've got to do something about this deficit we're operating under," said chairman of the board Chris Christensen (R-District Two). "The reason the building department has been able to operate in a deficit for the first couple of months of every year is because up until they started a positive fund balance."

Several months ago the county commissions set up a 90 day plan with the building and safety department to track the department's progress in staying financially afloat during this economic downturn which has sorely affected new construction projects and thereby decreasing revenue to the office.

However, Christensen said, since the department when into a negative fund balance last spring and had to be taken into the county's fiscal fold, the department no longer has that ability.

"At this point it becomes a gamble," he said. "The significant drop off in revenue is where the concern comes from, from our point of view."

Christensen added, "In 2008 we budgeted for $704,000 in revenue but we actually only got $646,000."

But, Doty said, while the department budgeted that amount, they typically spend less.

"I know you guys have been very good about that," Christensen said, but added, "Given the historical data and numbers here I think we need to brace for the worst. We need to shock this into alignment; we have to get a balanced budget."

Just take a look at neighboring counties and one will see similar moves—Antrim County has 24,299 residents as estimated in 2007 by the Northwest Michigan Council of Governments. Charlevoix was thought to have 26,181 at the time.

"We used to have nine full-time employees and two part-time (employees)," said Antrim County Coordinator Pete Garwood. "About a year-and-a-half ago we knocked it down by two when two employees were eligible for retirement."

Garwood said due to the faltering economy and subsequent downturn in permits purchased, the building department was slimmed down to five personnel.

"We're seeing the workload go down as well as the revenue," Garwood said. "We're not making enough revenue to keep that many people on and we don't have enough permit requests to keep them on."

Doty, whose department has gone from working five days a week to four days per week to save money, said these further cuts will affect his ability to provide services.

"I will be shifting responsibilities around to cover these persons," he said. "But this is going to affect my ability to serve the county. You will wait for inspections; services will suffer."

Doty added, "But, we will do our best to continue to provide those services to the best of our ability."

The building department experienced a nearly 30 percent decrease in revenue from 2007 to last year, and Doty said things do not look to get better any time soon.

While Doty understands the county must do what is right for the taxpayers, he is concerned and puzzled that his department is in the minority of county offices which are required to be self-sufficient.

"We are charged rent, we look at liability insurance, we are assessed for heat, copies and other expenses," Doty said. "The commissioners don't want to put any money into this. I can't answer why the building department has to be self-sufficient now when so many other departments are not."

Christensen said it is common in today's economy for managers to feel pressured by accountability.

"Unfortunately the building department has squandered more than a $200,000 fund balance over the last year-and-a-half, forcing the county to have to subsidize their operation. The Commission did not begin to subsidize this department until last May; when their fund balance went negative," he said. "Since then, we (the Commissioners) have so far laid off two employees with other necessary cuts that are obvious. Given the delicate nature of this issue we are being forced to examine all options in the building department including the structure and the amount of employees that are actually needed to staff this department."

Christensen added, "We are trying to hold every department accountable to the taxpayer. Unfortunately this department has been operating outside of the county's purview and we are now finally getting control."

Christensen added, "We are trying to hold every department accountable to the taxpayer. Unfortunately this department has been operating outside of the county's purview and we are now finally getting control."

OPINIONS yours & ours

Coincidence or blessing in disguise?

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

I have chapped hands, dry lips and hair with enough static that I have acquired a few stray birthday balloons. Even my hot flashes aren't keeping me warm this winter. The frigid weather is affecting my husband's hearing as well. I picked up on this when I said I was off to school and he wondered why I thought we should build a loft with a pool. He claims he can't hear as well from snow blowing everyday. This continuous blizzard of snow we've been living in has turned some of us into philosophers, hermits, deep thinkers or worse yet, deaf. Living in this arctic like winter wonderland, I've begun to ponder a bit about coincidences, consciousness, and the meaning of life.

I've thought about how life has a way of putting people in front of you that you've been thinking about or meaning to call. No need to contact someone, just think about a situation involving the person or picture yourself talking to them and "poof" they show up. Is this coincidence or thoughtful messaging we didn't know we possessed?

Divine intervention, Karma, or statistical logic—no matter what your belief system, they exist. There is a plan for all of us. We are to meet certain people at specific times in our lives and whether or not you believe in God, we will continually come across situations throughout our lifetime that we won't be able to explain or understand. I feel it's important to have faith in what happens and that things happen for a reason.

I was counseling a couple last month who were planning to wed. Interestingly enough, they knew each other when they were both camp counselors in their youth. Time passed and they went their separate ways leading full and active lives. Twenty-four years passed and the female in our story lost her son and husband to cancer. Ironically, the two camp counselors met again during a period when both of them were thinking about the good old days spent at this particular camp. Within a twenty-four period, they ended up re-connecting with the help of the Internet. When they reunited they started up their friendship where it had left off, and though they had aged they really didn't take notice. This loving couple married each other last week.

My left-brained, mathematical friends will be quick to point out that when certain events like this occur, it is a logical statistical outcome that has brought the situation together. The odds of certain events occurring at any given point in time are a math problem not coincidence. At some point when remarkable things occur, which is daily, we only seem to notice the ones that get our attention.

Math is not a subject I embraced in school and being the right-brained child I am, I feel our lives have been mapped out by genetics and the grace of God. We are free to choose the direction we take but certain people and events are put in front of us so we may act upon them. Genetically we are already programmed to act and think a certain way. It might be good old grandpa that gave you your health problems or difficulties with personal relationships. Knowing that information, you can freely choose to do things differently that may have not been available years ago.

Karma says our actions create the cycle of cause and effect. I believe this to a point but why is it when I am thinking about someone I need to see or talk with, they show up where I am or better yet give me a call. Is this a coincidence or is it a blessing in disguise? It just saved me some time looking up their number and that's significant in time management with me. Maybe we really can send messages with our minds but we aren't cognizant of it.

Elizabeth Kohler, Ross said, "There are no mistakes, no concidences. All events are blessings given to us to learn from." Now there's a thought worth pondering while you are stuck in a snow bank.

LETTERS to the editor

A BLOODY SUCCESS
Editor:

I am, once again, expressing my gratitude to the volunteers and blood donors for the American Red Cross who made the blood drive in Charlevoix their highest priority on Thursday, Jan. 15.

The winter season was very evident with bitter cold temperatures, snow and wind. However, the Community Reformed Church and staff, the Red Cross staff, the Charlevoix Lions Club, my team of volunteers and 102 donors made the effort to make sure they could make a difference in the lives of sick and injured patients. What an honor to witness such generosity.

I would also like to thank my team of bakers for another delicious variety of treats for the canteen. The businesses, where posters reminded potential blood donors of the drive and the City Water and Electric Department for displaying the banners.

By day's end on Jan. 15, the American Red Cross had collected 89 pints of blood.

Since each pint can help up to 3 patients, Charlevoix donors affected approximately 260 people that afternoon. How fantastic is that?

Bethany Lutheran Church will hold a blood drive from noon to 5:45 p.m., on March 12.

Please plan to contribute to the life-saving efforts of the American Red Cross on that day.

Thank-you,
Ellen Breining, Charlevoix Coordinator

PEOPLE FIRST

I've got the plumber on speed-dial

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

Except, instead of the usual chorus consisting of some bling-encrusted hoodlum chattering on about a "G" a "Ho" and a "Nine," it would just be the sound of me sobbing over digital drums and leaking pipes.

Five days into home ownership and I'm already a mess. Even the dogs are less ashamed—and I've seen where they put their noses.

Before I go on with this cheap and, might I add, ineffective form of print therapy, let me say that the wife and I love the house. Even the unemployed midgets living upstairs are happy with their new rooms.

But, in my fragile state, I'm just not sure I can handle playing Mr. Fix-it.

I knew things were going bad when the closing process flowed so smoothly.

My father always used to say "Every time something good happens, something bad happens."

As I sat there scribbling my mark, broker and banker on one side, wife and daughter on the other—the boy volunteered to stay back and pack a few miscellaneous items while directing the movers so we could spend the first night in the new house—I thought it was all too good to be true. After nearly 15 years of slugging it out, making mistakes with our credit and then working to fix it, we were finally getting our own place.

My eyes darted back and forth, stomach bubbling, brow sweating while I waited for the bad thing to come.

Perhaps a comet would land on us, maybe a stray bullet from a nearby post office, earthquake, plague, volcano?

With papers filed, hands shook and pleasantries exchanged we left the cloyers and headed to meet the movers.

The arrival time came and went, but no movers.

Minutes after grumbling about how I wasn't paying them to stop off for dinner, I got the call "Uh, hello, Mr. Gohs?"

When someone calls you "Mr." it generally means you're about to be told you have some horrible disease, or they've broken something they don't plan on replacing.

"I'm sorry we're running late, but there was an accident."

So, let me get this straight, you're telling me your large semi-truck that can be seen from say, the moon, hit another large semi-truck which can also be seen by, say, the blind?

Nothing seems to be broken, but the other truck took off and we're waiting for the police to arrive."

OK, Gohs, stay calm. No need to pop a blood vessel. After all, you've got a nice big house to live in.

About an hour or so later the movers showed up, promptly unloaded the truck and handed me a slip of paper that made my stomach hurt and my wallet cry.

Suffering from mental, physical and mental exhaustion, the family passed out wherever they finished their dinner of fries and chicken nuggets.

We awakened last Friday in our new home, but the smile on my face soon disappeared when the wife, yelling from the bathroom, alerted me that the we were the luckiest family in town because our shower had not one, but two cold water faucets.

"Got the plumber on speed-dial?" Not quite ready to spend the day with my own stink, I grabbed a bar of soap on the way out the door. Following a birdie bath in the Courier's water closet, I called our plumber—who just happens to be a close neighbor—and asked him to check out the water heater.

Smelling of Irish Spring and B.O. I maintained my distance while the plumber started the World War II-era boiler.

The wet popping and percolating I was hearing, the plumber said, was normal. I did my best not to black out when I heard the words "death rattle" "soon" and "money pit."

I tried to pay attention while he pointed at various valves and switches and pipes, but all I could think about was how living right around the corner from this guy was going to make it pretty awkward after I start writing him a series of bad checks.

No sooner had we rejoiced over having hot water than—and good god I wish I was kidding—there was an apparent simultaneous breakdown of the kitchen faucet, bathroom sink, upstairs sink, dishwasher and washing machine.

It seems the home inspection did not cover checking to see if the house was built on an Indian burial ground.

"Got the plumber on speed-dial?" Evil spirits notwithstanding I called the plumber.

He said the old metal water pipes had been off so long that a substance resembling kitty litter mixed with creamy peanut butter had clogged much of the fixtures.

After a couple hours and a few parts runs, the plumber was finished—and we had a fully operational house.

It's been three whole days since anything has malfunctioned and the family is just loving the new house, but I'm withholding my chirps of glee.

My one consolation is that help is merely a phone call, and a half a block, away.

Lucky for me my plumber works weekends, lucky for him I just bought a hunk of checks.

FAMILY AND LASER DENTISTRY

Lakeview
DENTISTRY OF CHARLEVOIX

If you consider yourself somewhat of an anxious dental patient and are seeking extreme safety and comfort, you need to consider Lakeview Dentistry. We have incorporated laser dentistry techniques into our practices and treatments.

Here are some of the major benefits associated with laser dentistry:

- Procedures performed using soft tissue dental lasers may not require sutures (stitches).
- Certain laser dentistry procedures do not require anesthesia.
- Laser dentistry minimizes bleeding because the high-energy light beam aids in the clotting (coagulation) of exposed blood vessels, thus inhibiting blood loss.
- Bacterial infections are minimized because the high-energy beam sterilizes the area being worked on.
- Damage to surrounding tissue is minimized.
- Wounds heal faster and tissues can be regenerated.

Official Notice

MEMORANDUM

TO: Charlevoix City Council and the general public.
 FROM: City of Charlevoix Historic District Commission.
 City of Charlevoix Historic District Study Committee.
 SUBJECT: Update on Historic Preservation Efforts.

PURPOSE

The purpose of this memo is to update the Charlevoix City Council and the general public on overall historic preservation efforts, and the outcome of the study completed for the Downtown Business District.

BACKGROUND

The demolition of the Appletree Building in 2003, the former office of Earl Young, located on Bridge Street in the Downtown Business District was very controversial and thus resulted in the establishment of an Ad Hoc Committee. The Ad Hoc Historical Preservation Committee was established by City Council on September 2, 2003 and was tasked with studying the feasibility of historic districts within the City. The Ad Hoc Committee consisted of two members from each of the following organizations: Downtown Development Authority, City Council, Chamber of Commerce, Historical Society, and the City Planning Commission. On January 17, 2005, the Ad Hoc Committee filed a report to the City Council and recommended that the Ad Hoc Committee be dissolved and replaced by a Historic District Study Committee. The Charlevoix City Council made a resolution to appoint a Historic District Study Committee on January 17, 2005, who has the responsibility to undertake a photographic inventory of all resources in the proposed district, research the history of the district, and write the preliminary report. The Study Report includes the History of the Proposed District, a Statement of Significance (Association with Significant Events, and Design/Construction Significance), Historical Research on the buildings in the designated area; a photographic inventory, resource counts and resource percentages. The report is then officially transmitted to the local Planning Body, SHPO (State Historic Preservation Office), the Michigan Historic Commission, and the State Historic Preservation Review Board. Next, the Charlevoix Historic District Commission was established by the Charlevoix City Council, as part of City Ordinance 706 of 2005 which was adopted by the Charlevoix City Council October 17, 2005. This Commission is responsible for following the Design Review Guidelines, the US Secretary of Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation and guidelines for rehabilitating historic buildings. The City of Charlevoix Historic District Commission held an Education Forum on December 11, 2007 where all property and business owners in the Charlevoix Downtown Business District were invited to attend, as were owners of historic buildings and all interested citizens. The forum presented information on the benefits and restrictions of historic designation as well as the local economic benefits of historic districts. A video tape of the session was made available to interested parties who were not able to be in attendance and is still available at the City Planning Office.

FACTS ON HISTORIC DISTRICTS

Michigan Local Historic Districts Act, Michigan Public Act 169 of 1970, declares Historic Preservation a public purpose to Foster Civic Beauty, Safeguard Heritage, Stabilize and Improve Property Values, Strengthen Local Economy, Ensure rights of property owners, procedural due process, and equal protection. It provides communities with tools to manage change, and sets forth procedures for establishing, modifying and eliminating local historical districts.

A Historical Resource is defined as 50 years or older, a building, structure, object, site, district, association with significant people/events, design/construction, significant at local, state or national level. The Resource must retain its integrity in materials, location, setting, design, workmanship, association, and feeling.

FINDINGS OF THE HISTORIC DISTRICT STUDY COMMITTEE

The committee was directed, as the first Historic District in Charlevoix, to study the Charlevoix Train Depot located at 307 Chicago Avenue. It was to be considered as a single resource Historical District. The study was submitted to SHPO July 20, 2005, a public informational hearing was held on March 1, 2006, and was designated as the first Historic District by adoption of Ordinance No. 715-2007, by the Charlevoix City Council on February 5, 2007.

The Study Committee was then directed to study the Downtown Business District which would include the East Side of Bridge Street from the Bridge to Clinton Street, and the West Side of Bridge Street from the Weathervane Restaurant to the north side of Antrim, and Park Avenue, Clinton Street, Mason Street to State Street, and State Street from Park Avenue to Antrim Street. The preliminary report on the east side of Bridge Street was completed and sent to the State Historic Preservation Office for review, and presented to the Michigan Historical Commission on December 6, 2007. Originally, it was thought that the majority of the buildings located in the Downtown Business District would qualify as Contributing Resources. After reviewing the information in the report the Michigan Historical Commission felt that four of the resources had undergone significant alteration and could not be considered as contributing resources, two had undergone significant alteration though they would be considered contributing resources in a larger historic district. There were only three strong historic resources that retain material integrity on the east side of Bridge Street. Since the west side of Bridge Street was already under study the decision was made to complete the west side and include it with the east side to see if a solid 50% or more contributing resources in the district could be met for it to be designated as Historic. After researching the properties it was found that we optimistically only had 46.6% contributing properties, and 53.3% non-contributing properties. The façade changes and other alterations that had been made to the majority of the buildings again had to be reviewed according to the United States Secretary of Interior Guidelines for the Treatment of Historic Properties and the State of Michigan Guidelines for Historic Preservation. According to SHPO since the number of contributing resources within the district would be under 50%, the report submitted as a whole could not be approved as a Historic District.

FUTURE GOALS

The Business District cannot be considered as a whole district, but the Charlevoix Historic Study Committee continues to consider and study certain historic buildings and areas in the city, which if established would be governed by the Commission. The Commission will be working with property owners and studying these resources in the future to determine the feasibility of protecting these historic resources.

MEETING TIMES

The City of Charlevoix Historic District Commission meets on the first Wednesday of every other month beginning January 2009, at 5:00 p.m. at City Hall, in the second floor conference room. The City of Charlevoix Historic District Study Committee meets on the first Wednesday of each month at 5:30 p.m., at City Hall, in the second floor conference room.

Any concerns can be addressed to Michael Spencer, City Planner, at 547-3265.

COURTESY PHOTO

Howard and Roberta (Bartlett) Bears are seen here in their 1932 marriage photo. Howard was 29 and Roberta was 23.

Roberta Bartlett was born on Jan. 14, 1909 in Williamsburg where she attended school and played on the high school girls' basketball team.

After graduation she continued to teach and later taught school in a one-room school house before marriage.

In the midst of the great depression, she married Howard Bears on Sunday, Dec. 25, 1932.

For the next 18 years she was a farm wife and later a mother to three boys as the Bears family farm in Banks Township, outside of Ellsworth.

Winters on an isolated farm were hard.

It was not unusual to be snowed-in for several days or maybe even a week at a time—No mail; no outside contact; no TV—just you and the howling winter winds.

A team of horses and a sleigh were the only means of getting out to Ellsworth for supplies.

To help pass the time, she wrote letters to her parents. She wrote a lot of them. Thirty years of letters, filled with the joys and hardships of farm life.

Her husband, after the death of his mother in 1950, put the remote, Ellsworth farm up for sale. It was sold to Clarence Boss in 1951 and the family moved to a farm in Marion Township.

Just one example: gathering and cleaning eggs for sale at Neff brothers grocery store in town. The Charlevoix farm, located south of Castle Farms on the hill, was sold to the Kiteley family in 1963.

Roberta and her husband moved into town to a house on the corner of Meadow Lane and Garfield Street. Roberta there for another 45 years. 35 of these years as a widow.

Her oldest son Jim still remembers how hard his mom worked and how she would read Bible stories to the children when they were young.

Bob still remembers how hard his mom worked and how she would sit the children down on the couch, wait patiently for them to settle down and then read to them.

The youngster in the crowd, Roberta's son Glenn, remembers how hard his mom worked and how she would stop and read the children the comics when the Grand Rapids Press came.

Roberta's hard work and cheery outlook on life helped all the children, they say.

Glenn, who later became a minister, was fond of saying, "If a person can't get along with mom, they can't get along with life: with great determination and strength, along with a cherry heart, full of grace.

According to her children, Roberta was, and still is, God's servant.

Please join in wishing Roberta Bartlett a happy birthday in her 100th year of life.

Roberta's children say this is how their mother faced all of her

Charlevoix girls take over lead in Lake Michigan Conference

The Rayders stand alone. Sarah Potter scored 16 points.

and grabbed nine rebounds, and Tammy Potter added 12 points and eight rebounds Friday as the Rayders toppled Kalkaska, 55-42, to break a first-place tie in the Lake for us," said Charlevoix coach Brett Erskine, whose team improved to 7-2 overall and 4-0 in the league. Kalkaska, which was ranked tied for ninth in the Associated Press Class C state poll, suffered its first loss of the season and stands 7-1, 3-1.

"First place in the league," Erskine said. "The girls were really excited to play in a game like that and they really stepped up."

Perhaps none more so than Tammy Potter, a senior forward. She scored 10 of her points in the third quarter as Charlevoix extended its 30-23 halftime lead to 45-31. Kalkaska never got closer than 10 points the rest of the way.

"Great job on the press causing a lot of havoc and wearing down their guards," Erskine said. "We made them turn the ball over a few times. That kind of took a little bit of wind out of their sails. I think we kind of wore them down at the end because they looked pretty tired."

Two of those seniors, KC McCarty and Meridith Rich, did an outstanding job in triggering Charlevoix's defensive pressure, particularly on Kalkaska's guard tandem of Ponstein and Chelsea Matley.

"Great job on the press causing a lot of havoc and wearing down their guards," Erskine said. "We made them turn the ball over a few times. That kind of took a little bit of wind out of their sails. I think we kind of wore them down at the end because they looked pretty tired."

Charlevoix won the JV game, 61-18, as Dani Baron scored 11 points, and Lynzie Gotshall and Hannah Hybl added 10 apiece.

Ex-Rayder standout Friske leads Brown in win

Charlevoix graduate Scott Friske scored 15 points, grabbed eight rebounds and dished out three assists in leading Brown to a 69-56 men's basketball victory over Bryant (R.I.) University.

The 15 points was a season-high for Friske, a 6-foot-6 senior forward.

The Bears, 6-8, open Ivy League play on Friday, Jan. 16, against Yale.

Three former area standouts were named the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference All-Academic team for the fall season. They are Petoskey graduate Andy Strohbel, who plays football at Northern Michigan; Harbor Light grad Jessica Hass, who plays volleyball at Saginaw Valley; and East Jordan graduate Kristi Werner, who runs cross country at Wayne State.

Harbor Light Christian graduate Hannah Hewitt had five points and one assist for Alma College in a 69-47 women's basketball loss to Calvin College. Hewitt had one assist in a 78-77 overtime victory over Olivet. The Scots are 4-7 overall, 3-1 in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Petoskey graduate Corbin Donaldson contributed two points, two rebounds, two steals and an assist in Cornerstone University's 75-68 loss to Madonna. He had nine points, six rebounds and an assist in an 84-82 win over Concordia. Cornerstone is 11-7 overall, 1-1 in the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference.

Harbor Springs graduate Mark Morse finished with four points and three rebounds in helping the Lake Superior State men's basketball team to a 79-66 victory over Grand Valley. It was Lake Superior's first win over Grand Valley in seven years.

Morse had two points, two assists, two steals and a rebound in an 86-59 loss to Ferris State. The Lakers are 8-5 overall, 5-3 in the GLIAC.

Senior guard Mischa McCray, a Harbor Light graduate, had two points and two rebounds as Calvin downed Alma, 73-47, in an MIAA men's basketball game. Calvin is 7-5 overall, 2-0 in the MIAA.

Sophomore Jo'ell Cruse, an Inland Lakes grad, had 13 points and pulled down five rebounds in helping Kirtland Community College to a 78-74 women's basketball win over St. Clair CC.

Cruse then had four points, three rebounds and an assist in a 96-33 loss to Schoolcraft College. The Firebirds are 9-5.

Petoskey graduate Matt Murphy had one assist in helping Rochester (N.Y.) to a 79-68 victory over New York University. Rochester is 9-2

GIRLS Basketball

Charlevoix 52, Gaylord 36. Charlevoix outscored the Blue Devils, 21-6, Monday, Jan. 12 in the third quarter to pull away in a tuneup for its league showdown Friday at Kalkaska.

The Rayders improved to 6-2 overall and are 3-0 in the Lake Michigan Conference. The Blazers are 6-0, 3-0. They share first place and are the only unbeaten teams remaining in the conference.

"I know they're going to pressure us a lot," Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine said of the Blazers. "They've got some really quick people up front. If we can handle that pressure and get the ball across (halfcourt) and settle down into our offense, it'll be a good game."

"Tonight (against Gaylord) I thought we handled it OK," Tammy Potter scored eight of her team-high 10 points during the decisive third quarter to spark the Rayders on Monday. Charlevoix led, 19-12, at halftime, then upped its lead to as many as 20 in the third quarter.

Erica Faust added eight points and Taylor Storm had seven for Charlevoix, while Potter grabbed six rebounds. Meridith Rich had eight rebounds and four assists, and Shauna Spenceley finished with four assists.

For Gaylord, 3-5, Brittney Deerfield scored 16 points.

Dani Baron scored 17 points and Jenna Way added 12 as Charlevoix won the JV game, 51-39. Lauren Bartline scored 22 points to lead Charlevoix to a 61-57 overtime victory in the freshman game.

Charlevoix sweeps wrestling double-dual Charlevoix swept a Lake Michigan Conference double-dual from Boyne City and Traverse City St. Francis on Wednesday, Jan. 14.

The Rayders topped Boyne, 45-30; and the Gladiators, 60-18. Boyne City finished the night 1-1, beating St. Francis, 36-21.

Against Boyne City, Charlevoix's wins came from Myles

Kerr, 103, void; Curtis Russell, 112, void; Zeke Daman, 130, pin, 49 seconds; Alex Waha, 135, pin, 1:12; Matt Golovich, 140, pin, 1:48; Matt Levans, 145, void; Chris Levans, 189, 7-0 decision; and Jacob Roach, 275, pin, 2:51.

Against St. Francis, Charlevoix's wins came from Daman, 130, pin, 1:31; Waha, 135, void; Golovich, 140, pin, 49 seconds; Chris Keie, 171, pin, 5:11; Levans, 189, void; Corey Heise, 215, void; Roach, 275, void.

Against St. Francis, Boyne winners were Nate Haley, 130, pin, 57 seconds; Chris Bersona, 135, void; Cody Wilmot, 152, pin, 53 seconds; Drew Nobel, 171, void; Steve Robinson, 215, void; Jack Diener, 275, void.

Against the Rayders, Boyne's winners were Adam Brown, 125, pin, 1:55; Josh McGeorge, 152, void; Wilmot, 160, void; Nobel, 171, pin, 3:30; Marc Calo, 215, pin, 3:17.

"Charlevoix won a couple matches that we had a chance to compete in," Boyne coach Don Nobel said. "They not only won them, but they won them by pin. Those 12 points were the difference in the match."

"I think we can wrestle better, but hats off to them for wrestling a good match."

"Nate Haley and Cody Wilmot came up big for us against St. Francis with first-period pins. Couple that with a little more team depth and we came away with the win."

Mt. McSauba offers new program

With the addition of the Training Grounds Terrain Park a new program has been established for riders to develop their skills and etiquette that are required for use. John Curtis will teach group lessons for snowboarders and skiers interested in developing their skills from a professional snowboarder. This program is designed for young riders looking to gain experience hitting jumps, riding rails and learning new tricks safely. Over the course of our five-week program, riders will be instructed on safety, technique and style. This program is for riders that are at a skill level where they feel the need to progress and have new experiences besides that of just riding down the hill. Smart style will be explained and taught. Sign-up sheets were distributed to area schools and lessons begin Jan. 22. Parents, this is a way to help your child ride safely in the terrain park and gain experience to be a responsible user. Lessons cost $40 for riders who have a board and $50 for those who need to rent one. Here Curtis is pictured coming off a jump at McSauba's new terrain park "The Training Grounds."

Irish Boat Shop in top 100 dealerships

In November, 2008, in Las Vegas, Nevada, Boating Industry Magazine recognized Irish Boat Shop as one of the "Top 100 boat dealers in North America for 2008."

Irish Boat Shop is a 47-year-old, full-service marina with two locations in Charlevoix and Harbor Springs.

The Top 100 ranking recognizes those marine dealers that are unsurpassed in overall business operations, customer service, marketing and professionalism. Collectively, the 2008 Boating Industry Top 100 employ nearly 4,800 people and operate 278 retail locations across North America.

"While most industry awards are given to those dealers that sell the most boats, our Top 100 program is much more qualitatively focused," said Matt Gruhn, Editor-In-Chief of Boating Industry, "thereby leveling the playing field for all dealers and directing consumers to those dealers that can best deliver on the dream that boat ownership promises."

Irish Boat Shop is one of two marinas in Michigan on this elite list. With over 5,000 marinas in North America, Boating Industry narrows the list down to 3,000 nominations and exhaustively reviews over 350 applications.

"Our editorial staff was extremely impressed with the detailed nature of Irish Boat Shop's planning process," said Gruhn. "Of particular note, this Sea Ray and Boston Whaler Master Dealer sets short-term, highly quantifiable goals for each department, which are tracked monthly."

"The Boating Industry Top 100 has, in short order, become the most coveted award in the marine market," explained Tammy Galvin, Vice President of Affinity Boating Media. "Marine dealers are on the front line with consumers every day, and this is one way we can help provide much-needed benchmarking information for all other dealers to measure themselves against."

To see the complete ranking of the Top 100 dealers, visit www.Boating-Industry.com.

Irish Boat Shop of Charlevoix was recently named one of America's top 100 dealerships by Boating Industry Magazine. Irish, a 47-year-old full-service marina was named for its commitment to customer service, quality work and longevity in the industry.

Enough in the budget for the new school year?

ing what Janek perceives as an adequate increase in school funding from the state, schools this year could actually see a decrease from last year's per pupil allowance.

"It's a tough situation," Janek said. "But, the board and I and principals are committed to keeping our academic standards high—we have put a freeze on purchasing text books, supplies, equipment over the last five years, but with that commitment you can only do that for so long so at some point we have to say we are in the education business and we are going to make sure we maintain our high standards."

Due to the tough economic times and ever decreasing funding, Janek is working with the administration to develop a budget committee consisting of members of the public and administration.

Janek said letters will soon be sent to every household within the Charlevoix school district urging anyone interested to participate in the budgetary problem-solving process.

Adding to the woes of the schools number crunchers is the as-of-yet unresolved labor contract with Charlevoix Public School teachers.

"How do we stay financially solvent and keep our high academic standards? And, how do we enter into a fair contract with the labor unions?" Janek said. "We don't know what the state's going to do with the budget; we don't know what enrollment's going to be; we don't know how many teachers are going to retire."

He added, "It's a very frustrating. It's like a big jigsaw puzzle and a lot of the pieces are missing."

Fighting after the war ends

as fighting against Germany.

"The British got this idea that they would get the Americans in because they were new blood in this war," said Peak, who is currently working on a feature length documentary "Voices of a Never Ending Dawn." "We only got into the war toward the end of World War I because Woodrow Wilson stood on a platform of peace and that's how he got elected to a second term, but when Germany tried to come up through Mexico, Arizona and Texas we intercepted a telegram saying that Mexico was going to operate with Germany ... and when Americans heard about Mexico and Arizona they decided to get into the war."

Peak's crew chose to shoot some of the four key battle scenes of the Polar Bears in southern Charlevoix because the terrain was similar to that of northern Russia.

Though, Peak said, the temperatures during the original battles were closer to 60 degrees below zero.

"They get up there and they're only supposed to guard ammunition. Well, by the time they got up there the ammunition was already stolen by the communists and the British took their flags away, guns away, took the American food away, took our guys and shipped them out on the front," she said. "World War I ended 60 days after they got to Russia. Many of the guys were from the Petoskey area, Ellsworth, from all around here. And the idea was pick the Michigan guys—they're tough, they know winter and many of them are Polish and speak Polish, which they thought was similar to Russian."

She added, "There was an important northern port with a railroad tied to it that you could take all the way down to Moscow. So, our guys and only some of their guys went down and fought this horrendous, bloody war with the Bolsheviks."

Peak and several of her actors and re-enactors converged on the Weatherlane Terrace Inn & Suites on Jan. 16 for a press conference. What some may not know is that the grandfather of Irene Hizeberger, assistant manager of the inn, was actually a Polar Bear who fought against the Bolsheviks.

Irene's father, Mike Postmus, carefully recopied his father's war diary, a piece which was one of several diaries which spurred Peak to make the movie.

"So, World War I ends Nov. 11 of 1918, but the word never came for these guys to go home," she said. "All the sudden four weeks have gone by and they're completely iced in. The parents of Detroit, Michigan don't know if their sons are dead or alive—they didn't even have radios—Spanish flu had killed 100 of these guys and they couldn't even get the bodies out."

Parents from all over Michigan began meeting in Detroit, urging the government to bring the men home.

"It was March of 1919 when they started coming home, but my grandfather didn't get home until around the end of June. Some guys were fighting on the front, bloody horrible fights one day and then zoomed up the river and put on a boat to go to New York," Peak said.

The soldiers stayed alive by living with peasant families in northern Russia.

"Not only did they not have enough food and 60 degrees below zero temperatures, but they caught body lice because the peasants houses were connected to their barns where the animals."

With 30 years in show business, and nearly 10 years of making industrial films, Peak hopes to bring the audience through the journey of the Polar Bears and the hardship endured by families who lost their loved ones.

Peak focuses on several of the men including Sgt. Mick Kenney, the infantry leader of Company K who had to take the town of Kodish but died while fighting nearly eight weeks after World War I ended.

The six-foot, five-inch actor Nick Vukasovich, who has worked in stage plays and commercial work while in high school and college, is slightly taller than the real-life Kenney, but doesn't think he could have filled his character namesake's proverbial shoes.

"I've been trying to read up on Sgt. Kenney," he said. "I've also been watching some World War I documentaries to see what it was like. I think if I went to war I would be scared, but my character was someone everyone in the company looked up to and was brave, fearless really. He was the complete opposite of how I would have been."

"The 'Reading Rainbow Young Writers and Illustrators Contest' is a wonderful way for children to experience creating a story from their imagination and then putting it into illustrations," says Charlotte Galgoc, WCMU's Ready To Learn Coordinator. "Whether it is something they have done before or for the first time, it can create a love for writing and drawing that may begin a life-long adventure in story writing."

Weaving fur into traditional clothing

Kris Edward Daman, Charlevoix area artist, has a lifelong interest in the fur trade, Native American artwork, and history. Mr. Daman's work will be on display in the Charlevoix Public Library's display case through the month of January. There is a cross section of art work that he produced and collected. His primary interest and work is in historic textiles, such as finger weaving, and recreating colonial period clothing. Examples of some leather working as well as different weaves and types of clothing are available. Mr. Daman has recreated the traditional hide tanning method of brain-tanning, in his leatherworking pieces. Mr. Daman endeavors to learn many of the old time arts and skills that have been lost or are rapidly disappearing. His goal is to pass along that knowledge to others through teaching and displays. If you are interested in displaying a unique collection or want more information about upcoming displays contact the information desk at the library, 237-7340.

Former Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, insurance pro Jay Bingham and the city staff were lauded for their efforts during the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce's biggest celebration of the year.

According to Tom Conlan, who gave the state of the Chamber address, despite Michigan's current economic conditions, chamber membership remains strong.

"After all, the chamber really is our members, and tonight's attendees especially demonstrate that the spirit of community service is alive and well in Charlevoix," Conlan said.

Chamber director Enn Bemis introduced the winners of the Ambassador's Award, the staff of the City of Charlevoix.

Concerned over a potential $87,000-plus deficit in the 2009-2010 budget, council members planned to discuss a slew of rev-

In the days leading up to the meeting, city manager Rob Straebel was adamant about keeping a balanced budget.

"We recognize that there is deficit spending in the general fund and we have asked both department heads and city council to look strategically at prioritizing a list of projects that we may be able to delete or postpone in hopes of balancing the budget and the general fund," he said. "The

Teen arrested in Charlevoix High vandalism case

STEVE ZUCKER
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

Authorities in Charlevoix have arrested a Charlevoix teen in connection with a vandalism done to a Charlevoix High School building trades class project house in May 2008.

Austin Wilhelm, 19, turned himself in and was arraigned, Tuesday on charges of breaking and entering with intent and malicious destruction to a building, $1,000-$20,000. The charges are ten and five-year felonies respectively.

He was released from custody after posting a $2,000 bond and is scheduled to face a preliminary examination on the charges at 3 p.m. on Feb. 3.

The charges stem from an incident that took place on or about May 20, 2008 at the construction technology class project house in which paint was splashed throughout the building and spray paint was also applied to the walls.

When completed, the house was destined to become the Mums and Tots Center in Ellsworth which serves mothers and children in need.

Authorities said the cost to repair the damage was about $4,500.

Police said Wilhelm was a member of the construction technology class, that he was one of the two students who found the damage on May 21. Police said a finger print found on the window sill police believe was used to gain entry to the building during the crime was a match to Wilhelm and that paint found both on pants Wilhelm wore to school on May 21 and paint found on clothes at his home while he was still at school all matched paint used to damage the project building.

Charlevoix County Chief Assistant Prosecutor Shaynee Fanara said the long delay in issuing the charges was a result of waiting for the lab work that matched the paint evidence.

Wilhelm's defense attorney, Mary Beth Kur said in a written statement, "I truly believe that they have the wrong person here and I don't say this on every case. I would also say that Austin and his family are looking forward to having their day in court and that they believe that when all of this is flushed out, he will be exonerated."

CORRECTION

Due to reporter error, it was incorrectly stated in the Jan. 21 article on the Charlevoix Public Schools' budget that the schools could face a $1.7 million shortfall. The correct dollar amount should have read: Between $800,000 and $1 million.

Due to reporter error, it was stated in the Jan. 21 edition of the Charlevoix Courier that Charlevoix Rayder Clay Heise was Corey Heise. The athlete's correct name is Clay Heise. We apologize for the confusion.

Group working to protect quality of life

The Little Traverse Conservancy is announcing that in 2008, a total of 34 projects encompassing 3,629 acres and more than seven miles of water frontage were protected throughout its five-county service area.

"The Conservancy's work continues to represent a solid investment in the future of northern Michigan," said Tom Bailey, executive director for Little Traverse Conservancy.

"The values of our homes and cottages, along with the prosperity of our cities and towns, and the viability of our farms, are enhanced by ensuring that land conservation in our region keeps pace with land development, protecting the scenery, natural areas, and wildlife that are the foundation for our tourist-resort industries and our quality of life."

Some of the Charlevoix County land protection highlights for 2008 included the following:

- The Conservancy purchased a 52-acre property (see above) along the Jordan River. The protected land lies adjacent to the existing Rogers Family Homestead Nature Preserve, providing for a total of 138 contiguous protected acres.

- An 11-acre nature preserve was created in Melrose Township.

- The development rights to 23 acres along US-31 in Hayes Township were purchased to protect the scenic highway frontage between Charlevoix and Petoskey.

- Karen Verlinde sold an 8-acre undeveloped property on Susan Lake at a highly discounted price so it could become a nature preserve.

Environmental education continues to be a vital component of the Conservancy's work. Programs are offered to foster connections between our human and natural communities.

During 2008, more than 5,100 young people participated in seasonal environmental education programs. Programs involve a wide variety of topics ranging from pond study to orienteering. Summer programs included a Knee-High series (for 3-6 year olds) as well as a Young Naturalist series.

(for 7-12 year olds). Conservancy staff offered an Adventures in the Outdoors course through the College for Kids program sponsored by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. Throughout the year, four community field trips were offered each season at various nature preserves or other protected properties.

Little Traverse Conservancy is a key partner in the newly formed Emmet County "Getting Kids Outdoor" initiative, inspired by the national No Child Left Inside movement. This initiative is a collaborative venture of approximately a dozen community members representing nine different fields including conservation, education, business, and health. The mission of the group is to build a community that embraces and promotes getting kids outdoors as part of a healthy lifestyle.

The stewardship of Conservancy-protected land involves annually monitoring the 204 private properties that are protected with conservation easements. These properties encompass more than 18,000 acres. In addition, the Conservancy is responsible for the permanent caretaking of 210 nature preserve properties that encompass more than 11,400 acres. A volunteer corps of more than 100 individuals assists the organization with nature preserve monitoring and trail maintenance and several Work Day events were held at preserves during the field season.

The following provides just a few examples of the stewardship work in Charlevoix County completed throughout 2008 and the critical role of volunteers for the organization:

- With the help of Eagle Scout Isaac Lambert and other volunteers, a new parking area and trail system were completed at the Rogers Family Homestead Nature Preserve on the Jordan River, just outside of East Jordan.

- A joint Open House was held at the Susan Creek Nature Preserve with the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians.

- Trails were established and a new parking area created at the Nathan "Barry" Driggers Nature Preserve on the Charlevoix-Boyne City Road.

The Little Traverse Conservancy has been working as the oldest regional, non-profit land trust in Michigan. With the support of more than 4,100 members, the Little Traverse Conservancy works with private landowners and units of local government to voluntarily and permanently protect ecologically significant and scenic lands from development. Since it was founded, more than 39,000 acres and 105 miles of shoreline along our region's lakes, rivers, and streams have been set aside to remain in their natural state within Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, Mackinac, and Chippewa counties. For more information about the Conservancy, call (231) 347-0991 or visit www.landtrust.org.

Deadline to file for school board seat closing
Two seats on Charlevoix schools board of education

BENJAMIN GOHS, EDITOR

The current seats of Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education members Dean Spenceley and Christine Michaud are soon to expire.

While both intend to run again, the public is welcome to file by the 4 p.m., Feb. 10 deadline to run for the positions.

"Win, lose or draw, I'm going to stay a part of it," Spenceley said.

"If everything goes well I'll still be on the board, if not, I'll be in the crowd making sure everyone understands what is going on with the board."

No one had filed and Michaud could not be reached by press time.

Both Spenceley and Michaud were elected to the board for the first time nearly four years ago.

"There are so many times where it is hard to enjoy what you are doing that you have to get your own gratification out of it," Spenceley said. "It seems like a lot of what we are doing is taking hours away from somebody or taking a job away from somebody, and in such a small town it always seems like it is someone you know."

But, Spenceley added, "We have to make the tough decisions. Our top priority is education. We are here for our kids, and in my mind, I feel we have made the right decisions in the past couple years."

Despite the economy and cuts which have been made, Spenceley said Charlevoix schools and staff remain the best around.

"We will continue to work to make Charlevoix the place where people want to move, where jobs will come," he said. "They are certainly top notch."

Spenceley also thanked Charlevoix schools superintendent Chet Janik for his effort in getting the bond measure passed.

"He made people understand the bond issue," he said. "He made them see what it would do for the school district."

Spenceley added, "Getting that bond issue passed is one of the things I'm proudest of."

School board position applications are available at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office (call 547-7200) for more information.

Council seeks to balance budget

sound management philosophies we adhere to include keeping a reserve balance in the general fund."

Straebel added, "With the current economic times, we're looking to have a reserve in the 18 to 20-percent range."

Results of the meeting were not available by press time. The proposed 2009-2010 budget amount of $16,501,000 was a stark decrease from last year's $18,500,000.

Straebel said he understands any tax increases could increase the strain on those already squeezed by the state of the economy—Charlevoix's latest unemployment numbers according to the Department of Energy, Labor and Economic Growth, have hit 12.9 percent—however, the city did increase water, sewer and electrical taxes by four, six and three percent respectively.

"We had a study done by an independent consultant looking at revenues needed for future capital improvements in water, sewer and electric," Straebel said.

"We're looking to maintain sufficient annual future replacement costs of capital improvements and sufficient fund balances for aging infrastructure."

And, Straebel added, a slight increase now will afford the city to save taxpayers money down the road.

"As technology increases, we get longer life span out of infrastructure," he said. "We have antiquated lines. Also, we are looking to develop a looped system so if you have any problems in the water line you can still get adequate water flow to certain sections."

In addition to finishing the trout stream in East Park, the city has eight proposals which will seek federal funds.

"There were three street, water and sewer drainage projects including improvements to Park Avenue, State Street and Clinton Street; there was a proposal to follow up on the energy audit we had done in 2008 to create more efficient buildings through improvements in lighting ... upgrades to our heating and cooling systems," Straebel said. "One proposal dealt with installation of new LED lights at the municipal airport for things such as runways, taxi-ways, parking lights and general facility lighting."

He added, "We could save as much as 30 to 40 percent on our electrical usage."

Other proposals include new airport hangars, upgrading the electrical circuits at the industrial park and expanding the proposed fiber optic network to the benefit of local businesses and organizations.

Straebel vowed to remain committed to a "pay-as-you-go" philosophy on spending.

"The logical strategy is earmarking funds for future large capital improvement projects so we don't have to purchase bonds to pay for those large expenses," he said. "The upshot for the citizens of Charlevoix is that they're not paying huge amounts of interest—which can easily double the actual cost of the project."

Straebel added, "I think it's a sound and reasonable approach to long-term financial management of the city."

In addition to a decrease in expenditures from the previous fiscal year, Charlevoix will receive a 4.4 percent bump in property tax revenue from the state.

"In relative terms, looking at the economic conditions and some of the dire predictions coming from other governmental organizations, I think we're going to be doing fine with the City of Charlevoix," Straebel said. "I'm confident we can remain financially solvent and financially healthy, not only this year, but many years into the future."

Gaza and Us

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

An ad in a recent New York Times shows a map of Gaza co-zed up to the shore of New York and asks the question, "What if Hamas was in your neighborhood?" The ad encouraged a thought or two about understanding a distant problem by making it local.

Suppose that some years ago James Strang's dream of a Beaver Island empire had become real.

If the population of Beaver Island were as dense as that in Gaza, the island would currently house 750,000 people.

That's right; Gaza has about twice the area of Beaver Island and houses one and a half million people. That nearby island would be a considerable force in the area.

Suppose further that the population of Beaver Island still holds some seriously ill feelings toward the mainland people, and has begun to fire a dozen or so explosive rockets daily toward Charlevoix, Good Hart and Cross Village.

Most of the rockets don't cause much damage, but one did crash through the roof of Northwest Academy on a weekend.

It destroyed a classroom, but no one was injured.

The rockets are being imported from Canada by boat and there seems to be a nearly unlimited supply.

A few times each summer a boat from Beaver Island, loaded with explosives, sneaks in through the channel and is blown up in Round Lake, causing some disruption of the tourist season.

Suppose even further that the radio and TV messages from Beaver Island proclaimed that they will not rest until Charlevoix and even Michigan are completely destroyed and that we have all been forced to move to another part of the world.

We know in this scenario that most of the good citizens of Beaver Island are peaceful, but quite a few of them want us dead or gone.

Given those circumstances, I wonder how interested we would be in a peaceful solution to the Beaver Island problem? I'm pretty sure we would call on the coast guard, the Michigan National Guard and even the U.S. Army and Air Force in an effort to stop the rockets and the suicide boats.

We would not be able to attack Canada, even though they are the source of the rockets and explosives. Might we be forced to agree that the only way to stop the rockets and explosives is to cause enough damage to Beaver Island that no one there can continue to fire at us?

The scenario played out in the previous paragraphs is of course not very realistic, but it does help me to see clearly the point of view of the people of Israel. I am certainly not a fan of war as a solution to international problems, but there do seem to be times when violence works.

It worked when Israel invaded Lebanon to stop the rockets being fired from

Then again, maybe the best we could hope for is a shaky

FOIA requests are not scarlet letters

There is no place in open government for municipal murk.

When township supervisor Frank E. Hamilton made the Nov. 25, 2008, decision—without board approval—to request a hearing on a settlement issue be postponed; when he told a judge one reason for postponement was to hire different counsel 10 days before the board met to discuss and make that decision, he was not engaging in open government.

Worse yet is the betrayal of trust by at least two board members and their new Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA) Coordinator Sadie Bartosik—who resigned from the same position in years past for failing to do her job correctly.

Bartosik, following Norwood Township Clerk Dana Pajtas' branchchild, and under the watchful eye of Hamilton, read the names of all who had requested documents under the FOIA and the materials for which they had requested for the last 30 days.

We interpret this act as a public "shame on you" by the board members involved.

While it is true one may request such records, we fail to see the value of this scheme; but rather see it as an intimidation tactic.

It seems as though the words "freedom of information" are lost on certain township officials; especially when considering the request of the two-page Pajtas resignation letter from a Norwood citizens group; a letter which hung on the wall of the township hall at the Dec. 15 meeting.

It took an act of intervention by the township's interim attorney to finally fulfill the citizen's request—22 days to get two pages of public documentation.

The only governmental transparency we see is the apparent disdain some members of this new board have for their own constituents.

However, no list of transgressions would be complete without mention of township business items absent from agendas.

For instance, the closed-session meeting of Dec. 20—a Saturday, no less—included the item "unrelated business" on the agenda.

Board members discussed several matters, but attendees were left scratching their collective heads as to what this "unrelated" agenda item was unrelated.

Neither was the FOIA roll call proclamation listed on the agenda.

Hamilton answered each of Charlevoix Courier's charges with no comment—a move we found appropriate, since the aforementioned actions are indefensible.

And, in light of the preceding, we find it apropos that the majority of the board decided not to adopt its own code of ethics despite being advised to do so by civil counsel.

Consider this your notice, you board members who choose to skirt ethics: Township government is not a dictatorship; it is not a stone upon which to grind your personal ax; it is not a banana republic; nor private club—it is a tool intended to ensure the orderly operation of civilization.

Planet Backpacker by Robert Downes.

Go for it while you can

Through the years, Bob Downes has backpacked through more than 45 countries, with destinations ranging from the supercities of the Third World to the heart of the American wilderness. His journey was a return to a "parallel world" which he calls Planet Backpacker. "During my earliest travels as a teenager, I became aware that there is an alternative world of gypsy travelers paralleling our own," he said. "You would seldom—if ever—meet them in the ordinary world, but as soon as you hit the road, the portals would open, revealing the oddest people, along with young adventurers heading for distant horizons. It's not a Twilight Zone or a parallel dimension, but an actual world that escapes the notice of those who stay put. It's an 'other' reality." The doorways into this parallel world include such backpacker crossroads as Amsterdam, Khao San Road in Bangkok, and the beach towns of Goa. Downes files reports from these vortices and delves into the portals of new hot-spots for the nomadic set, including Mumbai, the beaches of Kerala in southern India, and the market town of Ho An in Vietnam. Looking ahead, he sees many new destinations on the horizon, including another trip around the world with his wife Jeannette and the possibility of other travel adventure books. "Like Jim Morrison said of this life: 'No one here gets out alive.' That's why you've got to go for it while you can."

Warning: Planet Backpacker may jump-start your wanderlust

You could say I'm a little biased when it comes to Bob Downes.

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

After all, he gave me my first paying gig in the writing game—And, of the half-dozen or so publications I did freelance work for later on, his Traverse City publication The Northern Express paid the most.

Nevertheless, I'm not one for blind testimonials—no matter how grateful I am—which is why, when I got the release stating Downes had written a travel book entitled "Planet Backpacker," I had to give it a read before just signing off.

I've got to say that I was totally unprepared for the candor, humor and adventure Downes managed to pen.

From flying monkey gods and amorous donkeys to tales of a bus caravan speeding through terrorist infested desert, Downes puts you right there with him. If you've ever traveled to England, Egypt, Ireland or Southeast Asia, you will appreciate the adventure of a lone American pursuing his dream to travel "round the world in one shot."

Heck, even if you're like me and hyperventilate at the mere thought of crossing state lines, you'll find yourself considering taking a trip somewhere, anywhere.

Part of Downes' plan was to explore the places your seven or 10-day vacationer doesn't have the time, or inclination, to visit. And that rogue spirit comes through loud and clear like a bout with intestinal bacteria on the shores of the Nile River.

"Planet Backpacker" holds nothing back and is not for the faint of heart. It is a real story about a real man and his lifelong dream to see the unseen.

More than a mere catalogue of destinations, "Planet Backpacker" is a primer for the youngster eager to travel abroad before starting college; it is a battle cry for the middle-aged American refugee locked in the drudgery of daily routine. From the pages of "Planet Backpacker" Downes is screaming that there is more to this life than the dreary 9 to 5 existence.

He shares the sheer joy of biking through Ireland and backpacking across East Europe.

His enthusiasm for new experiences is such that you think Downes might grab you, shake you and ask you why you're reading instead of packing for the next adventure ... but then you realize he's too busy trying to focus his camera on the pack mule, who just happens to be in heat and carrying a fellow traveler through the desert—You'll just have to pick up a copy of the book to see the picture.

According to Downes, backpacking around the world is the last epic adventure an average person can enjoy, and judging by the tales of his five-month journey through places like Galway, Cairo, Budapest and Vietnam, an excellent adventure surely was had.

To hear about Downes' travels from the man himself, be sure to attend the "Pizza & a Program" at 6:30 p.m., Feb. 4 at Boyne Country Books.

Downes will discuss his homage to Jack Kerouac, who wrote the beat odyssey about his travels across America entitled "On the Road."

Copies of the book will be available at the event or e-mail bob@planetbackpacker.net.

You can also check out www.planetbackpacker.net for more information on the book or to order a copy.

Belt can't get any tighter? Don't fret: Get help at Project Connect

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

For those in need of everything from toiletries, food, information and even chair massages, your proverbial ship has come in.

This second annual program is being brought to the Charlevoix-Emmet area by the Homeless Continuum of Care work group, the Charlevoix-Emmet Human Services Coordinating Body and The Char-Em United Way.

"It's not just an information fair," said Char-Em United Way Executive Director Martha Lancaster. "People will actually be able to get services and assistance from Michigan Works, Northwest Michigan Community Action Agency, help with filing income tax, tetanus shots, a variety of health screenings, food and personal care items."

Scheduled from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., Feb. 5 at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Charlevoix Ave. in Petoskey, Project Connect is being billed as a place for those in need to get services without the traditional run-around.

More than 40 non-profits, businesses and service providers will attend.

And, Lancaster said, with today's economy, there should be quite the turnout.

"Last year we planned for 150 people and had over 450 attend," she said. "This year we are planning for 600 people to attend, and we'll see."

Anyone interested in donating time, products, services or money should call (231) 487-1006.

The deadline for donations or volunteer sign-up is Jan. 30.

"This is free to anyone who feels a need for these services," Lancaster said. "No proof of income is required."

Lancaster said there has been a dramatic increase in the need for all services since the economy began slowing.

"What we're seeing is a lot of people who have never needed help before who suddenly are with economic concerns and don't know what to do," she said. "This will be a place for them to find help in one area without a lot of run-around."

Beware of Salmonella in certain peanut butter products

The Michigan Department of Agriculture has announced an ongoing recall of various products containing peanut butter which may contain Salmonella.

What is salmonellosis?

Salmonellosis is an infection with bacteria called Salmonella. Most persons infected with Salmonella develop diarrhea, fever, and abdominal cramps 12 to 72 hours after infection. The illness usually lasts 4 to 7 days, and most persons recover without treatment. However, in some persons, the diarrhea may be so severe that the patient needs to be hospitalized. In these patients, the Salmonella infection may spread from the intestines to the blood stream, and then to other body sites and can cause death unless the person is treated promptly with antibiotics. The elderly, infants, and those with impaired immune systems are more likely to have a severe illness.

How can Salmonella infections be treated?

Salmonella infections usually resolve in 5-7 days and often do not require treatment other than oral fluids. Persons with severe diarrhea may require rehydration with intravenous fluids. Antibiotics, such as ampicillin, trimethoprim-sulfamethoxazole, or ciprofloxacin, are not usually necessary unless the infection spreads from the intestines. Some Salmonella bacteria have become resistant to antibiotics, largely as a result of the use of antibiotics to promote the growth of food animals.

Consumer Advice

FDA recommends that consumers avoid eating products that have been recalled and discard them. Because identification of products subject to recall is continuing, the FDA urges consumers to postpone eating commercially-prepared or manufactured peanut butter-containing products and institutionally-served peanut butter until further information becomes available about which products may be affected. Efforts to specifically identify those products are ongoing. At this time, there is no indication that any national name brand jars of peanut butter sold in retail stores are linked to the PCA recall.

Visit www.charlevoixcourier.com for the full list of recalled items.
Visit the department of agriculture's Web site www.fda.gov for updates on the recall.

Kickin' it up a notch

Northern Martial Arts of Charlevoix recently had several students promoted to new ranks. Nearly 100 participants and spectators attended. The following students received their yellow belts: Elliott Tillotson, Matt Kage, Baby Hang, Trenton Speer, Michael McQuiston, Jacob Mueller, Emory Whaley, Riley Smith, Riley Jensen, Jacob Beaudoin, Aiden Zahner, Kelsey Swanson, Mary Ivey, Alicia Paczesny and Autumn Paczesny; those who earned their blue belt were Kiley Mann and Justin VanLo; those who earned their red belt were Lexie Miller, Savannah Miller and Phillip Sterrett; those who earned their brown belt were Amy Spegele, Noah Worgess, Matt Seaman and Jordan VanLo; those who earned their junior black belt were Michael Nesburg, Danny Nesburg, Natalie Nesburg, Rachel Nesburg, Jackson Robbins and Aaron Spegele.

Low-cost loans for home energy improvements

Income eligible Michigan homeowners may now borrow up to $50,000 from the Michigan State Housing Development Authority (MSHDA) to make alternative energy efficiency improvements to their homes.

The program adds alternative energy improvements to a long list of traditional improvements including insulation, upgraded windows and energy-efficient appliances. The loans are available through MSHDA's Property Improvement Program (PIP).

"MSHDA has always provided low-interest loans to Michigan residents for a variety of traditional energy saving home improvements," said MSHDA Executive Director Keith Molin. "By adding more progressive forms of improvements such as geothermal furnaces, solar water heating systems and windmills, we allow Michigan homeowners to be better stewards of the earth's resources while reducing monthly energy costs."

Other improvements covered by the expanded program include indoor fireplaces, permanently installed radiators, and solar rooms permanently installed for use as a sun room or family room.

Program Manager Jess Sobel added that the program makes it easy to obtain qualified loans.

"Income eligible homeowners with no equity can borrow up to $25,000 and with equity, up to $50,000," Sobel said. "Landlords with eligible rent limits can borrow up to $100,000 or $25,000 per rental unit, and eligible homeowners may have household incomes of up to $74,500 depending on the location of the home."

"Interest rates are reasonable at 4 percent, 6 percent, or 8 percent depending on income," not the market," said Sobel. "Loans can be amortized up to 20 years to make payments affordable."

For more information about PIP, visit the MSHDA Web site at www.michigan.gov/mshda and click on Home Improvement, or call (517) 373-8017. The toll-free number for the hearing impaired is (800) 382-4568.

MSHDA's vision in the 21st century is to improve the quality of life for all Michigan residents and create vibrant communities by focusing on providing safe, affordable housing through home ownership and rental programs; ending homelessness; and revitalizing neighborhoods and downtowns. MSHDA's loans and operating expenses are financed through the sale of tax-exempt and taxable bonds and notes to private investors, not from state tax revenues. For information on this and other MSHDA programs, visit the Web site at www.michigan.gov/mshda

January is National Radon Action Month

This map shows Radon test results from kits distributed at Health Department offices from 1993 through 2007. The red dots indicate results at or above Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) "action level"; green dots indicate test results are below action level.

January is almost over, but it's never too late to keep your family safe.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is working with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in a nationwide campaign to educate Americans about the dangers of radon exposure and to encourage them to take action to protect their homes and families.

According to public health officials, radon was present at elevated levels in about 21.4 percent of the 2000-plus homes that used radon test kits distributed through health department offices from 1993 through 2007. Maps indicating EPA "action levels" for Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties are posted on the Health Department Web site www.nwhealth.org.

Scott Kendzierski, Director of Environmental Health Services, said the only way to know if you are exposed to elevated radon levels is to test your home. "Fortunately, testing for radon is easy and inexpensive."

Radon kits can be purchased at hardware or home improvement stores, as well as at Health Department offices in Bellaire, Charlevoix, Petoskey/Harbor Springs, and Gaylord. If homeowners discover a radon problem, Health Department Environmental Health staff can help them find a solution.

Radon is a naturally occurring, invisible, odorless, tasteless gas that is dispersed in outdoor air, but which can reach harmful levels when trapped in buildings. Scientists have long been concerned about the health risks of radon, but never has there been such overwhelming proof that exposure to elevated levels of radon causes lung cancer in humans.

EPA estimates that radon is responsible for more than 20,000 lung cancer deaths per year. Radon is the second leading cause of lung cancer in the U.S., after smoking, and the leading cause of lung cancer among non-smokers. "Since you can't see or smell radon, people can downplay its health effects," said Scott Kendzierski, Environmental Health Services Director for the Health Department.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality health care, address health problems of vulnerable populations, and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego counties. Radon test kits available for $15 at Health Department offices; bring your property tax identification number so results can be tracked. For additional information about radon or radon testing, telephone Scott Johnston, Environmental Health Sanitarian, at (989) 732-1794 or visit www.epa.gov/radon.

Prep girls' basketball: Rayders hold off Boyne in a thriller, remain in first place Sarah Potter hit the game winning bucket with 5 seconds remaining Friday, Jan. 23 lifting Charlevoix to a 47-45 Lake Michigan Conference girls' basketball victory over Boyne City.

The Rayders, 8-2, remained in first place in the Lake Michigan Conference at 5-0. They hold a two-game lead over Kalkaska, Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis, each of whom is 3-2.

Potter and Olivia Cati scored eight points apiece and KC McCary hauled down 16 rebounds to lead Charlevoix.

"It was an all around good game," Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine said. "Both teams played hard."

Potter took an inbound pass from Mendith Rich and hit a short jumper for the game-winning points.

The Rayders led by 14 points entering the fourth quarter, but Boyne clawed back and tied it, 45-45, on a pair of Steve Carlston free throws with under a minute remaining.

Shelby Mittig scored 11 points to lead Boyne City, 3-8, 3-3.

"Our second half was the type of basketball we're trying to play," said Boyne coach Jim Brown, whose team trailed 23-15 at halftime but came back to forge a 45-45 tie late in the fourth quarter. "If anything, it gave our girls a lot of confidence heading into the second half of the season."

Charlevoix won the JV game 47-26. Jenna Way scored 14 points and Dant Barron added 10 for the Rayders.

IRS e-file, a fast way to your refund

Officials say easier to use than ever

Friday when the Internal Revenue Service flips the switch to begin accepting electronic returns, the number streaming in from Michigan will likely be on the increase. And many will probably be filed using the IRS's new online, fillable tax forms.

The IRS expects nearly 70 percent of Michiganders to e-file this year, either through their preparers or on their own. That would mean that close to 3 million Michigan filers will have scrapped paper and pen in favor of the computer mouse, an increase of about 8 percent over last year.

Filers will have more reasons than ever to make the switch to e-file with the IRS announcing the Jan. 16 opening of an expanded e-file program, highlighted by new tax forms that can be filled in and e-filed online, a feature that will allow virtually anyone to e-file at no cost.

"With eight out of 10 taxpayers in Michigan getting money back, more taxpayers than ever will want a fast refund this year," said IRS spokesman Luis D. Garcia. "E-filing isn't just fast, it provides practically error-free tax returns and gives a confirmation of receipt by the IRS."

According to Garcia, taxpayers who combine e-filing with direct deposit usually get a refund in 10 days or less. Filers who owe taxes can also enjoy the accuracy, ease and safety of e-filing now and can still keep their money until the last minute by authorizing an April 15 direct debit to the IRS.

"People looking to hold down the cost of filing their taxes need to use IRS Free File," Garcia said.

Now all taxpayers can file online for free: For those with Adjusted Gross Incomes of $36,000 or less in 2008—70 percent of all taxpayers—Free File offers 20 different software companies that can assist taxpayers. Most Michigan taxpayers qualify for free online tax preparation and e-filing through Free File.

For everybody else, the online fillable forms can be completed and submitted right online to the IRS for free. While this method does not provide the interview screening and assistance that most tax preparation software has, it does provide the same speed and security.

The IRS began the e-file program in 1986 as a pilot project in three cities: Cincinnati, Phoenix and Raleigh-Durham, N.C. That year, there were 25,000 tax returns filed electronically. The e-file program expanded nationwide in 1990 and 4.2 million tax returns were filed. IRS e-file has undergone tremendous growth each year. Last year, nearly 90 million returns were e-filed nationwide.

Drive-through coffee?

Espresso Hut of Charlevoix offers hot java for those on the go

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Now with two family-owned local coffee huts, Bert and Lynn Ulrich of the Boyne area are serving both Petoskey and Charlevoix.

Located in Captain's Corners Plaza, the home of Glen's Market and more, the Espresso Hut and Papa's Custard offers everything from bagels and muffins to sandwiches, espresso, gourmet tea and frozen custard.

"We've got two drive-up windows and a walk-up window," said manager Daphne LaCross. "We have salmon burgers and starting in February, we'll have a soup of the day."

The gourmet coffee hut is open 7:45 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays; and Noon to five p.m., Sundays—these winter hours will change when spring arrives.

Our mochas are a favorite drink," LaCross said. "We use Ghirardelli chocolate, steamed milk espresso with whipped cream on top and a drizzle of chocolate."

She added that, if you love ice-cream, you will truly enjoy their frozen custard.

"We have 24 flavors plus shakes, malts and sundaes," LaCross said. "We have everything from apple pie, banana, blueberry, cheesecake, peanut butter, pumpkin, peach, pistachio, strawberry and more."

The Espresso Hut also only deals in fair trade coffees which ensure sellers in third-world countries receive a fair price for their product.

Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce's biggest celebration of the year

here in Charlevoix and why we all choose to call this community home for both our families and our businesses."

She added, "Tonight, we honor those who go above and beyond the call of duty; who have given selflessly of time and resources to make our home, our place of business, our playground, our Charlevoix a better place."

The city staff were chosen, Bernis said, because they have consistently done, "what some said could never be done."

"They are those who protect us from harm and treat us when ill; they are keepers of the peace and elected officials; they are business owners choosing Charlevoix over any other location; and those who keep our community clean and beautiful," she said. "They keep the electricity on; the streets clear of snow; and guide boaters to their slips. They maintain the parks, the boat launches and the public beaches."

Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel said the staff were certainly surprised and honored by the award.

"I think it is certainly a testament to the hard work that city employees put forth each and every year," he said. "Last year was a busy year with the completion of East Park, and the city employees do a lot of work for the many festivals and events in the downtown area."

He added, "It certainly is a community oriented approach."

Pat McKeown introduced honoree Lasater, who received the Outstanding Citizen Award. "The City of Charlevoix is one-of-a-kind, unparalleled by any other community," McKeown said. "Many would agree that even when it was explored by Charlevoix's namesake Pierre Francois Xavier De Charlevoix, that it was destined for greatness. Over the years, Charlevoix has become the setting for Michigan's first power plant, the LaSalle-Griffon project, petunia-lined streets and renowned festivals. It has also been the home of many notable citizens including Ernest Hemmingway, Earl Young and Charles Ransom."

He added, "It is very apparent that Charlevoix is outstanding in more ways than one. Tonight we would like to recognize one individual who has played a monumental role in the community and embodies the definition of outstanding."

Lasater was born and raised in Paragould, Ark. and graduated from Arkansas State University with a teaching degree. He taught at Boyne City schools for six years before eventually being elected as sheriff in 1976 before retiring late last year.

"I was surprised and very honored," Lasater said, who added that, while humbled by the honor, he was also very pleased.

"I grew up in a small town and have always been a great advocate of small towns," he said. "Charlevoix County is blessed with three small towns. I raised my family in a small town and for me, that's where it's at—Charlevoix is the epitome of small town America."

Lasater said the award made him feel as though the chamber recognized his loyalty to Charlevoix County.

"I felt that I always looked out for the folks of Charlevoix County and represented them well," he said. "I've always thought that a sheriff, a chief of police, can be an extension of the chamber of commerce—promoting your county, promoting your city."

Chamber chairman Tom Conlan then announced this year's winner of the Chairman's Award, Jay Bingham.

"Tonight's winner has been instrumental in helping to make improvements to our chamber," Conlan said. "He has been tireless in his community service."

Bingham, a lifelong Michigan, graduated from Central Michigan University with an MBA before working for Georgia-Pacific in 1971. Bingham got his start in the insurance business in 1974 and has been there ever since.

Board members

Michigan Zoning Enabling Act which requires all planning commissions to be dissolved and formed by ordinance.

"I do have a bone to pick with you," said Norwood trustee Dave Leusink. "In the newspaper you say have five people going to be on there, but what meeting did I miss? That's open for discussion... isn't it?"

Leusink was referring to Dec. 24 Charlevoix Courier article wherein Hamilton explained that the board planned to change the planning commission from a seven-member board to a five-member board on a purely arbitrary basis.

"I wouldn't believe what's printed," Hamilton said. "There's a lot of things in there I don't say—period—they still show up."

When given the opportunity in a later interview to cite the specific passages he felt were inaccurate, Hamilton had no comment in addition to denying having said the preceding quote.

The board then discussed the pros and cons of a seven-member planning commission.

Norwood Township Clerk Dana Pajtas asked Mielke if a seven-member planning commission was sometimes unwieldy.

"For this size of a township it seems like five would be sufficient," she said. "It's hard enough to find five good members to begin with."

Mielke said he felt the seven-member planning commission was an effective number.

Leusink felt a five-member commission pushes dangerously close to increasing the amount of power in the hands of fewer people.

Bryan Graham said the statute allows five, seven or nine and that the smaller board will cost the township less money; a larger board will offer more diversity of opinion.

The board has until 2011 to make the change under current Michigan law.

ANNUAL
QUALITY REPORT OF THE
City of Charlevoix Water Supply
January 2009
Here is this year's Annual Quality Water Report.

It is designed to inform you about the quality drinking water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Our water comes from Lake Michigan, considered surface water. The State has performed an assessment of our source water in 2004. A determination of sensitivity and susceptibility to contamination was by made reviewing our source water geology, water chemistry, and potential contamination sources nearby the lake. The State has determined that our source water has a moderate sensitivity rating along with a moderate susceptibility to contamination. You may obtain a copy of the State report by contacting the City of Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant.

We are pleased to report that your drinking water is safe and meets all State and Federal requirements.

This report is a snapshot of the quality of the water we provided to you in the year 2008. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and State of Michigan standards.

If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Jim Caldwell at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant, (231) 547-3256, or Don Swen at the Charlevoix Water Department, (231) 547-3273. We want our valued customers to be informed about their water utility. The City of Charlevoix Water Supply routinely monitors for contaminants in your drinking water according to Federal and State Laws.

This report shows the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1 thru December 31, 2008. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some constituents. It's important to remember that the presence of these constituents does not necessarily pose a health risk.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System personnel sampled and tested for over 100 contaminants that were NOT detected in our water supply. The following constituents were detected at low but safe levels, well below the MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level)

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater run-off, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture and residential uses.

Radioactive contaminants, which are naturally occurring.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban storm water runoff, and septic systems.

The State of Michigan and Environmental Protection Agency require us to test our water on a regular basis to ensure its safety.

We meet all monitoring requirements for the year 2008.

In the following tables you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with. To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions: Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/L) - one part per million corresponds to one minute in two years or a single penny in $10,000.

Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter - one part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2,000 years, or a single penny in $10,000,000.

Picocuries per liter (pCi/L) - A pico equals one part per trillion; the measurement of radiation in water Nephelometric Turbidity Unit (NTU) - nephelometric turbidity unit is a measure of the clarity of water. Turbidity in excess of 5 NTU is just noticeable to the average person Action Level (AL) - the concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Treatment Technique (TT) - A treatment technique is a required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) - is the highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG) - is the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

ND: not applicable

ND: not detectable at testing limit

Unregulated contaminants are those for which the EPA has not established drinking water standards. The purpose of unregulated contaminant monitoring is to assist EPA in determining the occurrence of unregulated contaminants in drinking water and whether future regulation is warranted.

We're pleased that your drinking water meets or exceeds all Federal and State requirements. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some constituents have been detected. The EPA has determined that your water is SAFE at these levels.

All sources of drinking water are subject to potential contamination by substances that are naturally occurring or man made. All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791)

Call us if you have any questions.

About our system...

The City of Charlevoix operates a Direct Filtration Water Treatment Facility which uses water from Lake Michigan. With a capacity of 3 million gallons per day, water enters the plant through a submerged intake structure. Storage includes a one million gallon above ground reservoir at the plant, and a 300,000 gallon elevated tank (water tower) on Charlevoix's north side. The City has approximately 32 miles of distribution lines serving approximately 5,000 customers in the City of Charlevoix and areas of adjoining Charlevoix Township, as well as, the influx of summer visitors to the area. Present flow rates vary from around 400,000 gallons per day in the winter to as much as 2.5 million gallons per day in the summer. In service since 1987, it is a modern, efficient facility staffed by licensed, well trained operators. Charlevoix is continually improving its distribution system assuring fresh water and adequate pressure throughout our entire service area. An electrical generator at the Water Plant assures normal operation at full capacity in the event of an electrical power loss to the City. We at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System work around the clock to provide top quality water to every tap.

Please help us protect our water resources, which are the heart of our community, our way of life, and our children's future.

French claim lost ship
Affidavit of ownership filed on Le GriffonBENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Years after having thought it had taken the steps necessary to lay claim on a ship it lost to rough seas in the 17th century, France formally asserted ownership last week in a Michigan U.S. District Court.

The three pages of documentation briefly states that France, never having abandoned its interests in the ship, would claim rights to the hull, tackle, apparel, appurtenances, cargo and more if, and when, it is discovered.

"France does not take any position on whether this is Griffon," said Rick Robel, an Ohio attorney representing ship hunter Stephen Libert's Great Lakes Exploration Group in addition to filing France's claim. "France simply wanted to state that it is the owner of the shipwreck without taking any position on the dispute between Great Lakes Exploration and Michigan except that it is important that the historic and cultural values of the shipwreck be preserved."

He added, "France made it clear that it has not abandoned its interest in the sovereign vessel."

This latest development comes 30 years in the making. Libert has been hunting for the ship, which was built by Rene Sieur De Le Salle—a man integral to the Louisiana Purchase—back in the late 1600s, for nearly three decades; but, it wasn't until several years ago when he attempted to have his group named as custodians of the potential wreckage site that he was met with resistance by some officials in the State of Michigan.

The State of Michigan, late in 2008, held a short period open for claimants to file wherein it placed two newspaper advertisements. France did not respond to the ads because it

Audit reveals lack of productivityBENJAMIN GOHS

What began as a discussion on Jan. 28 how the building department could best be made solvent ended with a 4-2 vote and the termination of two employees: Ken Doty and Jim Easley.

Doty, a 15-year employee and department head, and Easley, a 12-year electrical inspector were both fired following a financial audit and a department assessment which included detailed closed-door interviews of the department's employees.

"The personnel committee recently conducted an evaluation of personnel," said chairman of the board and District Two Charlevoix County Commissioner Chris Christensen. "It was recommended to the full board that, given the current economic climate, existing issues with the building department and results of the assessment, that the employment relationship with the individuals be terminated."

Seven members of the building department were interviewed on Wednesday, Jan. 28, some of them twice, for a total of nine interviews over the course of nearly eight hours.

This move came just weeks after the county board set the most recent of two timetables for fiscal recovery of the department which was taken into the county's financial fold last spring.

According to the audit of time worked, Doty and Easley were consistently lowest in number of inspections completed per day eligible to be worked.

Documents show Doty worked over a period of 36 months an average of 3.47 inspections per day. Contrast these numbers with other members of the department who ranged from a high of 7.85 inspections per day for one employee to a low of 2.63 inspections per day over 36 months for Easley.

While no employee could ever reach 100 percent of days worked due to vacation time, holidays and sick time, Doty and

Pencils down: Boyne Citizen-Journal newspaper closed

STEVE ZUCKER
NEWS-REVIEW

The owners of Boyne City's community weekly newspaper put the publication "to bed" for good Wednesday ending a 128-year publishing legacy.

The paper's end came with no fanfare. The only difference between Wednesday's final edition and any other recent edition was a two-sentence notice printed on page 3 that read: "Today marks the final issue of the Citizen Journal. We appreciate your loyalty over the 120-plus years the Citizen-Journal has served your community."

The Citizen-Journal was published by Bellaire-based Up North Publications. A phone message left for Up North Publications publisher AJ Frattura Wednesday was not returned before press time today, Thursday.

In November Up North Publishing parent company Pennsylvania-based Journal Register Company announced that it had put several of its weekly newspapers in Michigan, Connecticut and Pennsylvania up for sale and several of its Northern Michigan weekly papers have been closed since then.

Last week Up North closed another of its Northern Michigan weekly newspapers, the Town Meeting in Elk Rapids, with a similar two-sentence notice to readers.

The Journal Register Company's newspapers in Michigan previously numbered about 17. The company's Web site now lists only 11 including the Oakland Press, Macomb Daily, (Royal Oak) Daily Tribune, (Mount Pleasant) Morning Sun.

The Citizen-Journal has been owned by many different people over the years and has been known by several different names including The Citizen, The Charlevoix County Press, the Northland County Press and others.

A brief history of the paper posted on its Web site reads: "In 1974, the Northland County Press changed its name to the Charlevoix County Press."

Jim Silber, who owned the paper for nearly 15 years, was sad to see it go.

"It shows the economics of the area and the viability of businesses to survive by controlling their expenses and not advertising," he said.

Silber moved to Boyne City in 1981 after selling four community newspapers in the Flint area.

Then, in 1994, Hugh and Susan Conklin purchased the Press and changed its name to The Citizen, which historically had been the name of the newspaper for most of its 120-year history. The Conklins purchased the East Jordan Journal in 1997 and, in 1999, both papers were sold to 21st Century Newspapers.

The weekly newspaper, along with its sister publications The Antrim County News (Bellaire), The Leader and The Kalkaskoan (Kalkaska), The Town Meeting (Elk Rapids) and the Star Penny Stretcher, were most recently purchased by the Journal Register Company in 2004.

Former owner and current Boyne City Main Street program manager Hugh Conklin said he was disappointed to hear of the newspaper's demise.

"I hate to see any (business) die," Conklin said. "People are getting their news and information in other ways now, but I think community newspapers still have a viable use ... the trick is figuring out a how to make money doing it."

Speaking of the paper's abrupt end after such long connection to the city's history, Conklin added, "I'd at least like to see it given a proper burial."

Boyne Area Chamber of Commerce executive director Jim Baumann, who served as the paper's editor from 1978 to 1981 described the news of the paper's end as "sad."

"(The newspaper) is an integral part of the community," Baumann said. "Truthfully, I would think and hope that some body would step up and start a new (paper) in some form or another."

Boyne City Mayor Eleanor

Stackus said she, too, was sad to hear the news noting that she and husband, Jim, had a long history with the newspaper both in their personal and professional lives.

"I think it's very important for a small town to have a local newspaper," Stackus said. "Not everyone in today's world is technology minded. They need someplace where they can pick up a paper and find out what's going on in their community."

Laying the groundwork: Charlevoix's road work

NOAH FOWLE
NEWS-REVIEW

Following the successful passage of last year's 15-year road millage in Charlevoix County, the county road commission's steering committee hopes to pair county road work with township plans in close proximity to one another.

Road commission manager Pat Harmon admitted particulars of the work still must be settled, but planning is already underway to get the most work out of money collected from the millage. However, when that money is collected is still undecided.

"We're looking to see if the money can be collected on the summer tax, if not it will come from the winter tax, and technically we wouldn't get any money for the work until 2010," said Harmon. "Everyone would like to see something happen before then someplace, but you have to have money to pay for the work."

According to the road commission's estimates, there are over 61 miles of county roads that need either wedge and overlay work or complete reconstruction.

In South Arm Township, the steering committee has already identified a pair of township projects that could be done in conjunction with the county work and provide an opportunity to buy materials in greater quantity. Initial plans would schedule the township plans to work on Miles Road at the same time as the county plans to fix Ellsworth Road, and similarly schedule work on Dutchman Bay Road at the same time as work on Peninsula Road.

"If we can coordinate these projects together, we can save the tax payer money," said Harmon.

Harmon added he hopes to schedule the work on Beaver Island's Kings Highway at the same time as the airport's re-paving work in order to save on the significant transportation costs of hauling materials to the island.

John Vrondran chairs the steering committee and said although he wants to see work begin quickly, he warned against letting any additional aid slip through the county's grasp.

"We're trying to get in at the most economical time. We could get some money from the stimulus package for this and we're waiting to see where Obama is going," he said. "We want to know all of our options before we do anything. We have time and we're meeting with both state and federal representatives."

Looking for increased government aid to fund some of the road improvements in Charlevoix County is nothing new. Last year, Rep. Kevin Elsenheimer, R-Bellaire, and Sen. Jason Allen, R-Traverse City, sent a joint letter to MDOT's director Kirk Steudle urging the state to assume jurisdiction of Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

Others are not as confident in looking to either state or federal government for help.

"You can win an election on hope, but you can't build a road with it," said County Commissioner Chris Christensen. "We have to work with what we have not what we wish we had."

Harmon pointed out that with prices on asphalt coming down, there is an opportunity to stretch the dollars set aside for the work further.

"Last fall, prices were running over $70 a ton, for this season it's any where between $55 and $60 a ton," he said. "Asphalt is an oil based project and it's coming down. We could see it drop some more, who knows?"

City council balances proposed budget
Public hearing on financials in two weeks

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Charlevoix City Council managed to balance their proposed 2009-2010 budget during a work session last week.

A mix of cuts to various budget items in addition to a series of proposed fee increases allowed the cities fiscal fathers to eliminate what would have amounted to a nearly $90,000 deficit in the city's budget.

"I think this puts us in a better position because we really don't know what's going to happen this summer with revenues," said city treasurer Rick Brandt.

While the budget will not be finalized until after the 7 p.m., Feb. 16 public hearing has been held and council votes on the final measure, following are cuts to the proposed expenditures:

- Drop from $15,000 to $5,000 for aerial photography.

- $2,000 reduction in spending on promotion;
- Remove funding for the historical district group for a total savings of $5,000;
- Reduction in number of lifeguards from nine to six for a savings of $12,000;
- $30,000 in contingency funds from the general budget.

City council increased potential revenue through the following measures:

- Raise parking ticket fees from $2 for basic infractions to $5 for basic infractions for an estimated revenue generation of $7,800 annually;
- Increase fees to place banners at each end of town to $25; nonprofits would still not be charged, but they would be required to obtain a permit;
- Airport parking fees would be increased from $2 to $3; and a passenger fee of $1 per flyer for an estimated revenue generation of $15,000.

"I think the bottom line is they were able to end up $1,800 to the good rather than $87,500 to the negative," Brandt said. "So, I was very happy with that."

The next budget work session is scheduled for 5 p.m., Feb. 10 in council chambers, city hall.

The public hearing will occur at the previously stated date and time in the same location.

OPINIONS yours & ours

You can be too thin

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

I thought the weather forecaster said no more than an inch of snow expected since the lakes were frozen over.

Five new inches of the fluffy stuff tells me there was an open puddle somewhere along the way.

I was quickly packing my car throwing in rented movies, recycling and things to be mailed when I accidentally tossed my car keys along with the items.

My efforts to combine shopping trips and errands to save fuel and the earth from my emissions didn't start out well this morning.

Unfortunately the keys didn't make it into the car. I let out a heavy sigh—okay maybe I said something else.

It was entertainment for passersby as I sifted through snow while my car was already running from the bump of the remote starter when it hit ice.

My act of saving time turned into more time and I realized maybe I was spreading myself a bit too thin trying to get too many things done in so little time.

We all are spreading ourselves thin these days with covering our expenses and donating to every worthy cause that's out there.

Trying to help others is a good thing but narrowing that focus is better.

I like to remind the many foundations in the area that they need to focus on cutting the number of projects they support and prioritize spending more on those they select to focus upon. Short term relief or providing support to the same projects end lessly doesn't solve the financial need of those requesting money. Choose a mid-range time frame and provide more monies during this time period.

With so many requests we can't respond to all, so be selective and go deep. Sometimes decisions are based on emotion rather than available research.

I applaud Char-Em United Way's effort to require outcome based information from those seeking funds to determine where monies will be spent.

It follows the theme set by the president that we need to keep everyone accountable.

Our current financial crisis will be behind us in the years to come; five more years by my guess.

Here is my take on helping each other economically for repairs, cooking, baby-sitting and other assistance when you can't afford someone to help or repair. Share your skills where you can.

It's a good way to get to know others in the community especially since we presently are so bundled up we can't recognize each other. Another idea is to freeze the use of your credit card for one month and only use it in an emergency and see what your new bill looks like.

When you pay bills such as electric and heat round up to the next dollar and skip the cents so the next bill will show a credit.

It may save money and psychologically I like seeing credit on our bills. How many magazines have you piled up that you say you'll get around to reading?

Now is the time to cancel those subscriptions. Try having breakfast for an evening meal one night a week; it will reduce your food bill.

For those of you with young children, pack snacks and drinks to go so you won't have to stop and pay the high prices on beverages along the way.

There are always free activities at our Charlevoix Public Library that can meet anyone's needs.

Put your families hair, if not monthly, then every other haircut.

Maybe you have a friend who cuts hair and they'll do it in exchange for a meal or whatever skill you can trade off.

We can do our part by skipping the plastic surgery too. I hear in Yakima, Washington those surgeries are still up even in times of financial stress. Guess they want to look good even in the tough times.

Then again I hear the people living there really are too thin for all this cold weather.

Round Lake Bookstore has a sign on the front door encompassed by a red circle with a line through it which reads: "I absolutely refuse to participate in the recession."

"When America catches a cold, Michigan gets pneumonia."

I'm not advocating running off to the Dakotas, but I think a couple things need to be stated about mass hysteria—and that's really what low consumer confidence is—a recession is the perfect time for companies to trim the proverbial fat. Bob standing around the copy machine a little too long?

Bill napping at his desk? Joe working on side projects at his terminal? Maybe they could get away with such tomfoolery two years ago, but times is tight.

And, how many companies have simply used the excuse of the slumping economy to cut staff as a move to increase profit?

Not to mention—though I suppose I am—the unknown number of people who used the so-called housing crisis as an excuse to let a bank eat their unpaid burden?

I run into enough people on a weekly basis who say they are flush with work—any plumber among them—to know that not all of us have fallen for the hysterical cries of Armageddon.

As my old mother would say after one of us were injured or failed a task, "Pick yourself up by your boot straps, dust yourself off and get back out there."

Spring is just around the corner, we'll have a full summer uninterrupted by park construction, and gas is still less than $2.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I'm going to find out where Dianne got her sign.

I absolutely refuse to participate in a recession

THE CRYING TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

"I absolutely refuse to participate in a recession."

The bad news is the credit market slowed, jobs have been cut and some of us are uncertain about our collective financial futures.

The good news is there is good news.

People are working; people are spending; people are expanding; and people are buying homes.

A recent discussion with a banker acquaintance of mine revealed that the rate of people refinancing their homes has shot up eight-fold.

And, while some people have lost their house due to simple misfortune, irresponsibility or circumstances out of their control, real-estate is selling—slowly, but it's selling.

A realtor friend of mine said he thinks we've seen the bottom of the market, and while we're not looking at a home-selling boom in the immediate future, it may have stabilized.

GM announced during the North American International Auto Show recently that they will open a production facility for the lithium-ion batteries needed to run the GM Volt electric car.

The Gerber Products-Nestlé Nutrition company plans to pump $75 million over a decade into its Fremont campus. In addition to retaining 1,100 Michigan jobs, it is expected to create 200 more jobs.

Look in your local classified section and you'll see help wanted for everything from truck mechanic and nurse to bikini oil wrestlers—no kidding; and, no,

I'm not applying.

Our own Beaver Island has secured a Boston Marathon qualifier foot race for next fall—a move that is sure to entice sight-seers, tourists, racers and fans to the area.

Hey, I get it. As a full-time doom and gloomer I know how easy it is to fall into the trap of oversimplification when thinking about the tough times we're facing.

I hear people say things like "There are no jobs," "nobody's buying houses" and "nobody's lending."

But, the truth is, people are surviving, there is no bread line on Bridge Street and mother mercy, every time I go to the store, it's packed with people buying goods.

One of the biggest factors, and problems, in this so-called recession is consumer confidence. As you may already have discovered, consumer confidence is low.

We need to fix that. Just like you can talk yourself into a panic attack or a deep, dark depression, you can talk your way into an economic recession.

The guy at the coffee shop says business is slow; you go off to work and tell your coworkers the coffee shop is tanking; they go off and tell their friends the coffee shop is closing; people stop going to the coffee shop because, hell, he's shutting his doors anyway; and so it goes.

I'm not saying we can smile, chat or hope our way out of a less than desirable situation, but even a gloomy Gus like me has to see all the good that's going on around us.

Need more proof the earth hasn't fallen off its hinges? A New York Times piece on North Dakota asks "Recession? What Recession?"

OK, so they've got a $1.2 billion budget surplus, a booming economy and just about the lowest unemployment in the country—we know Michigan is faring worse than most other states, but it shows that growth is happening, even if it's not right here.

As my father-in-law would say,

LETTERS to the editor

ECONOMIC WOES FUEL WINTER BLUES

Editor:

Last month economists finally told us something most people in northern Michigan already knew: the U.S. economy has been in a recession since December 2007.

Bad economic news is not welcome any time of the year, but the ongoing financial crisis may be causing additional stress during the winter months when frigid temperatures, long periods of darkness and the after effects of stress-inducing holidays can lead people to feel profound sadness.

And the uncertainty of government leaders about how long the crisis will last, or what it will take to turn the economy around, can only exacerbate people's feelings of uneasiness.

Sometimes referred to as the "winter blues," people's deepening feelings of anxiety can often spread to the entire family. Marital fights flare up as spouses argue about overdue holiday bills and ask themselves "What do we do now?"

Children hearing parents argue and sensing family tension experience their own emotional upset.

A recent poll conducted by the American Psychological Association found that almost half of all adults said they are increasingly stressed about their ability to provide for their family's basic needs. In fact, about eight out of ten adults said that the economy is a significant cause of stress, up from 66 percent in April.

Here at home, it is difficult to believe that anyone is unaffected. From auto mechanics with fewer cars to work on, to stay-at-home parents wondering if they need to find jobs, to others worrying about layoffs, almost everyone is experiencing increased levels of stress and anxiety.

To help cope with what appears to be a long-term economic downturn, people can follow some simple guidelines.

Exercise, maintain a healthy diet and a normal sleep schedule—physical and mental health are connected.

Take charge of your immediate environment. If you're troubled by media coverage and conversations about the worsening economy, change channels, turn the page, or excuse yourself from the conversation.

Plan for the future as much as you can. The more action you can take, the more in control you'll be and the less stressed you'll feel.

Try to take a long view. Realize that it may be bad yesterday, it may be bad today, but that things over time will get better.

Volunteer and look for ways to answer needs in your local community. Helping others will give you a sense of accomplishment and take your mind off your own worries.

Focus on positive aspects of your life. Look to family and friends to support you.

If sadness and anxiety begin to adversely affect normal functioning—relationships, work, sleep, appetite and sex—professional help may be needed.

GOOD-BYE BC-J

Editor:

You may have heard that the Citizen & Journal (Boyer Citizen-Journal) has closed its doors, as of today (Wednesday, Jan. 28).

They did not know it until last night.

So, Neighbors Column is also finished, I am sorry to say. But, guess I will look at it as I am finally retiring.

I want to say more than "thank you," more than "I have appreciated your support all these years"—it really has been great knowing you, your families, your accomplishments; even just hearing from you, e-mail or over the phone, for over 30 long, happy, busy years.

Sad that our town no longer has a paper; but, who knows, these tough times can't last forever.

When something hits bottom, the only way out is up, so be of good cheer and God Bless you all.

Nancy Northup of the Neighbors

THANK YOU

Dear Mr. Knutson,

Thank-you so much for your article ("Gaza and us") of Jan. 28.

You clearly showed what a precarious position Israel is in and why it was necessary to take the steps they took to try to insure their safety.

I hope and pray we see a lasting peace during our lifetime.

Breathe Owl Breathe and NWA alumnus to play Northwest Academy hosting a band program fundraiser

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Folk group Breathe Owl Breathe and former Northwest Academy student Tammy Sundelius will join forces later this month for a concert to raise money for the school's band program.

Tickets are $12 in advance, $10 for students, $15 at the door or $35 for a family of four or more.

"Our musical department has several expenditures during the year that we need to cover," said Northwest band program director Gary Stutzman. "Music is vital to the education of our students and it is important that we maintain these instruments in good repair."

While students may provide their own respective instruments, the public school academy offers all students the opportunity to play an instrument.

"When I first started teaching here in 1996, we did an instrument purchase and bought all background instruments like baritone, tubas, baritone sax, tenor sax, bass clarinet—the bigger color instruments," Stutzman said. "We're getting 13 years old now and it's time we were replacing some of those instruments."

The evening of music will feature violin virtuoso Sundelius, who has been writing music since she was 9 years old.

"I had a rough childhood but it was in those lowest moments when I discovered my true love for music," Sundelius said. "I was adopted into a Christian home when I was 11 and my mother enrolled me in piano lessons and I sort of took off from there with my singing and song writing."

She added, "I was pretty much raised in church and that is where my singing career really began. I knew I loved the stage from the very first time I stepped onto it and sang into the microphone."

Sundelius' mother told her that, if she learned the piano well, she would allow Tammy to take the violin lessons she so desperately desired.

"So for Christmas 2003, she bought me a violin and enrolled me into Northwest Academy my senior year for lessons," said Sundelius, who had been previously homeschooled. "I put together my first cassette when I was 13. My second album came out when I was 17, and I just released this last one, "The Simple Things," in April of 2008, which is an album of songs I've written."

Grades four through eight are required to take band class at the school.

"I think kids get a great deal of satisfaction out of perfecting their part," Stutzman said. "My goal is that everybody grow in their own individual enjoyment of music."

He added, "Music is very important to the development of the youth because it uses repetition and a very structured approach."

Stutzman said people of all ages will enjoy the evening of music.

"Tammy's a very gifted individual and she accompanies herself on the piano in a very intriguing way," Stutzman said. "She's writing music to the poetry she writes, and when she sings, she does it in a very provocative way—it really makes you think."

The concert will begin at 7 p.m., Feb. 19 at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix; doors open at 6:30 p.m.

According to Breathe Owl Breathe, composed of Micah Muddaugh, Andréa Moreno-Beals, and Trevor Hobbs, their layering of guitar, cello, banjo, drum set and harmonizing vocals, as well as some unusual musical uses of instruments and other found objects, results in a very creative and original sound.

OBITUARIES

Max H. Smith:
Apr. 19, 1913 - Jan. 30, 2009

Longtime Petoskey High School band director Max Hastings Smith of Central Lake, and formerly of Petoskey, died peacefully Jan. 30, 2009 at Sunnybank Assisted Living in Charlevoix.

Mr. Smith was band director at Petoskey Public Schools for 32 years and at Charlevoix Schools for 7 years, turning out generations of instrumentalists. He also arranged the school song for both Petoskey High School and Charlevoix High School.

Max was born on April 19, 1913 in Lapeer County, to Rufus William and Teena (Hastings) Smith. Growing up in Sandusky, Michigan, he discovered his love of music at Sandusky Public Schools, where he first played saxophone and then clarinet.

He graduated from Michigan State College (now Michigan State University) in 1936, with a B.M. degree in Band, Cadet Band, and Dance Orchestra. During his time at MSU he was a student of the world renowned Leonard Falcone. While attending MSU, Max was also a member of the Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity.

After graduation Max accepted a position as instrumental music teacher and band director for Charlevoix Public Schools and the Charlevoix City Band. While there he met his wife Ione Smith who was the biology and chemistry teacher.

They married on August 24, 1940 at Ione's family cottage on Torch Lake.

Max became band director at Petoskey Public Schools in 1943.

During his 32 year career the band program grew from 25 young musicians to over 300. His hands were awarded the Division I rating 41 times in the District Band and Orchestra Festivals.

In addition, Max served as an adjudicator at state and district level festivals throughout his career. From 1936 to 1943 Max was a faculty member and clarinetist for the Bay View Association Conservatory of Music and Music Festival under the direction of Fred Patton. During those same years, Max also enjoyed serving as director of the Charlevoix City Band.

Max was a past member of the First Presbyterian Church of Petoskey where he served as both Elder and Deacon. After retiring in 1975, Max and Ione moved to Central Lake. There he enjoyed gardening and shared his vegetables and daffodils with the community. He also continued his love of music by serving as Bell Choir Director for the First Congregational Church.

He was preceded in death by his wife of 49 years, Ione, his sister Lois and his parents.

Survivors include his daughter Meryl (Paul) Schave of Howell, three sons: Brook (Jean) of Crystal Falls and

Smith

Torch Lake: Hugh (Suzie) of Royal Oak, and Clark (Sally) Smith of Petoskey. Also surviving are 13 grandchildren: Steven (Kris) Schoen, Kevin Schoen, Jennifer (Dustin) Slater, Emily Schoen, Blake (Suzi) Smith, Sara (Bob) Batzold, Nancy Smith, Todd Smith, Laurel (Brian) Gietzen, Scott Smith, Kelly Smith, Angela Smith, Bradley Smith, and eight great-grandchildren.

The family would like to thank the staff of Sunnybank Assisted Living of Charlevoix, Bayfront Home Health Care, Hospice of the Northwest Community Health Agency and the Commission on Aging for the loving and skilled care they provided Max during his last days. Additionally, the family thanks friends from the First Congregational Church of Central Lake and the Central Lake community who devoted many hours enhancing Max's life.

Funeral services will take place at 11 a.m., Thursday, Feb. 5, at the First Congregational Church of Central Lake, with Pastor David Wood officiating. The family will receive friends from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 4, at the Central Lake Chapel of Mortenson Funeral Homes. Interment will take place this spring at Southern Cemetery, Central Lake Township.

Prep skiing: Harbor girls ride strong GS to Lake Michigan win

The Harbor Springs girls' ski team put forth a solid effort in giant slalom in earning a Lake Michigan Conference meet victory Thursday, Jan. 30 at Nub's Nob.

The Rams, who placed four skiers in the top 10 in GS, won the six-team meet with 46 points. Traverse City St. Francis was second with 56, followed by Boyne City, 92; Grayling, 131; Charlevoix-East Jordan, 176; and Elk Rapids, 203.

St. Francis won the boys' meet with 53 points, while Boyne City was second, 62; and Harbor Springs was third, 89. Charlevoix-East Jordan, 157, was fifth.

Harbor's Andi Shepherd won the girls' GS in 51.79 seconds, and she was runner-up in slalom. Boyne's Cristina Roland won the slalom in 57.30. Shepherd's time was 59.24.

Harbor's Drake Doherty won the boys' slalom in 56.37, while Kaleb McNamara of Boyne won the GS in 50.07.

Also for the Harbor girls in GS, Cooper Dendel was second, Cecile Walsh was seventh, Kana Olsen placed ninth, and Morgan Mooradian was 13th.

"The girls team rose to the occasion and skied solidly in slalom and then dominated the field in GS," said Harbor coach Jane Ramer, whose team finished first in GS with 18 points. "They went into this meet missing Alli Mooradian, who was injured at the Traverse City Invitational, but they are all stepping it up and showing some depth."

In slalom, Dendel was fourth, Mooradian was 10th, Walsh, 12th, and Olsen, 16th.

McNamara paced the Boyne boys with his win in GS, while Mike Corringht was third in GS and fifth in slalom. McNamara also was sixth in slalom.

Also for the Ramblers, Tom Hague was 10th in GS, 11th in slalom, Dean Hague placed 10th in slalom, 17th GS; Andy Blossom was 16th in GS, 18th slalom; and Paul Solomon placed 19th in slalom, 31st GS.

Harbor's Doherty followed his victory in slalom by taking second in GS, while Harbor's Dan Davis was ninth in GS and Robert Mathews, 12th slalom. Mathews also placed 15th in GS.

Also for the Harbor boys, Greg Gallagher was 12th in GS and Evan Maunders, 13th GS. In slalom for the Rams, Jeff Parson was 16th and Davis, 32nd.

"The boys team skied well in the GS, but had some issues in the slalom," Ramer said. "They needed to find the finish in slalom."

Boyne City's Roland placed a team-best third in GS, while Morgan Harding was fifth in GS and Kaitlyn Bohnet, ninth GS. Also in GS for the Rambler girls, Brenna Cheadle was 27th, while Megan Cytacki was 30th and Kelsey Kruzel, 31st.

In slalom for the Rambler girls, Kruzel was 14th, followed by Bohnet, 17th; Harding, 19th; Cheadle, 20th; and Cytacki, 25th.

Justin Williams led the Charlevoix-East Jordan boys as he placed a team-best ninth in slalom. Williams was also 18th in GS.

Other Charlevoix-East Jordan boys skiers were Tanner Fisher, 14th GS, 26th slalom; Paul Stolt, 27th GS, 29th slalom; Brian Shuter, 30th slalom; Luke Hawley, 30th GS; Jordan Haden, 34th slalom, 36th GS; and Joe Hudakastu, 34th GS, 35th slalom.

For the Charlevoix-East Jordan girls, Emily Bajko was 11th in GS, while Mary Gocha placed 18th in slalom.

Other Charlevoix-East Jordan girls' skiers were Jenna Kirby, 23rd slalom, 32nd GS; Amanda Fritsch, 25th GS, 27th slalom; Christina Russell, 26th slalom, 34th GS; and Ellen Boyer, 31st slalom, 36th GS.

Rayders hold on: top Red Devils in league contest

Charlevoix has had a knack in the past decade or so of pulling out games in the fourth quarter.

The Rayders went to that well again on Wednesday, Jan. 28.

Charlevoix outscored East Jordan, 17-5, in the final eight minutes in posting a hard-fought 56-44 win to remain perfect in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"East Jordan had a great game plan," said Charlevoix coach Keith Haske, whose team is 9-1 overall, 6-0 in the league, and ranked fifth in the Associated Press Class C state poll. "They played a couple defenses we struggled with. I thought they played a great game. I really did. I thought we were fortunate to win."

"We just hung around long enough to win. It was tough; it was hard work all night."

Jon Putman scored 15 points, Tyler Jones had 11 and Brock Yenglin added 10 to lead Charlevoix. Weston Bryan added 10 rebounds and seven steals.

Michael Becker scored 12 points and James Brown added 10 for the Red Devils. 7-4, 4-2 Darryl Bingham scored nine points and grabbed 14 rebounds for East Jordan, and Michael Hines had nine points and 10 rebounds.

The game turned early in the fourth quarter on a six-point Charlevoix possession.

With the score tied, 41-41, East Jordan was whistled for a personal foul and a technical foul. Thomas Parrish and Putman made all four free throws, then Bryan scored on the ensuing possession to give the Rayders a 47-41 advantage.

"That was definitely the swing point, no doubt about it," Haske said.

East Jordan cut its deficit to three, 47-44, but the 3-pointer was the Red Devils' final score of the night. Charlevoix made 13 of its 19 fourth-quarter free throw attempts, while the Red Devils were 0-for-5 from the charity stripe in the final eight minutes.

"Definitely there was a lot of effort and lot heart out of the kids," East Jordan coach Darrin Weber said.

Joe Filipiak scored 21 points and Josh Nitchman added 17 to lead Charlevoix to a 69-61 win in the JV game. For East Jordan, Dustin Mellos had 13 points, 10 rebounds; and Derek Boyer scored 13 points.

High school girls' basketball: Rayders remain two up in Lake Michigan Conference

Charlevoix put together a fine defensive effort in the middle two quarters Thursday, Jan. 29 and as a result, extended its girls' basketball win streak to six.

The Rayders held East Jordan to just six second-quarter points en route to 58-36 Lake Michigan Conference win over East Jordan.

The Rayders are 10-2 overall and 7-0 league, two games ahead of Kalkaska and Traverse City St. Francis, who share second place at 5-2. East Jordan, which lost its third straight, is 3-9, 2-5.

Tammy Potter had 18 points including a pair of 3-pointers to lead the Rayders, while Erica Faust added 13 points and Shauna Spencley had 12.

Charlevoix trailed 12-11 after the first, but built a 29-18 lead by the end of the second quarter. The middle quarters got us," East Jordan coach Sean Ferguson said. "They beat us up on the boards and at half time, we had just three defensive rebounds. Most of their points in the first half came on putbacks or from the free throw line."

"We just needed to correct that problem."

For East Jordan, Grace Howes had 10 points, nine rebounds and four steals, while Tanner McCune and Andi Chew had nine points apiece.

"I thought we played well," Ferguson said. "The effort was there and that's what we wanted. We played with more enthusiasm."

A Northwest Michigan Landmark is "NEW" Again

Resort Township's NEW East Park scheduled to open this summer.

The wonderful truth about our Northwest Michigan home is that it is a fun and beautiful place to live. This summer, home will be even better.

For several years, environmental work has been underway at Resort Township's East Park to address remaining problems from the old cement plant that used to operate along the Lake Michigan shore.

The view of the bay from the NEW East Park is spectacular and the redeveloped park will soon become a Northwest Michigan favorite. The work hasn't been easy or quick, but it has paid off and the NEW East Park is scheduled to open this summer. That opening will be a major environmental achievement.

Through its efforts with the Little Traverse Bay Environmental Project, CMS Land continues to do the work needed to protect valuable community resources such as the bay and the NEW East Park.

As a result, one of America's most beautiful public parks will reopen this summer, so kids and families will have just one more reason to love this beautiful place that we all call home.

OPENING SOON: The NEW East Park

Cleaning our shore.  Protecting our bay.

IRS e-file, a fast way to your refund

Use care in choosing a tax preparer; you may incur some charges depending on your circumstances

Friday when the Internal Revenue Service flips the switch to begin accepting electronic returns, the number streaming in from Michigan will likely be on the increase. And many will probably be filed using the IRS's new online, fillable tax forms.

The IRS expects nearly 70 percent of Michiganders to e-file this year, either through their preparers or on their own. That would mean that close to 3 million Michigan filers will have scrapped paper and pen in favor of the computer mouse, an increase of about 8 percent over last year.

Filers will have more reasons than ever to make the switch to e-file with the IRS announcing the Jan. 16 opening of an expanded e-file program, highlighted by new tax forms that can be filled in and e-filed online, a feature that will allow virtually anyone to e-file at no cost.

"With eight out of 10 taxpayers in Michigan getting money back, more taxpayers than ever will want a fast refund this year," said IRS spokesman Luis D.

Garcia, "E-filing isn't just fast, it provides practically error-free tax returns and gives a confirmation of receipt by the IRS."

According to Garcia, taxpayers who combine e-filing with direct deposit usually get a refund in 10 days or less. Filers who owe taxes can also enjoy the accuracy, ease and safety of e-filing now and can still keep their money until the last minute by authorizing an April 15 direct debit to the IRS.

"People looking to hold down the cost of filing their taxes need to use IRS Free File," Garcia said. Now all taxpayers can file online for free.

For those with Adjusted Gross Incomes of $56,000 or less in 2008—70 percent of all taxpayers—Free File offers 20 different software companies that can assist taxpayers. Most Michigan taxpayers qualify for free online tax preparation and e-filing through Free File.

For everybody else, the online fillable forms can be completed and submitted right online to the IRS for free. While this method does not provide the interview screening and assistance that most tax preparation software has, it does provide the same speed and security. The IRS began the e-file program in 1986 as a pilot project in three cities: Cincinnati, Phoenix and Raleigh-Durham, N.C.

That year, there were 25,000 tax returns filed electronically. The e-file program expanded nationwide in 1990 and 4.2 million tax

Island Airways: now Operating FAA-approved air ambulance

ELAINE WEST SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

On Monday, Jan. 12, Island Airways began operating a Federal Aviation Administration-approved Air Ambulance service. Stable patients will be transported to the airport of their choice on the mainland where they can be met by a ground ambulance to complete the transport to a hospital.

The process to gain approval from the FAA was a complicated and time consuming project. "We started on this in mid summer of last year," said Island Airways President Angel Welke.

Neal Boyle, Director of Maintenance at Island Airways, began the process by contacting other air charters offering Air Ambulance services for information on their operations. One company in the state of Washington, strangely enough also named "Island Airways," was extremely helpful in providing him with insight into the certification process and practical considerations.

Boyle pursued FAA approval of a stretcher designed to fit inside specially configured Britten Norman Islanders. The steel framed stretcher locks in on tracks in the planes, also allowing for an attendant seat to be utilized by the paramedic assisting in the patient transport. The front row of seats can also be left inside the plane, allowing space for family members to accompany the patient.

The stretcher weighs about 80 pounds and is designed to accept a patient on a backboard.

It takes two crew members only about three minutes to lock the stretcher assembly into place. All crew members have been trained for the procedure. Boyle wrote the training plan and updated their operation manual, both required for the FAA approval.

Paul and Angel Welke funded the engineering, certification and purchase of the stretcher. "It was a substantial investment," said Angel Welke. "We did it for the company but mostly for the Island community."

Formerly, one difficulty faced by patients being transported to the mainland was getting reimbursement for the service from their insurance company. "Now, with FAA approval, upwards of 50 to 60 percent of patients will be reimbursed," said Welke.

She went on to explain that Island Airways will not be involved in direct billing to the insurance company for the Air Ambulance service but will provide patients with a copy of the official FAA certification form which many insurance policies will honor.

"We'll do what we can to assist our customers," said Welke.

Island Airways also plans to offer their Air Ambulance service to other remote locations in the northern Michigan area.

Sunken shipwreck claimed

thought it had already taken the steps necessary to indicate interest in the ship. State officials seemed to have taken it as a sign no one was interested.

However, France has indicated interest prior to the most recent filing, Libert explained. "France stated its claim of interest in the earlier proceeding several years ago through the U.S. Department of State," he stated in an e-mailed response to questions. "It confirms what Great Lakes Exploration has been saying all along: The shipwreck is not abandoned and is owned by the people of France."

It is impossible to say whether the state will oppose France's claim to ownership of the vessel since, despite attempts by both e-mail and phone, officials in the Michigan Attorney General's office did not respond.

The state, which only last month questioned whether the debris Libert found is Le Griffon, has filed for the case to be dismissed. Great Lakes Exploration had until today, Wednesday, Feb. 4, to respond to the challenge in court.

Robol said the matter was otherwise pretty much at a standstill.

"Because of the nature of the location, there wouldn't be a lot going on anyway," he said. "I think the ideal situation is if the parties can work together to come up with a joint program to explore the shipwreck site and determine whether, in fact, it is the Griffon."

Despite the state's stance that the wreck is both embedded and abandoned, Libert said U.S. citizens have the civil right to apply admiralty law in the investigation of unidentified historic shipwreck sites.

"This right is protected by the U.S. Constitution and many years of case law under the public trust doctrine," he stated, adding that the Abandoned Shipwreck (ASA) Act of 1987 encourages cooperation among governments and the private sector.

"Unfortunately, the State of Michigan has never seriously attempted to comply with the ASA [sic] guidelines," Libert stated. "In addition, the State of Michigan has no formal, written policy; no administrative rules; and no statewide plans for either the management of our underwater preserve system or the conduct of underwater archaeology in Michigan."

He added, "And, the one Michigan statute dealing specifically with historic shipwrecks applies only to abandoned shipwrecks—it does not technically apply to unidentified sites where abandonment has not been established."

Libert closed by saying that, since Michigan manages more coastal waters than any other state except Alaska, they certainly should have at least one staff member with maritime and admiralty law experience.

Christensen closed by thanking the two for their years of service.

While the bulk of the board supported the terminations, District 1 commissioner Shirlene Thyp and District Five commissioner Bob Drebenstedt voted against removing Doty and Easley.

Building and safety department employee Robert Hilton is now acting as interim building department head and a subcontractor will fill Easley's spot as electrical inspector until commissioners sort their options.

Neither Doty or Easley returned call by press time.

Economy forces a look at employee work ethic

Easley averaged inspections on 47 percent and 59 percent respectively of days worked per month. Those numbers contrast with fellow employees who worked individual percentages of 79, 83, 82, 86, 90 and 84 over the same 36 month period.

Christensen declined to detail every reason why the two were released from employment citing that it was a personnel issue and he did not want to cause the two any more hardship than they might already be enduring, but he did issue the following statement:

"This decision (to terminate Doty and Easley) was based on employee's performance statistics covering the last three years, budget decisions made by the department, and overall work environment," he stated in an undated letter. "These two were long-time employees and it was a hard decision to make, but it was the best decision for Charlevoix County."

Christensen closed by thank-

School vandal case to trial

Judge denies third felony charge

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Former Charlevoix High School student Austin Wilhelm will go to trial for his alleged role in the May 2008 vandalism at the school.

The Feb. 3 preliminary examination featured a high-profile attorney, a witness flown in from another state and allegations of tampering with evidence—elements generally reserved for Tinseltown crime capers.

But, said Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jaroma, "This is not your average vandalism case. This case is unlike any other because the investigation continues up to, and through, trial."

While pursuing two charges against 19-year-old Wilhelm: breaking and entering with intent, a 10-year felony; and malicious destruction to a building, damage of more than $1,000 but less than $20,000, a five-year felony—Jaroma also tried to convince the court that someone tampered with evidence on May 21, which was the day the destruction of the building and trades project house was discovered.

Jaroma made a motion to add the charge of evidence tampering to the case, but the judge denied it based on the testimony of officers who could not recall whether the item in question—a pair of paint-covered sweatpants seized and photographed at the Wilhelm residence—had been placed into its own bag or separated from other evidence gathered from the Wilhelm home.

Wilhelm's defense attorney Mary Beth Kur questioned several officers involved on why they waited so long—apparently nothing was done about the missing evidence until nearly a week ago—to become concerned about the so-called missing evidence. No clear answer was given.

The people in the Wilhelm house that day were questioned during the Feb. 3 preliminary exam and all three denied removing the evidence.

"I think it's important to note that the malicious destruction to a building, damage of more than $1,000 but less than $20,000, a five-year felony—Jaroma also tried to convince the court that someone tampered with evidence on May 21, which was the day the destruction of the building and trades project house was discovered."

She added, "I couldn't believe they wanted to add that after sitting on it for eight months and doing nothing about it."

The prosecutor's office believes Wilhelm entered through an unlocked window on the small modular project house which the Charlevoix High Author of an upcoming book about Castle Farms concert history Duane Roy is seen here with rock-n-roll legends Ozzy Osbourne on one of Roy's many visits to the Castle.

Canadian to author book of Castle concerts
Duane Roy muses on Charlevoix's rock-n-roll historyBY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Whether it was when he posed with Ozzy Osbourne or the time his mother was at the movies with Anthrax, Wawa, Ontario resident Duane Roy has many fond memories of Castle Farms.

The 39-year-old Canadian gold miner is currently compiling his favorite stories from the days when the castle meant rock and roll—and plenty of it.

"I've been to over 150 concerts in four countries, and the 10 shows I saw at the castle still are the greatest of my life," Roy said. "The Castle was the biggest thing in northern Ontario; it was a rite of passage to make the trek from Wawa and head south—the biggest adventure teenagers from Wawa could be a part of."

He added, "Basically, if you hadn't been to the Castle you weren't 'in.' When my buddies and I sit around and have a few beers the discussion is always about The Castle: 'Remember when: remember the time?' no matter how many times we retell the story, we laugh and reminisce."

Some of Roy's favorite concerts at the castle include Whitesnake, AC-DC, Judas Priest, Scorpions, David Lee Roth, Bon Jovi, Ozzy Osbourne, Poison and Aerosmith.

Roy said he began writing the book in 1987 when he attended his first concert at the castle.

"I felt the immediate attraction of the area, the people, and the history. The first search I ever did when I got the Internet was about Castle Farms and the bands that played there," he said. "I scoured the bootleg site for live recordings—which were very hard to find—and little pieces of information were filed away: ticket scans, pictures, stories, any little tidbit that I could find was filed for future use."

Roy hopes to have the work completed by midsummer, and said his work should reach a wide audience.

"Obviously any fans of the castle, from people who attended concerts there, fans of music in general and hopefully children of castle-goers who have heard the same stories over and over again can actually read stories from other people who have attended concerts," he said. "People who lived in the area and saw the madness of the music fans flocking to Charlevoix might be interested in reading what was going on there also."

Roy added, "Basically the fans of the Castle are writing the book. I'm compiling the best stories and they are the ones to be published; it's like a rock and roll scrapbook. There are so many incredible stories from the Castle, lifelong friends who met there, husbands and wives who met at Castle concerts, and I'm sure there were a few children conceived after Castle shows."

One of Roy's favorite memories involves his mother and rock legends Anthrax.

"My Mom drove two buddies and myself to our first Castle show—rock-and-roll, I know. It was July 28, 1987, and Whitesnake was actually playing what would be their first headlining show in North America at The Castle," he said.

"Anthrax and Autograph were opening, and at the time Anthrax was my absolute favorite band. My Mom dropped us off at the Castle at one in the afternoon and there was no one there at all. The roadies were just setting up and we watched Autograph do a short sound check, we went so early in hopes of seeing or meeting someone in Anthrax."

Roy added, "My Mom and little sister decided to take in a matinee—Police Academy something—and who's at the theater with my mother? You guessed it Anthrax."

Roy said that, in 1989, he got to meet Ozzy Osbourne and have a beer with him on his tour bus.

Currently, Roy is seeking the most interesting, wildest and humorous stories former castle concert goers, and townspeople, may have to tell.

"I'm looking for any information, pictures, articles, recordings, stories, ticket stubs and any and all stories. A common misconception is that I'm looking for only stories that show the good times at the castle, that's not necessarily the case," he said. "I would love to read stories from townspeople who didn't like the castle. I'm sure the huge flocks of concertgoers were bothersome at some point to everyone in the area, those are the stories I'd love to hear."

Contact Roy by e-mail at duaneeroy@yahoo.com

Join Roy's Facebook site "Fans Of The Old Castle Farms Music Amphitheatre" to post or look at pictures and swap stories with other fans.

"Drop me an e-mail even if it's only to mention you've been there and you had a great time," he said. "I'm open to all stories and I answer every e-mail."

Former city manager Mike Wiesner hired by Gladstone

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Following 23 years as Charlevoix city manager and not quite two years as the Boyne City public works director, Michael Wiesner is moving to Gladstone.

The former city manager will once again do what he loves doing best: Managing a city.

"I'd always enjoyed city management and always intended to get back into city management," Wiesner said. "We (he and his wife) went through a process of where we would like to be located and set a goal to be in northern Michigan on the Great Lakes and reasonably close to our cottage in Curtis."

He added, "And, it was fortunate when the Boyne City job came along. It kept us going in the area and the Boyne City job had been an excellent experience to be back in a department head position with a city manager's perspective."

Wiesner signed a contract to become Gladstone city manager with a starting salary of around $79,000 for the first six months.

Interim Gladstone City Manager Howard Keeton, who came out of retirement to hold down the proverbial fort until a new manager arrived, said Wiesner will begin employment officially on Feb. 23.

"We're looking forward to having him," Keeton said. "I think his experience will be good for Gladstone."

He added, "This is the third time I've come out of retirement. I'm ready to go back."

Wiesner's duties in Gladstone, which has a population of nearly 5,200 and rests on the shores of Little Bay De Noc, will be similar to the jobs he performed during his decades as Charlevoix city manager.

"I was always proud of my work in Charlevoix with its multiple services, electric, city beaches, city golf course and ski hills," he said. "They (Gladstone) have many of the same things, besides having a wireless system throughout the community, they have 1,000 acres of parks and a skateboard park—they have a lot of managed use."

Wiesner added, "I'm excited about going to work there."

Wiesner left as Charlevoix city manager in 2007 after several city council members voted to dismiss him, but Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. wanted people know just how big an impact Wiesner made on the local community.

The incredible upgrades that we did, especially on infrastructure definitely show Mike Wiesner left his mark on the city in a positive way," he said. "I think this is a good opportunity for him and I think he'll do them a great job."

According to Carlson, Wiesner was integral in numerous projects ranging from the electrical system and water treatment plant to the city hall addition and renovation and East Park.

Carlson added, "I would like to extend congratulations and wish him well."

Wiesner, who owns hunting property in Charlevoix, said he isn't going away forever.

Area hospitals collaborate to share resources

Northern Michigan Regional Health System, Mackinac Straits Hospital, Mackinac Island Medical Center, and the Beaver Island Rural Health Center today announced they are collaborating to build a resource-sharing network between providers of health care services.

This partnership will maintain the independence of each organization, while enhancing the sharing of best practices and high quality resources that are not often attainable alone. Other entities of Mackinac Straits Hospital, including the health care facilities in Naubinway and Bois Blanc Island, will also benefit from this newly formed network, providing coordinated access to high quality specialty care for residents and visitors of remote and rural environments.

"The goal of this partnership is to position the organizations for continued success in the delivery of high quality patient care in an increasingly more difficult economic environment," said Wendy Walker, MD, Northern Michigan Regional Health System Board Chair. "As the closest provider of advanced care not available locally, Northern Michigan Regional Health System will continue to improve referral, transfer, and information flow processes, and work to meet the service expectations of all regional providers."

The physicians of Northern Michigan Regional Health System have had a long-standing tradition of providing specialty care to residents and visitors of Mackinac County and the surrounding area, and this relationship will only strengthen this offering by the increased ability to identify specific community needs and provide additional specialty services to the area.

Ron Mitchell, Mackinac Straits Hospital Board Chair, stated, "The benefits of this partnership will include the provision of high quality, coordinated care, non-duplication of patient testing, utilization of shared information and clinical technology, collaboration on quality improvement efforts, and reduced cost of purchasing materials."

According to Connie Wojan, Board Chair of the Beaver Island Rural Health Center, "Seamless access to specialty care is critical to our population. Through a unanimous vote, our Board has approved a Memorandum of Understanding to pave the way for a more formalized affiliation in March. We look forward to the enhanced specialty care access this network provides," Margaret Doud, Chair of the Mackinac Island Medical Center and Island Mayor echoed those sentiments. "Our

OPINIONS yours & ours

'There's probably no god. Now stop worrying and enjoy your life.'

Atheist billboards do not diminish God

I am an Internet news junkie, and last week while trolling newspapers in the UK I ran across a link to a story on London's atheist buses.

What could this be about? Busloads of Brits on holiday riding around looking at scenery no one created?

The link appeared and there was a shot of a red London bus with this billboard advertisement filling the side: "There's probably no god. Now stop worrying and enjoy your life."

The advert is the handwork of the Atheist Campaign and now appears on over 800 buses throughout the UK. Last week the campaign extended the same message into London's tube stations.

The campaign began in October, 2008 when an atheist was offended by an advertisement on a London bus featuring the Bible quote, "When the Son of Man comes, will He find Faith on this Earth?"

A Web site URL ran beneath the quote, and when the atheist visited the site she learned that, as a non-believer, she would be "condemned to everlasting separation from God and spend all eternity in torment in hell."

Expressing her indignation in The Guardian, the atheist author suggested that if fellow non-believers would each chip in £5 they could begin an advertising campaign to counter the Christians.

Other newspapers picked up the story and bloggers embraced the notion of atheists flexing their free speech rights.

A target of £5500 was set for a new fund to buy billboards on buses. Atheists around the UK coughed up that amount in a matter of hours, and the campaign is now trying to decide where to spend the £135,000 that poured in from around the western world in the weeks following.

Cities in Europe, Australia, and America should be among the next to see the message.

Now, I am not particularly put off by the atheist's exercise of their fundamental human right to speak freely: I reserve the same right for myself and like-minded believers. Democracy demands that I defend their right to speak as a way of ensuring my own, even though I disagree with what they have to say.

Nor am I particularly surprised: There has always been an element in western civilization that uses great intellect to acquire great knowledge, and then erroneously assumes they have great wisdom.

The Bible speaks of these pseudo-intellects, as well—see, for example, Psalm 14:1 and Proverbs 1:7—so I doubt God is surprised to see a few red bus billboards denying His existence. Hardly the first time, it would seem.

And, anyway, a few misguided souls renting space on a bus does not in any way diminish who God is, what He has done in creating and sustaining the universe, or even how much He loves them.

While God is apparently competing for our attention he does not appear to need our approval. He is God, and by definition He is beyond our ability to understand. What I find most confusing is how these great intellectuals, when they run up against someone or something that is beyond their ability to comprehend or explain, choose instead to simply deny its existence, as if one could look at life around us and seriously conclude it all sprang into being through some happy cosmic coincidence.

For these folks any explanation for the complexity and interrelated dependence of the universe will do, no matter how preposterous.

Any explanation, that is, except that of an intelligent creator operating beyond our ability to ever understand.

I don't fear these people, and I don't dislike them.

Rather, I find myself having compassion for them because I remember a time in my life when I, too, was one of those hollow thinkers ready to embrace any form of spirituality except Jesus Christ.

I know now the work Jesus did in me, and I remember how He pursued me even while He was protecting me from my own stupidity.

I can see how He has loved me, and I know that the desire of His heart is that the people donating money for bus billboards could know that in their lives, as well. The challenge for us Christians is how to show these folks the love of Christ, and, yes, even the tragic consequences of a decision to reject God and deny His very existence, without using the Bible like a club.

I mean, there has got to be a better way to introduce someone to Jesus than to make the very first words out of our mouths something like "see things my way or you're going to burn in hell!"

Until we figure that out, I think we'd better stop renting space on the side of a bus.

LETTERS to the editor

WILHELM INNOCENT
Editor:

The stories published in local papers concerning the vandalism at the Charlevoix High School building trades house have relied heavily on statements from the prosecuting attorney.

They have been prejudicial against Austin Wilhelm both in what was printed and in information that did not make it into the story. I attended the preliminary examination and have studied the file from the prosecuting attorney.

Yes, Austin turned himself in at the sheriff's office to be arrested. This was by appointment. It is in no way an admission of guilt.

The vandalism was discovered by Austin and another student after they were sent from the shop out to the house by the teacher, Mr. Cerna, to cut lumber on a chop saw located there. They reported back to the teacher immediately.

The teacher then took his class with him out to the house and they all went in. There was a puddle of wet paint in front of the door. Several students, including Austin, stepped in it and got paint on their shoes. The teacher then left the students alone in the house for several minutes while he went to report to others.

Austin was questioned at school by Deputy Wheat. Other students who had paint on shoes or clothes were also interviewed by deputies. Austin was asked about paint on the top of his shoe and the cuff of his jeans. He was cooperative. Afterward, because the school was on "lockdown", he was told not to leave the room.

The deputy returned after a while to the room where Austin was still waiting and began to interrogate in a more accusatory manner. Austin asked if he was a suspect and the deputy's response led him to believe that this was the case. He then did exactly what anyone should do if accused of a crime, he asked to call his attorney. Yes, he was upset when Officer Wheat demanded that he remove his pants. Yes, he dropped them on the floor and walked out of school in his boxer shorts. This is not necessarily an unreasonable reaction to what he was being subjected.

The physical evidence cited by the sheriff's department in the affidavit for a search warrant consisted of: paint on the top of Austin's shoe, white substance observed on the brake pedal and floor mat of his car, and the paint on the cuff of his pants. Subsequent testing by the state police lab concluded that the paint on the top of Austin's shoe did "not share a common source" with the paint in the house. The material from the car was not even paint. None of the paint seized in the search of the Wilhelm house was found to have been used in the crime.

Tests by the state police did indicate similarities in one of three samples from the jeans; however, the technician testified that he would not call it a "match". He stated that there could be 100 or 1,000 cans of paint out there that would give the same results. Tests show that the other two paint samples from the jeans "do not share a common source" with the paint from the house.

Regarding fingerprints found on the inside of the window sash. All we need to know is that Austin helped build that house and would naturally have fingerprints there. That is the window where they passed extension cords and air hoses into the building.

There are other theories that law enforcement could have pursued which will undoubtedly come out at trial. Meanwhile, the Wilhelm family is under incredible stress. Austin is as dismayed as anyone that the project he worked all year to help build was defaced; and he is devastated that he is accused of doing it.

I am confident that he will be found not guilty.

ISLANDER REMAINS POSITIVE

Editor: Thank-you to Editor Ben Gohs for "I absolutely refuse to participate in a recession."

As he wisely pointed out: Perception and consumer confidence are a big part of a recession and the solution.

Statistics stated another way say that Michigan has 90 percent employment and more than 95 percent of mortgages are paid as agreed.

In much of Europe 10 percent unemployment has been considered about "normal" for more than a decade.

Here on Beaver Island we have maintained our tourist marketing spending. Our early season reservation survey suggests that this season will be about the same as last, a good but not record year. We are NOT cutting back but rather adding events of interest to visitors.

We expect to literally fill our island to overflowing for our new Sept. 5 marathon.

Doing what spending you can locally is a good place to start the process of getting out of a recession. We hope folks will consider Beaver Island for a unique close to home vacation experience. Best wishes from Beaver Island and thanks again for an up beat "The Cry-ing Towel."

Darwin and Lincoln for 'Ear to the Ground'

For those of us forced in early grade school to cut out silhouettes and draw log cabins and Mount Vernon, February will always be the month of both Abraham Lincoln's and George Washington's birthdays.

I like to celebrate an additional birthday in this month.

Charles Robert Darwin was born not only on the same day of the year as Abraham Lincoln, Feb. 12, but in the same year, 1809.

According to some historians, they were born only hours apart.

Certainly President Lincoln had sufficient impact on our nation to justify our observation of his natal day, but I would argue forcefully that Charles Darwin has had a far greater influence on our nation and indeed on the whole world.

I don't believe it is reasonable to blame Darwin for all of our moral and social ills as some do. It would be equally unreasonable to blame

Lincoln for our nation's racial difficulties over the past 150 years.

We might better recognize the contributions of both men to our improved understanding of the world we live in.

Charles Darwin was not a political actor, but he wrote briefly about the need for the worldwide abolition of slavery.

His wife Emma was a member of the Wedgwood family—of china and porcelain fame.

The Wedgwoods were powerful advocates of abolition.

Both Darwin and Lincoln moved the thinking of enormous numbers of people: Darwin in biological science and Lincoln in politics and government.

We are certainly better people from the activities of both.

Our knowledge of Darwin would benefit from a holiday as an annual reminder of his contributions, but it should probably be based in England rather than here. If you thought there were arguments about a potential Martin Luther King Day, just imagine the storms that would erupt if someone proposed to commemorate the author of "The Origin of Species."

Maybe we need a biological scientist as president before it can happen.

For those of you yearning for outdoor warmth and unwilling to travel south, I can provide the first genuine sign of spring.

No, not that foolish concentration on one or another of the celebrity woodchucks that hold center stage on February second.

My first sign of spring came that same day with the four or five low hoots of a great horned owl.

The pattern of hoots was repeated for quite some time in the early night.

Great horned owls don't need to make much noise. In fact they are the stealth flyers of the bird world. Their wings make no sound as they beat through the air. If you were a mouse that fact would frighten you like news of an Iranian nuclear bomb might frighten us.

The low, repeated hoots of that owl tell us that a pair of owls has either laid eggs successfully or already hatched out some owl.

They need to begin earlier than any other local bird in order to have mature new owls by summer's end.

Charles Darwin understood that clearly. Listen for your local owls. They know that spring is on the way.

Petoskey, Charlevoix take top honors in Quiz Bowl League

Students from Petoskey and Charlevoix came out on top as 14 teams from seven different schools went head-to-head in the third of five invitational dates in the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Quiz Bowl League.

The Jan. 31 event, held at North Central Michigan College, was the Quiz Bowl season's most competitive competition yet. Petoskey took the overall top spot and Charlevoix won the Class C-D division championship.

Quiz bowl is an academic competition in which four member teams use buzzer systems in a Jeopardy-like contest. More than 80 students took part.

The 14 teams played seven round-robin games to determine final placement in the championship round. Petoskey A and Petoskey C teams, with identical 6-1 records, faced off for the grand championship title. Charlevoix, (6-1) played Petoskey B (5-2). Seedings for the final round were determined by won-loss record with total score serving as the tie breaker.

In the finals Petoskey A defeated the Petoskey C team 210 to 155 to take grand champion honors. Charlevoix A lost to Petoskey B 115-170 in the consolation final round. Charlevoix A took the Class C-D division championship with an overall 6-2 record. Beaver Island's team was the highest placing Class D school, defeating Northwest Academy A 165-100 in the final round to place 5th overall with a 5-3 record.

Final standings, overall won-loss records and final scores for the 14 teams are as follows: First Petoskey A 7-1, 1395

It's time to apply for Charlevoix Community Foundation grants

Once again, it's time to put local charitable dollars to work on behalf of the community. The Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation are inviting nonprofit organizations, educational institutions, and municipalities who are in need of funding to submit grant requests in support of their projects.

During the next couple of months, the community foundations and their Youth Advisory Committees (YACs) will review grant proposals to help fund health initiatives, community development projects, education, the arts and cultural events, environmental efforts, and human service programs. The YACs, which are made up of teens from throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties, will award grants to programs that serve youth and families.

Programs chosen for funding must serve residents of Emmet County or Charlevoix County, meet an urgent need, or enrich life for local residents in some way. The deadline for grant requests is March 2, 2009.

Grant applications are available by calling the appropriate community foundation office. All applicants must call and discuss their proposals in advance. Foundation staff is available to offer advice and assistance to organizations interested in applying for funds.

Both community foundations are grassroots charitable organizations made up of various funds - all of them established by local donors.

Some funds are earmarked for specific causes, and others are open-ended to meet changing needs. The funds are held in permanent endowment, so they can continue to grow and generate income to enhance the quality of life in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, now and for generations to come.

For more information about the local community foundations grant-making process, establishing a fund or making a gift, please contact the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation at 616 Petoskey St., Petoskey, MI, 49770, by phone at (231) 348-5820, Web site www.phscf.org, or the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at P.O. Poverty, teen deaths increasing

Kids Count study reveals good, bad news

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

While the overall education of Charlevoix County children continues to increase, so, too, do incidences of poverty and teen death.

While some of the figures from the 2008 Kids Count study are positive, Kids Count study communications director Judy Putnam said there are some frightening trends.

"We think that poverty was the big trend in this year's report overall," she said. "This huge growth of children living in poor households below the poverty line—and Charlevoix is not immune—goes along with what we've noticed in abuse and neglect rates, which are up quite a bit."

According to the study, Charlevoix continues to improve in both fourth and seventh-grade education, out-of-home care and the safety of younger children, but continues to worsen in teen deaths with an average of 116.6 per 100,000 from the year 2000 to the year 2006. The actual number of deaths was two.

Charlevoix ranks 43 out of 44 counties with the highest rate of teen deaths; but, this county rates seven out of 82 and 19 out of 82 for fourth and seventh-grade reading standards.

The Michigan Kids Count study is part of a larger national effort which began in 1992 after the founder of UPS Jim Casey and his siblings started the Annie E. Casey Foundation in the name of their mother, who had struggled to raise several children on her own.

The annual study ranks the well-being of children both state-wide and nationally.

"We hope this study will raise awareness at a state level on our need to strengthen the safety net and programs for low-income people," Putnam said. "I feel we've had real successes in the state in getting more kids tested for lead and more children immunized."

The number of children receiving subsidized health care in 2006 was 127 for a percentage of 3.1; the overall percentage of children receiving subsized health care in the state is 5.9.

Following are statistics of what Charlevoix County children receive:

- Cash assistance - 92 kids or 1.4 percent of county children; statewide average of 5.5 percent.

- Food assistance program - 848 kids or 13.2 percent of county children; statewide average of 20.6 percent.

- The number of children owed child support was 1,187 for 17.8 percent; the state wide average was 19.9 percent.

- 139 children received no child support in 2007 for a county-wide average of 11.7 percent; statewide average was 25.5 percent.

- 545 children received less than 70 percent of the child support owed them for 45.9 percent; statewide average was 57.8 percent.

Access to health care Children ages 0 to 18 insured by:

- Medicaid - 2,022 or 31.5 percent of children in the county; statewide average of 33.3 percent.

- MICHild - 127 or 2 percent of children in the county; statewide average of 1.2 percent.

And, while 1.7 percent of Medicaid-enrolled children statewide tested positive for lead poisoning, there were no instances of lead poisoning in the 168 children tested in Charlevoix County.

Charlevoix County's numbers were similar in many respects to Emmet as Charlevoix's eastern neighbor has 3.5 percent of children receiving subsidized care, 1.5 percent receiving cash assistance, 14.9 percent in the food assistance program, 16 percent of children owed child support, 7.3 percent who received no child support in 2007 and 37.9 percent of their child support owed in 2007.

The numbers, Putnam said, clearly demonstrate the need for social programs in the area.

"Poverty lasts a lifetime, and kids growing up in poverty are less likely to finish high school and they tend to reach school behind and stay behind," she said. "Poor kids tend to get sicker than other children even in the same conditions."

The national Kids Count Study is expected to be released later this summer.

'Voices Without Borders' receives support from area

A newly formed local arts organization called Voices Without Borders received significant support from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Frey Foundation earlier this month.

Both awards are offered to help the fledgling Petoskey-based arts organization produce the Children of the World in Harmony, international children's choir and dance festival this summer.

Voices Without Borders has invited more than 375 young singers and dancers from all over the world to visit Little Traverse Bay in June.

Young singers and dancers from China, the Czech Republic, Mongolia, the Ukraine, Mexico, Canada, Hungary, the United States, Canada and Vietnam will entertain our northern Michigan audiences in venues all across the Little Traverse Jean Fought (far left) of Little Traverse Choral Society and Dale Hull (right) receive a grant award from Charlevoix County Community Foundation program officer, Sarah Allen. The Foundation has provided $1,200 in support of the Children of the World in Harmony international children's choir and dance festival scheduled for the Little Traverse Bay in June 2009.

Bay region.

Festival week begins July 27, 2009 with several concerts scheduled for Petoskey,

Harbor Springs, Indian River, Charlevoix, Boyne City, Beaver Island, Northport, Mackinac City, Cheboygan and other northern Michigan locations.

On Aug. 1 the Festival ends with a gala celebration and very special concert to be held on the stage of John Hall Auditorium at Bay View.

Sarah Allen, Program Officer at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation presented Voices Without Borders' representative Dale Hull a grant award of $1,000 to be used in support of the program.

"As Voices Without Borders is waiting to receive its 501 C 3 status from the IRS," Fought said, "The Choral Society is acting as its fiduciary. We think it's important for local arts organizations to work together, to support each other, especially in these difficult economic times."

The Choral Society helped Voices Without Borders process its requests for funding and will continue to be supportive of the festival by helping arrange for home stays for visiting singers, dancers, choreographers and choir directors.

This is the 17th Children of the World in Harmony festival since the first one was presented in Hong Kong in 1982. Subsequent festivals have been held in metropolitan centers across Europe and Asia.

The Little Traverse Bay Area was selected for this year's festival site because of the strong interest shown by the arts community here.

"I can't imagine a better place to hold this festival," said Hull. "The young people who visit and perform here will learn more about what living in America is really like than any of them might otherwise learn by visiting New York, or Chicago, or Los Angeles."

In addition to financial assistance, Voices Without Borders is looking for assistance from families who might choose to provide home stays for the young people participating in the festival.

"There are a lot of ways to help," said Jack Kukuk, executive director of Voices Without Borders. "Especially needed are people who speak the languages of our young visitors."

If you are interested in volunteering for the festival, providing home stays, or functioning as a translator if necessary, please contact, Dr. Jack Kukuk, Festival Producer by e-mail at Choral-fest@msn.com or by phone at (480) 236 2196.

NATIONAL Children's Dental Health Month

Everybody wants a bright, healthy smile. That's why it's so important to take care of your child's teeth, and teach good dental hygiene habits that will last a lifetime. To begin, review the basic oral care tips seen here with your child. With proper dental care, a balanced diet and regular visits to the dentist, your child will be all smiles!

- Brush your teeth at least twice a day or, if possible, after every meal
- Use a soft-bristled toothbrush that is small enough to reach all of your teeth
- Trade sugary snacks and soda for tooth-friendly snacks like nuts, popcorn, cheese or raw vegetables
- Remember to floss your teeth or use an interdental cleaner every day

These area dentists can help your child maintain a healthy and beautiful smile:

Friske Orchards' 6th Annual Cherry Recipe Contest

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Life may not be a bowl of cherries, but Friske's upcoming contest is.

Enter your best cherry pie or breakfast dish in Friske's 6th Annual Cherry Recipe Contest.

"We have two categories each year... and this year it's best cherry pie and best cherry breakfast dish," said Friske general manager Jeremy VanLoo. "We started it initially to draw attention to National Cherry Month, which February is, but also to show the many different ways they (cherries) can be used."

Folks have until Feb. 20 to enter the free contest.

Six finalists in both categories will be chosen for the final taste-off at 10:30 a.m., Feb. 28.

A cherry pancake breakfast is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m. that day, with a viewing of the finalists' entries at 10 a.m.

Stop in at the store located at 10743 North, US31 in Arwood, or call (888) 968-3554 or (231) 599-2604 to get your registration packet.

"Last year we probably got about, roughly, 15 entries in each (category)," VanLoo said. "Each year we've got incredible prizes, and this year we have a two-night stay at the Inn at Bay Harbor."

hor with a spa package and there is also a significant discount on a stay at Black Star Farms (on Leelanau Peninsula)."

VanLoo said the event continues to grow in popularity.

"This is for anybody that enjoys spending time in the kitchen," he said. "Recipes are limited to amateurs: no professional chefs."

But, VanLoo added, one needn't be a pro to make a mean cherry dish.

"There are a lot of local people that, with an abundance of great fresh fruits, do a phenomenal job of cooking," he said. "I think there are a lot of people that haven't entered who might surprise themselves if they enter. I've had a lot of people enter and they are shocked when they make it as a finalist."

Last year's winners are as follows:

Cobblers, crisps and puddings

First place - Debbie Rhoads with her Cherry Dump Pudding Recipe

Second place - Linda Mathers with her Cherry Apple Crisp Recipe

Third place - Janice Harvey with her Roly-Poly Cherry Cobbler Recipe

Chutney and compotes

First place - Gayle Gennett with her Cherry Date Chutney Recipe

Second place - Diane Ne-mutz with her Cherry Orchard Chutney Recipe

Third place - Kathleen Bowman with her Tropical Cherry Ginger Chutney Recipe

To aid potential contest entrants, all cherry products are 25 percent off for the month of February. The discount is available to anyone.

Fill out the registration packet on the Web or mail your recipe to:

VanLoo said the best way to ensure your entry makes it to the judges is to follow the instructions he gave:

Each recipe must be typed or printed in black on a standard 8 1/2 inches by 11 inches sheet of paper

Entrants must list all ingredients in order of use. Give step-by-step instructions. Include the size of pan or utensils required, cooking temperatures and times, and number of servings or yield. Include any interesting background information or story about your recipe(s).

Contestants may submit recipes in each category, but only one entry per person may qualify as a finalist. Each finalist must personally bring his/her finished product, prepared exactly from the recipe submitted to the market between 9:30 a.m. and 10 a.m. on Feb. 28.

Winners will be announced at 12:30 p.m.

Entries will be judged on visual appeal, taste, ease of preparation, best use of cherries and originality/creativity.

First, second and third prizes will be awarded in each category and all finalists will receive a consolation prize for participating.

Recipes become property of Friske Orchards and could be used in future publications, promotions or at the market.

Vandal case to go to trial

School building and trades classes built last year, threw paint and spray painted various surfaces in the house for an estimated $2,500 to $3,500 in damage—though the actual cost to repair the damage was much less due to the efforts of numerous volunteers.

Charlevoix high building and trades instructor Brian Cerna testified that he sent two students into the project house on the day in question to gather materials for building counter tops. One of the students was Wilhelm.

The students returned from the project house to inform Cerna of the damage, police were notified and a lockdown of the entire premises was initiated.

During the lockdown, Charlevoix County Sheriff deputies, including Det. Mike Wheat, searched room to room for any students with paint on their clothing, shoes or skin.

Wheat told the court he no need Wilhelm had paint on his shoe and pants, and began questioning him.

"He got very upset and said he wanted to speak to an attorney," Wheat said.

Wilhelm's mother was called to the school and it was then, during discussions with the former student and his mother, that Wheat indicated a search warrant was on its way and that he would be needing the pants.

"He stood up, took off his pants and left the building very quickly," Wheat said.

Jarema said there were at least three people not related to the Wilhelms in the Wilhelm home as police searched for, found and bagged evidence, but somehow the sweatpants never made it to the sheriff's office evidence room.

Wilhelm's defense asserted that the paint on her client's shoe and pants could have been from when he walked into the project house the day the damage was found.

A sweatshirt containing what an expert from the Michigan State Police Crime Lab referred to as "substantially similar" paint in all aspects, including chemical composition, to the paint used in the crime was found at the Wilhelm residence.

The expert would not say the paint was a match because since paint is manufactured in such large quantities there is no way to determine that it did not come from another source.

And, witness Jason Faulkner was flown in from Oregon by the Wilhelm family to testify that he got paint on the sweatshirt in 2005 and 2006, while working as a painter, before giving the shirt to Wilhelm in 2007.

The prosecution also admitted to evidence that Wilhelm's fingerprints were found on the unlocked window in the project house, but the judge ruled that, since Wilhelm had been working on the house most of the school year, his prints were expected to be found in the house.

"This is another sad case for Charlevoix," Jarema said. "The prosecutor's office is taking the stand that we will not tolerate this sort of vandalism."

Jarema added that, based on the testimony of some, more interviews will be conducted. A Feb. 27 scheduling conference is expected to yield trial dates.

"I feel pretty good about our chances at trial," Kur said. "He (Wilhelm) is adamant that he didn't do it."

Chamber Attends the State of the State Address

February 3rd and 4th, was a historical day for the state of Michigan. The governor presented the State of the State Address depicting the priorities for Michigan's economic future. The Northwest Michigan Regional Chamber Alliance partners were in attendance at this event. Also while at the State Capitol they had the opportunity to meet face-to-face with government officials on behalf of their memberships. Among these key legislators were Representatives Wayne Schmidt, Dan Scripps, Minority Leader Kevin Elsenheimer, Gary McDowell, and Darwin Boohar. They also met with Senate Majority Leader, Mike Bishop; Senate Minority Leader, Mike Prusi; Policy Director for the Governor, Regina Bell; Senators Jason Allen and Michelle McManus, and Fred Hoffman, Special Advisor to the Governor for Economic Development and Special Projects.

Meet and greet fellow businessmen at Business After Hours on February 12th, from 5 to 7 pm, hosted by Sadie & Jake's Gallery Café. Held once a month, Business After Hours provides an excellent opportunity for businesses to get acquainted face-to-face. Positive impressions created here can lead to new contacts and clientele for years to come. Light refreshments will be provided accompanied by a friendly atmosphere.

Employee Free Choice Act

The Employee Free Choice Act is a key piece of federal legislation that is expected to move through Congress early in the Obama Administration. The act would take away private, confidential voting by employees in a situation where a union is attempting to organize within a business. The bill would also dramatically reduce the length of time for a contract to be settled before it goes to arbitration, and would dramatically increase penalties against employers for violations during an organizing campaign.

While the Northwest Michigan Regional Chamber Alliance partners - Petoskey, Traverse City, Gaylord, Benzke, Cadillac, and Charlevoix - will be advocating against this legislation, it is anticipated it will be enacted this year. To help businesses prepare for the Employee Free Choice Act (also called the Card Check Legislation), the Regional Chamber Alliance is hosting a seminar on Friday, February 27, 9 a.m. until Noon at the Boyne Mountain Grand Lodge.

The featured speaker will be renowned Michigan Labor Attorney Steven J. Fishman of Bodman LLC. The cost of the program is $49/person for owners, CEOs, COOs, and HR Managers of area chamber member businesses. It is $69/person for non-members. Registration is coordinated by the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce at 347-4150 or chamber@petoskey.com.

Police mistreatment claimed, but no complaint filed

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

A 30-year-old woman who recently told a local TV news station she was mistreated by a Charlevoix police officer has yet to file a complaint with the department.

Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan said he takes these kinds of accusations very seriously.

"Through investigation I was made aware that four people witnessed the traffic stop," Doan said. "I interviewed the individuals and received written statements from them and I have addressed the alleged situation with the officer."

Doan added that despite several attempts to contact Elena Michelle Warner—who said a Feb. 1 traffic stop involved having a gun pointed at her—she has yet to discuss the matter with him or file a formal complaint with his office.

"It's still under investigation at this time," Doan said. "I want to reassure the public that I take these types of allegations very seriously and I am looking into the matter with all the information I have available."

According to the Michigan State Police, the matter does not currently warrant an independent investigation and Doan is following standard procedure by continuing an internal investigation into the matter.

The wife, mother and daycare center operator had just left Charlevoix Area Hospital when the alleged incident occurred.

"I was leaving at probably quarter after nine in the morning because one of my best friends had given birth and I was there all night," Warner said. "I was leaving and heading down Antrim Street when a police officer passed me, then turned around and was following me."

Warner said she looked at her speedometer and saw that she was probably going four to five miles over the speed limit.

"He turned his lights on but there was nowhere to pull over because cars lined the street," she said.

"So, I pulled over immediately where I could."

Warner said the officer stayed in the middle of the road and in his car. It was then that she thought she needed to driver her car a few car lengths farther ahead to where there was room to be safely off the road.

"He came charging at me with his gun pointed at me screaming for me to freeze and put my hands up," she said. "At this point I'm confused and thinking someone robbed a bank or something. Warner said the officer grabbed her arm, twisted it out the door and forced her out of the vehicle at gunpoint."

"He wouldn't let me explain, he just kept screaming at me that it's a felony to flee and elude an officer," she

Are Charlevoix Schools broke?

MEA says 'No,' Officials say 'Not so fast'

Michigan Educational Association financial analyst Arch Lewis' recent presentation on Charlevoix schools' financial situation shows the district is flush with cash.

Lewis said his visit to the area was prompted when members of the union representing Charlevoix teachers called him and asked him if the Charlevoix Public Schools were broke.

"I'm not an accountant. I'm not a bean counter, that's not my side. What my side is to take a look at those numbers and see if the money is being spent efficiently and is accommodating the business's purpose," Lewis said during last week's presentation. "A lot of times when I was in the private sector I worked with businesses that were in trouble. I will tell you flat out ... that is not the case with Charlevoix schools."

Lewis told an audience of more than 80 that Michigan is near dead last in unemployment, employment growth and population and personal income growth.

But, he said Charlevoix Public Schools' revenue stream is relatively stable

Islanders hot over extra $1 fee

City vows to seek other revenue

BENJAMIN GOHS

While they didn't storm council chambers with torches and strands of garlic, mainland and island residents concerned over the proposed $1 per air passenger enplanement fee made their opposition known.

A crowd of a little more than 30 attended the Feb. 16 public hearing on the 2009-2010 budget, which included the enplanement fee measure, that was passed unanimously.

Before I open up to the audience I would like to take a few moments ... I did respond to almost every single e-mail," said Charlevoix Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. of the 64 e-mails and letters received on the enplanement fee in recent days. "The first thing is this is not a tax. This is definitely not a tax to balance our budget."

Carlson added, "These funds that are collected from that fee can only be used for capital improvements on said airport. So it's not something that we're taking this money and balancing our budget, padding our pockets or, as someone put it, stuffing our coffers. It is simply to help with the budget at the airport by taking away some of the money we were putting into capital improvements and diverting some of those back to actual expenses to run the airport."

Proposed capital improvements could include security gates, efficient lighting and runway work.

Bill McDonough of Beaver Island said if there would have been communication it wouldn't have looked like council was trying to slip the fee in "under the radar."

Most, even more distant than that is the two primary operators (airlines). I have found have not been consulted," he said. "It's not about the price. It's about the principal."

McDonough said island residents must spend extra money for basic necessities.

"I suppose you could say that's our choice that's where we live, but that's tremendous extra cost," he said. "It does become a burden."

McDonough added, "I'd rather have a hand extended, working with (you) rather than feel like we're on opposite ends working against each other."

Island resident Ed Wojan said since people overwhelmingly use the local airport to travel to and from Beaver Island, this affects his neighbors most.

"There are a lot of revenue sources that might be available other than a plane tax that we'd like you to look into," he said.

All not enthralled by land plan
Special meeting called

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Few spoke on the proposed Charlevoix County Land Use Plan during the Feb. 11 county commissioner's meeting, but those that did were not happy.

County resident Peter Vellenga told commissioners that zoning is irksome enough without additional layers of government bureaucracy.

"As I looked at the plan what really struck me and bothered me is all the sudden I find my favorite people there (the EPA) and this is all based on a push by the EPA," Vellenga said.

"You say 'All we're doing is recommending' well I'll tell you I've been in those meetings and Larry (Sullivan, county planner) comes in and says 'This is what you have to do' and if you have a question about that you'll see ... we are told by the county what we have to do."

He added, "We've got Big Brother here."

The land use plan has been drafted by the Charlevoix County Planner and planning commission and billed as a "County-wide vision to support existing and future local planning" according to the draft plan itself.

The meeting to discuss comments the planning commission has received on the matter is scheduled for 7 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 19 in the Pine Lake Room in the basement of the Charlevoix County Building.

Vallenga told commissioners he felt the zoning laws were not being applied equally and that he was flawed thinking for the county to enact a land use plan when Charlevoix County has no authority over townships, villages and cities as it pertains to zoning.

"I think equal protection means that if you are equal it needs to be equal," he said. "And, I ask that you do away with the planning commission and the planning department."

According to the drafters of the land use plan, they recognize that each city, village and township has its own master plan, comprehensive plan or legal ability to create and adopt one and that the plan was adopted to facilitate planning among townships, cities, villages and the county; promote the use of the county-wide vision to assist all units of government in the county with the procurement of grants; support local planning and zoning activities at all governmental levels with data, studies and educational resources; serve as a guide to the board of commissioners, the county planning commission and county departments in their decision-making process regarding county-owned properties.

"The Charlevoix County Future Land Use Plan is not intended to replace or supersede any local plan in the county.

It has not been developed for, nor is it intended as the basis for developing a county zoning ordinance to replace township and city zoning ordinances," the plan reads.

The plan, its authors contend, is based on what they call "smart growth" principles. "Smart growth principles provide a framework that fosters growth, economic development and job creation. It provides for strong communities and neighborhoods with a variety of housing types, a mixture of land uses that allow people to walk to work, shopping areas, recreational and cultural amenities, and enable agricultural and forestry activities, that have been a historic backbone of the county, to flourish."

Thursday's special meeting is open to the public.

Analyst reports school revenue stream is stable and therefore there is no need to worry about a possible shortfall in operating funds.

"While all of those things are completely true, they really have very little to do with the fortunes of the Charlevoix schools," Lewis said. "That leaves us with a choice. We can use this information to argue for limitations and talk about why we can't do things. Or, we can take control of the district's financial future."

Lewis' calculations showed that the schools will see a surplus of nearly $800,000 instead of the $800,000 to $1 million shortfall projected for next school year.

Hosmer said school administration officials, that is far from the truth.

"We are in disagreement with his financial position," said Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent Chet Janik. "Our books are audited every year as is every school district in the state of Michigan."

The audits are available for any member of the public who wishes to view them.

Janik said what Lewis' presentation comes down to is contract negotiations.

Since the teachers and administration have yet to agree on what both parties feel is a fair increase in pay and benefits, Lewis was brought in to apparently rally the troops.

"Our negotiation team sat through Mr. Lewis' presentation last summer," Janik said. "Since that time, Shawn (Biddle, Charlevoix Public Schools business manager) has tried numerous times to contact Mr. Lewis to ask him where he got his numbers from, but he has not responded to Shawn."

"WE ARE IN DISAGREEMENT WITH HIS FINANCIAL POSITION."

-CHET JANIK, SUPERINTENDENT

Lewis said his numbers came straight from the State of Michigan.

Janik said his business manager can verify every number in the district's budget.

Lewis said the schools routinely carry a larger fund balance than necessary.

However, according to Biddle, the state association of school business managers advises the 10 to 15 percent rainy day fund Charlevoix Public Schools tends to maintain.

A good example of why they do that, Janik said, was the governor's announcement the day after Lewis' presentation that there would be a $59 per student reduction in per pupil funding for the upcoming school year.

But, Lewis argued, any money not being used to run the school should be utilized as educational improvement.

While Charlevoix Public Schools did not endorse or sponsor Lewis' presentation, there will be at least two public forums on the budget spearheaded by the district.

The forums are scheduled for 6:30 p.m., Feb. 26 and March 4 at the Charlevoix Middle School large group room.

Petoskey boys finish runner-up in Division II ski regional

STEVE FOLEY
NEWS-REVIEW

One down, but another trigger one to go.

Following the model their girls' team used two years ago, the Boyne City boys' ski team is hoping a strong regional performance will carry over to the state meet.

The Ramblers used a dominating performance in the morning giant slalom event and followed that up by winning the slalom en route to earning the Division II regional title Thursday at Nub's Nob.

Boyne City finished first with 69 points, while Petoskey, the defending Division II state champion, was second with 105 and Iron Mountain third with 120.5.

The top three teams and certain individuals on non-qualifying teams all advance to the Division II state finals Monday, Feb. 23, at Marquette Mountain.

Veteran Boyne City coach Bob Simpson said it's been a long time — too long to remember — since the Rambler boys have won a regional crown.

"I just told the kids to keep their heads level and look forward to the state meet," Simpson said. "Don't get too high or too low. You never know what's going to happen."

Kaleb McNamara, who won the boys' slalom in 1 minute, 8.30 seconds, said he was proud of Boyne's performance.

"It feels awesome," McNamara said. "We haven't done this as a team in a while so it feels good."

Drake Doherty of Harbor Springs won the individual GS crown as he finished in 51.84 seconds, while Boyne City's Mike Cortright was second in 51.92.

"We were all pretty nervous, but we were determined to win it as well," McNamara said. "All our guys stood and we were consistent on both runs. We skied pretty decent."

Three Ramblers placed within the top 10 in GS as Cortright was runner-up, McNamara was fifth and Tom Hague was 10th. Also for the Ramblers in GS, Dean Hague was 11th, followed by Andy Blossom, 24th, and Paul Solomon, 33rd.

"All year, we've been skiing really strong in GS," Simpson said. "Our GS has always been pretty consistent."

Also in slalom for the Ramblers, Cortright was third, while Tom Hague was 11th and Jared Freidrich was 26th.

"Kaleb's been skiing solid all year for us and all the guys have been doing pretty good," Simpson said. "I'm extremely happy with how they skied."

Veteran Petoskey coach Brewster McVicker was also happy with his team's performance following a tough morning session in GS.

"I feel pretty good that we're in (the state meet) because things were looking pretty dire after the GS," McVicker said. "Our guys battled back and we just had to minimize mistakes as best we could."

For the Northerners, Robbie Doull was a team-best fourth in slalom and sixth in GS, while Michael Swabash was eighth in slalom, and Don Schappacher was eighth in GS, 10th in slalom.

"Robbie (Doull) was very consistent and Don Schappacher er, for just his second year ski racing, is an incredible story," McVicker said. "He's worked very hard at what he's doing."

Swabash's performance in slalom was also key, as he returned from a broken arm to earn a top 10 finish skiing out of the sixth seed.

"He was concerned about holding onto his pole and with his confidence, but he pulled off a strong run," McVicker said.

Also for the Northerners, Michael Drake was 21st in GS, while Kyle Antonishen was 26th, and Swabash, 51st. In slalom, Dick Dinon was 23rd, and Robbie Pemberton, 35th.

"Hopefully our guys can step up the pace and be competitive in the next 10 days," McVicker said. "I thought slalom really was where the race was won today and it was an outstanding performance from Boyne City. They really tore it up and my hat goes off to them."

Harbor Springs, the state runner-up last season, just missed out of a state qualifying berth as it finished fourth with 130 points.

"Drake (Doherty) did a great job in GS, but it was unfortunate for him in slalom," Harbor coach Jane Ramer said.

Prep boys' basketball: Charlevoix rebounds, keeps pace in Lake Michigan Conference

It took Charlevoix two quarters of basketball to shake off the after effects of its first Lake Michigan Conference boys' basketball loss of the season.

The Rayders trailed Boyne City, 29-19, at halftime Friday, Feb. 13 then outscored the Ramblers 30-13 in the second half to claim a 49-42 victory.

Boyne "played with great intensity in the first half," said Charlevoix coach Keith Haske, whose team, which is ranked fifth in the Associated Press Class C state poll, improved to 13-2 overall and 9-1 in the league. "They outworked and outplayed us in the first half."

"We came out in the second half with much more focus, more intensity."

The Rayders, who fell into a first-place tie in the league with Traverse City St. Francis with a 43-41 loss to the Gladiators on Wednesday, got three 3-pointers from Jon Putman to open the second half Friday against Boyne.

Brock Yenglin scored 14 points, Putman finished with 11 and Thomas Parrish added 10 to lead Charlevoix. Also for the Rayders, Weston Bryan had seven rebounds, five steals; and Yenglin finished with six rebounds, three blocks and three steals.

"I have to give Charlevoix a lot of credit," said Boyne coach John Hertel, whose team was within one, 41-40, with just over a minute to play. "They pulled the game out; it was a dog fight."

"We did a good job of contesting their shots. The whole team took the bull by the horns and played super defense."

For Boyne, 5-10, 3-7, Tyler Urman had 13 points, seven rebounds; Trevor Krusel added 12 points, 12 rebounds; and Nick Young had 11 points.

Charlevoix won the JV game, 81-68, as Dillon Putman scored 22 points and Joe Filipiak added 16. Caleb Roberts scored 12 points, Luke Thorpe added 11 and Kolby Shumaker had 10 for Boyne.

Charlevoix won the freshman game, 70-38, as Keegan LaBlanc scored 23 points and Matt Batdorff added 10.

Flu activity picking up in the area

With flu activity picking up, health officials want to remind the public to take steps to prevent getting seasonal flu and to stay home if you get sick to avoid further spread of the annual epidemic.

"We're starting to see the number of cases of flu rising steadily each week in northern Michigan," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director. "If this year is like most other years, flu activity will peak in the next couple of weeks. It's a good time to boost up your hygiene routine."

"It's hard to overestimate how important thorough hand washing is in preventing flu and colds," Meyerson said. "And anyone who is sick with the flu should stay home to avoid spreading the disease."

In addition to hand washing, U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) & Prevention recommends covering your nose and mouth with a tissue when you cough or sneeze. If a tissue is not available, cough or sneeze into your upper arm. You'll avoid spreading germs if you do not touch your eyes, nose or mouth.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality healthcare, address health problems of vulnerable populations, and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Osego counties. For additional information, visit www.cdc.gov/flu.

Whooping cough cases were preventable with immunization

Overall, Michigan saw a significant increase in reported cases of pertussis (Whooping Cough) in the second half of 2008 compared with the first half of the year.

As of the end of December, a total of 307 cases had been reported in the state, although that number is subject to change as work continues to finalize case investigations. More than twice as many cases (210) were reported July through December compared to the first half of the year.

"Most cases of pertussis are preventable with immunization," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director for the Health Department of Northwest Michigan. About six cases of pertussis are reported in the Health Department's four-county Health District each year, he said.

"The single most important thing parents can do to protect their children from vaccine-preventable illnesses like pertussis is to get their infants vaccinated and follow the schedule for booster doses as their babies grow. We may not see very many cases of Whooping Cough but it can be a very serious illness."

Pertussis is a respiratory infection caused by bacteria that spread easily among persons in close contact, such as members of the same household. The illness starts as cold-like symptoms—runny nose, sneezing, mild cough—and at this point is indistinguishable from many other upper respiratory illnesses. A week or two later, the cough worsens, becoming a series of severe, intermittent coughing fits, which make it difficult to breathe. Children may make a strange "whoop" noise as they finally catch their breath, which is why pertussis has the nickname "Whooping Cough". The bouts of coughing may end in vomiting and often leave infected children exhausted.

"Our main concern is the number of babies who developed pertussis. They are at greatest risk of developing a severe case of pertussis, which can result in death," said Meyerson. "It is absolutely critical that infants get all of their vaccine doses on schedule to give them as much protection as possible. It's also important for family members of young babies to get a pertussis booster shot so they are protected from the illness and don't pass it on to infants."

Infants should receive four doses of pertussis vaccine by the time they are 18 months old. A routine booster dose is recommended for children before they start kindergarten.

"We also want to remind parents that booster shots that contain protection against tetanus, diphtheria, and pertussis (Tdap) can fade with time." Pre-teens going to the doctor for their regular check-up at age 11 or 12 should get a dose of Tdap, he said. Adults who did not get a dose of Tdap as a pre-teen or teenager should get a dose, as should adults who are health care workers or who care for infants.

Infants often get pertussis in their own homes, from members of their families. The illness is most serious in babies, especially infants under six months of age whose small lungs and respiratory systems are less able to manage the assault of the bacteria on their airways.

While those diagnosed and treated with pertussis should be treated with an appropriate antibiotic, vaccination against the disease is the best way to control it.

The Health Department of Northwest Michigan is mandated by the Michigan Public Health Code to promote wellness, prevent disease, provide quality health care, address health problems of vulnerable populations, and protect the environment for the residents and visitors of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Osego counties. For additional information regarding pertussis or the Tdap vaccination, contact your health care provider, Health Department office or visit www.michigan.gov/mdch.

Charlevoix library gets recognition for quality services

The Library of Michigan awarded the Charlevoix Public Library a certificate of completion for meeting the Excellent Level requirements of the Quality Services Audit Checklist (QSAC). To earn certification, the Charlevoix Library demonstrated its ongoing work to excel in seven categories of achievement including human resources; governance; administration; services; collection development; technology; facilities and equipment; and public relations/marketing.

"We are proud that the Charlevoix Library has done such strong work to provide services deemed 'Excellent' by the Library of Michigan," said Cynthia Postmus, Library board vice-president. "The standards for this achievement are determined by professionals outside of our library and we are proud that our library staff has met the strongest commitment to customer service."

The Charlevoix Library is in rare company as it is one of four Michigan libraries to achieve this level of service and the first of its size. The Charlevoix Library preceded this effort by first meeting requirements for essential services and then second for enhanced services.

"QSAC represents the work of more than 100 library directors, trustees and staff members who together created measures of quality for our state's public libraries," said State Librarian Nancy Robertson. "The staff of the Charlevoix Library is to be commended for achieving a vital milestone in library service."

In order to complete the certification, the Charlevoix Library had to complete a disaster and emergency preparedness plan, a records retention plan, a technology plan and meet the higher service levels as well. For example, the Charlevoix Library spends 15% of its library operating expenses on new materials each year and provides materials to home bound patrons. These are just a few added services that show the library's commitment to the community. Senator Jason Allen stated that "achieving these levels of certification is a testament to [the library's] sense of community."

QSAC was made possible by the Institute of Museum and Library Services through LSTA funding.

The Institute of Museum and Library Services, an independent Federal grant-making agency dedicated to creating and sustaining a nation of learners by helping libraries and museums serve their communities, supports the Charlevoix public Library. Visit the library at www.charlevoixlibrary.org.

Can't make it to New Orleans? Attend the local Mardi Gras Masquerade

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Beads, masks, cocktails and music and more are slated for St. Mary Church's fundraiser Mardi Gras Masquerade at the castle this Saturday.

Beginning at 7 p.m., and expected to last until 11 p.m., on Feb. 21 at Castle Farms, Mardi Gras Masquerade will offer attendees a costume contest, raffles, live entertainment and more for $30 per person.

"Consensus was that people needed a fun evening out to beat those winter blues," said St. Mary School Principal Keisha Vervser. "What better way than to celebrate Mardi Gras? If we can't go to New Orleans, we'll bring a little here to Charlevoix."

She added, "Anyone 21 and over will enjoy this event. Grey Gables is making some great appetizers, there is a cash bar, and great live music. To add a little fun to the evening there will be a costume contest as well as a mystery raffle. Guests can purchase raffle tickets and then try to win one of 13 mystery prizes with their raffle ticket. Prizes will all be wrapped so no one will know what they are trying to win. Some prizes will be worth $200."

Tickets can be purchased at the castle, Charlevoix ScreenMasters and St. Mary School.

Beads and masks can be purchased for $1 and $5, respectively, at these locations as well as at the door, but quantities are limited.

"We chose to host this party off campus—yes, the school is sponsoring it—but we're wanting it to be a community event," Vervser said. "The Castle seemed like the perfect location. Since this is the first year our goal is to break even and have fun. However, if any money is raised it will go into the general fund. Our primary fundraiser, Northern Lights, which will be held June 26 at the Castle gets specific on what money is raised for."

She added, "What else is there to do in the middle of the winter? Why not celebrate the start of Lent with a fun night out?"

Road Trip Steering committee to prioritize county roads on bus trip next week

NOAH FOWLE
NEWS-REVIEW

The county road commission's steering committee may be split over whether or not bonding is part of the solution to funding the county's road work, but it is in agreement that a prioritized list of which roads are in the worst shape must be set.

During Tuesday's meeting at the Charlevoix County Road Commission offices, in between arguments over bonding, the steering committee agreed to go on a collective bus tour of the county's worst roads next week. The hope is the trip will give the committee a set plan on where to start the road work, regardless of where the money comes from first.

Currently, money will not be collected on the voter approved millage until the winter tax role, and Charlevoix County is slated only about $300,000 from the federal stimulus plan.

"The people on the commission are spread out around the county, and we're trying to figure out a fair balanced way to assess the priority of these roads," said Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners chairman Chris Christensen. "The road trip is one way to do it. As painstaking as it seems, we're moving in the right direction."

John Vrontan, of Boyne City, is opposed to bonding and said he is not sure which roads must be done first. "Bonding removes a lot of the money that's needed for the roads," he said. "I'm not sure which roads need to be done first, because I haven't been to all of them."

Petoskey and Charlevoix take top honors in Char-Em ISD Quiz Bowl League.

Students from Petoskey and Charlevoix came out on top as 14 teams from seven different schools went head-to-head in the third of five invitational dates in the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Quiz Bowl League. The competitive event took place Friday, Jan. 31, at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey.

Petoskey took the overall top spot and Charlevoix won the Class C-D division championship.

Seedings for the final round were determined by won-loss record with total score serving as the tie breaker.

In the finals, Petoskey A defeated the Petoskey C team 210 to 155 to take grand champion honors. Charlevoix A lost to Petoskey B 115-170 in the consolation final round. Charlevoix A took the Class

C-D division championship with an overall 6-2 record. Beaver Island's team was the highest placing Class D school, defeating Northwest Academy A 165-100 in the final round to place fifth overall with a 5-3 record.

Final standings, overall won-loss records and final scores for the 14 teams are as follows:

SPORTS in brief

PREP BASKETBALL ROUNDUP:

Rayders win in OT; Ellsworth, Inland Lakes remain unbeaten

GRAYLING — It wasn't pretty, but the Charlevoix High School boys' basketball team will take it.

The Rayders outscored Grayling, 15-4, in overtime to escape with a hard-fought 73-62 victory Friday, Feb. 6 and keep their Lake Michigan Conference record perfect at 8-0.

"We were very fortunate to win tonight," said Charlevoix coach Keith Haske, whose team is 12-1 overall and ranked fifth in the Associated Press Class C state poll. "We were lucky to come away with this one. Grayling outthrustled us, outplayed us and you have to credit them. We didn't execute well offensively."

Weston Bryan had 18 points and seven steals to lead the Rayders, while Justin Friske had 15 points, 13 rebounds; Brock Yinglin added 12 points; and Thomas Parrish finished with 10 points and six steals.

Grayling, 5-6 overall, 3-5 league, had a chance to win the game in regulation with 2.7 seconds remaining, but missed a free throw to send the game to overtime at 58-58.

"We started being more aggressive and made better decisions in overtime," Haske said. "We ended up with 30 turnovers."

For Grayling, Tyler Stuckey had 21 points, while Trent Larm added 16.

GIRLS LAAKE MICHIGAN Charlevoix 64, Grayling 19

GRAYLING — League leading Charlevoix rode a solid team effort Friday in remaining unbeaten in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"We just played a great defensive game," said Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine, whose troops limited Grayling to just six second-half points in improving to 12-2 overall, 9-0 league. "It was a great game for our girls and everybody scored at least four points for us."

Sarah Potter and Shauna Spenceley scored nine points to lead the Rayders, while KC McCary had eight points and five rebounds, and Tammy Potter finished with seven points. Sarah Potter also grabbed 12 rebounds.

Grayling is 3-12, 2-7.

Zoning Board of Appeals
Charlevoix City Hall - Council
Chambers 2nd Floor, 6PM
210 State Street
Charlevoix, MI 49720

CASE NUMBER: 09-01 ZBA
APPLICANT: Charlevoix Alano Club

The City of Charlevoix Zoning Board of Appeals will hold a public hearing on Wednesday, March 11th, 2009 at 6PM in the Charlevoix City Hall Council Chambers to evaluate a variance application from the Charlevoix Alano Club. The applicant is requesting a variance from the minimum number of off street parking spaces requirement defined in Article VI, Off-Street Parking and Loading Space Requirements Section 5.214(7) of the Zoning Ordinance. The applicant demolished the previous building due to structural problems in the summer of 2008. The applicant wishes to construct a new 36' x 28' building addition to an existing building on the rear portion of the property that was previously used for storage. The Alano Club had 2 parking spaces prior to demolition and the applicant wishes to provide one handicapped accessible space for future use.

The Zoning Board of Appeals is the final decision making body for this project, not the Charlevoix City Council. The Board of Appeals may approve, approve with reasonable conditions, or deny the application based on specific findings of fact that the application does not meet the variance standards. (See Article XI, Section 5.288(3)(4)(5)(6) and (7))

The property is zoned Commercial (C1) and is located at 106 Mason Street. The Tax ID number is 052-348-005-00 said, "I was terrified and shaking—I've never even gotten so much as a ticket in my life, and that's why I was confused."

When the officer, whose name has been withheld pending filing of a complaint, returned to Warner's car after running her ID and registration, Warner said his demeanor had changed.

"About 20 minutes later he came back and he apologized—not because he pulled a weapon on me; he was very careful to say that he was not apologizing for pulling his weapon—because he realized what I was doing was getting him off the road," she said. "I asked him if he felt threatened and he said he thought he saw me banging on my steering wheel, but I think he was just trying to justify what he had done."

Warner, who said she knows now that she did the wrong thing by driving after the initial stop, added, "He had no business to pull a weapon. His life was not threatened in any way."

Warner said the experience has made her wary of the police.

"I'm scared to death now. Just driving to the grocery store yesterday my heart started pounding thinking of what happened," she said. "I cannot even believe it happened. I'm probably the least threatening person you'll ever meet."

Warner added, "I just keep thinking about what if I had my kids in the car."

Warner was cited for speeding and given a warning for driving farther after her initial stop.

Warner had not filed a complaint by press time.

Application deadline approaches for USDA Rural development grants

Agriculture Acting Under Secretary for Rural Development Douglas L. Faulkner announced recently that USDA is accepting applications for $45.8 million in loans and grants to support rural communities and spur economic development through the Rural Economic Development Loan and Grant program.

"Creating and preserving jobs in rural America by helping businesses thrive is a fundamental part of USDA Rural Development's mission," Faulkner said. "These funds are intended to stimulate business expansion and promote entrepreneurship by helping local businesses get access to capital, technical assistance and new markets for their products and services."

The Rural Economic Development Loan and Grant program provides no-interest loans to Rural Development utility program borrowers, which in turn re-lend the money to local entities to promote economic development and job creation. Applications must be received by March 31 for 3rd quarter funding and June 30 for 4th quarter funding. For further details about eligibility rules and application procedures, see the December 29, 2008, Federal Register, page 79438.

USDA Rural Development's mission is to increase economic opportunity and improve the quality of life for rural residents. Rural Development has invested nearly $111 billion since 2001 for equity and technical assistance to finance and foster growth in homeownership, business development, and critical community and technology infrastructure. More than 2 million jobs have been created or saved through these investments. Further information on rural programs is available at a local USDA Rural Development office or by visiting USDA's web site at www.rurdev.usda.gov.

February 2009

Dear Parents and Guardians,

I want to take this opportunity to personally invite you to attend one of the "State of the School" forums that I will be hosting on Thursday, February 26 or Wednesday, March 4 at 6:30 pm in the Middle School Large Group Room. I will be providing updates primarily on the following four topics:

- The quality of the academic programs
- The impact of 2008 bond projects
- The May 5 non-homestead tax renewal request
- The 2009-10 budget challenges

I can assure you that the Board of Education, principals, teachers, all support staff members and I are united in the fact that the top priority of the Charlevoix Public School District is to "Maintain High Academic Standards At All Levels."

Just as with virtually all school districts in the state and this region, we are facing challenging financial issues for the upcoming school year due to decreasing enrollment and the condition of the Michigan economy. This budget challenge is simply too critical to be dealt with independently by the Board of Education, the principals and/or I and therefore I will be asking for your assistance in the process this year. I am forming a parental and community advisory committee to review the financial projections, suggest and explore all options that would allow the school district to maintain its high academic standards and to keep the budget cuts removed from the classroom while maintaining our fiscal responsibilities. Please consider attending one of the forums and volunteering for the budget advisory committee.

As always, please feel free to contact me directly if you have any comments or questions about the upcoming forums or any other issues regarding Charlevoix Public Schools.

Go Rayders!!!

7th Annual Young Writers Juried Exposition

Crooked Tree Arts Center and the Petoskey News-Review are collaborating on the 7th Annual Young Writers Juried Exposition.

This year's Writers Expo is part of Crooked Tree's month long celebration of youth art. On each of four Saturdays local youths' involvement in the arts will be highlighted through events, performances and workshops.

The Youth Art's Festival begins April 18 with the Youth Art Exhibition opening, a dance performance, and strings concert. The following Saturday, April 25, also features a strings orchestra concert in Charlevoix with youth orchestras from around the region. The third Saturday, May 2, Crooked Tree will feature youth writing by hosting the Young Writers Expo awards reception. The final Saturday, May 9, youth theater arts will be highlighted.

Young writers in the Charlevoix-Emmet ISD or home school students in Charlevoix or Emmet Counties may submit one work of poetry or prose or one of both.

The invitation is out to all area teachers to involve their students in the program. Parents and teachers are invited to submit young writers' work on-line through Crooked Tree's web site beginning March 13 through April 10. For writing requirements and more program details see Crooked Tree's web site www.crookedtree.org.

Winning poetry and prose pieces for each level, elementary, middle and high school, will be published in the Petoskey News-Review on Friday, May 1.

The following day, May 2, the Youth Writing Expo awards will be presented.

At the awards reception, the winning young authors will have an opportunity to read their work publicly.

Boys City Culinary Arts students will be created and serve refreshments at the reception. "One of the best things about the program is that the community has the opportunity to share in what our children and teenagers can do when they put pen to paper." The winning works are published in the Petoskey News-Review paper so all can read them and we invite the public to the awards reception where students can read their works. We also involve community volunteers who act as jurors for the event," said Marty Samson, Crooked Tree's coordinator for the program.

This event is sponsored, in part, by the J.P. Morgan Chase Foundation. If you have questions about the Young Writers Juried Exposition or the Youth Arts Festival, visit www.crookedtree.org or contact Marty Samson at Crooked Tree Arts Center at 347-5731 or email marty@crookedtree.org.

Who killed Mr. Boddy?

Charlevoix High School presents "Clue: The Musical"

MAGGIE PETERSON
THE GRAPHIC

Not even the actors in "Clue: The Musical" know who killed Mr. Boddy.

This stage production of the classic board game is presented by Charlevoix High School performing arts Friday through Sunday, Feb. 27-March 1.

"At the beginning of every show, the audience members choose the weapon, room and murderer ... The ending changes based on that," explained performing arts teacher and show director Danielle Wager.

Hints of the end result are given throughout the play, which follows the interactions and actions of the main players. Mr. Boddy, Miss Scarlet, Mrs. White, Mrs. Peacock, Mr.

Green, Professor Plum, Col. Mustard and the detective.

The students in the performing arts class chose the production. Stephen Beck, who plays Col. Mustard, said it's a bit nostalgic performing the play.

"I used to play 'Clue' with my family and friends, and watched the movie," he noted. This is the first play for the senior, who said he was asked to come in because they need ed more males.

"It's a wonderful environment to come into because everybody's so dedicated to this (art)," Stephen added.

He noted that he's excited to be taking the stage as the colonel, an old military type who Professor Plum, played by senior Mac Ernst, and Mrs. White, played by senior Jennie Withers, discuss their displeasure with Mr. Boddy and his actions during "Clue: The Musical." The play is Friday through Sunday, Feb. 27-March 1, at Charlevoix High School.

Incumbents seek to defend seats

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Charlevoix Public School Board of Education members Dean Spenceley and Christine Michaud will be defending their seats against newcomers Kevin Pearsall and his cousin Michael Pearsall.

This week the Courier will feature former school employee Michael Pearsall, who said he is running to ensure the building and grounds are properly cared for.

"I'm retired now and I will have the time to devote to something like this," he said. "I feel it's going to be needed—by the sounds of the budgeting—somebody who will do the right thing for the community."

While Pearsall has no political experience, he did spend 32 years working for Charlevoix Public Schools as the maintenance supervisor.

"We put a lot of money into these buildings and I'd like to make sure they're taken care of," he said. "I realize the economic times are not very good and I want to stay involved with the schools and help where I can."

Pearsall added, "I have past knowledge that would be an Tour Armenia while building homes. Country still struggling 20 years after earthquake.

The Fuller Center for Housing Global Builders Program.

Armenia: An ancient land along the Old Spice Route, a fabled Garden of Eden, the first country to adopt Christianity, is an emerging democracy in need of safe, affordable housing.

The Fuller Center for Housing this summer continues its Global Builders program with nine trips to Armenia to assist those who still struggle from the devastating 1988 earthquake and strive to establish a free economy.

Join a two-week Global Builders team and enjoy the richness of Armenia and its generous people in a remarkable way - by working side by side with families to construct decent housing.

Travel Armenia's historic roads to see pre-Christian sites, 3rd century churches, green pastures, colorful marketplaces, and dramatic mountain gorges. Learn about Armenia's captivating history and culture while importantly, helping a needy family achieve their lifelong dream of a healthy home.

You will come away with more than you give, with more than you ever hoped for.

to receive.

All trips include touring and free time in the capital city of Yerevan.

Experienced Global Builders Team Leaders have traveled regularly to Armenia to build homes since 2003. Costs are expected to be approximately $1600-1900, not including airfare. No construction experience is needed - there's a place for everyone.

The Fuller Center for Housing - Armenia (FCH-A) assists in building and renovating safe, simple, comfortable homes with and for low-income families in Armenia, by offering them long-term, interest-free loans. For information about FCH-A accomplishments, partnerships and ways to get involved, please see www.fullercenterarmenia.org.

Change the World One Home, One Family, at a Time.

The Fuller Center for Housing-Armenia (FCH-A) is a covenant partner of The Fuller Center for Housing organization of America, Georgia.

FCH-A is a nonprofit organization that supports community development in Armenia by assisting residents in building and renovating simple, decent and affordable homes.

The Fuller Center for Housing

International, is a non-profit, ecumenical Christian housing ministry that seeks to eliminate poverty housing and homelessness from the world, and to make decent shelter a matter of conscience and action.

It was established in 2005 by Millard and Linda Fuller, who had founded Habitat for Humanity in 1976.

Through volunteer labor and donations of money and materials, The Fuller Center builds and rehabilitates simple, decent houses with the help of the homeowner (partner) families.

These houses are sold to partner families at no profit, financed with affordable, no-interest loans. The homeowners' monthly mortgage payments are used to build still more Fuller Center houses.

The Fuller Center is not a giveaway program. In addition to the monthly mortgage payments, homeowners invest hundreds of hours of their own labor - sweat equity - into building their Fuller Center for Housing home and the homes of others.

Please visit the Fuller Center for Housing websites at www.fullercenter.org or www.fullercenterarmenia.org to learn more about these programs or to volunteer.

West will meet Midwest in the Big Grin 2 ski and snowboard slope-style competition.

"We want to recreate that West Coast feel in the Midwest, and give something to the kids that they don't always have," said event organizer John Curtis.

The event is Saturday, March 7, at Mt. McSaub in Charlevoix. More than 30 people competed last year, and 60 to 80 participants are expected this year.

"The message that I always try to get across is that it's a big competition and the prizes are big, but it's not all about the competition," Curtis noted.

Instead, the focus is on the skills of the participants, cheering each other one and the lifestyle and culture of the sport.

Curtis, a Charlevoix native, recently returned to the area, and with him came his company, Go Film Crew Productions. The company was filming at ski and snowboard hills throughout the country last year, and during a stop at Mt. McSaub Curtis decided to plan an event for his hometown.

There are two categories of competition - open class

What: Big Grin 2
When: 9:30 a.m. Saturday, March 7 and under class. Open class is more competitive, and up for grabs is the grand prize, a one-year factory sponsorship from Revolution MFG out of Orem, Utah.

Under class is designed more for fun, with participants competing to see how they place against people of their own ability. Prizes up for grabs in the under class include cash, bindings, boards, shirts, stickers, hats and other swag.

The format of the Big Grin 2 is jam style, with each class having one hour in "The Training Grounds," a terrain park built as part of Charlevoix resident Brennan Stebe's Eagle Project. It was newly installed this season.

"With the burst of the snowboarding, one thing kids wanted was a definite park," said Brennan's mom, Laura Stebe. Judging is done by pro riders from Utah, and participants will be judged not only on ability but also attitude.

"The idea is to showcase their talent, their style, whether they're grabbing their board or their missing their grab ... We don't like haters ... Are you out there cheering on the other people, or are you ragging on people and talking smack?" Curtis said.

Registration begins at 9:30 a.m., with the competition running 11:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m.

Beginning at 2:30 p.m. is the pro exhibition, where the judges will ride "The Training Grounds." Awards for participants are to be handed out at 4:15 p.m.

Cost is $15, and includes a T-shirt. A paid lift ticket is required; season passes are applicable. Helmets and waiver required.

There are no age limits for the event, but Curtis recommended intermediate ability.

On Sunday, March 8, there is a "Ride with the Pros" terrain park camp, where pros who judged the Saturday competition will be giving tips on boarding and insight into the pro world.

Cost is $20, and includes light refreshments and drinks. Helmets and waivers are required.

To preregister for the competition and/or the camp, call Curtis at (231) 852-4495 or Laura Stebe at (231) 675-4505.

Nominations for Beyond the Scoreboard's fifth annual Champions of Character Awards are due by March 15.

"This is the reward," said Jack Taylor, the driving force behind Beyond the Scoreboard, an Emmet-Charlevoix county-based group dedicated to promoting character through athletics, and rewarding those involved in athletics who follow that goal.

The group has expanded its reach and its offerings to a four-county area which includes Cheboygan and Osego.

"We want to reward those people who exemplify the life character aspect of this," Taylor said.

The nominations are open to anybody involved in youth athletics—from beginning recreation to the interscholastic level—who exemplifies strong character and values and who uses athletics as a vehicle to teach life character lessons.

Anybody can nominate a worthy candidate living in Emmet, Charlevoix, Osego or Cheboygan county.

Nominees can be anybody from an athlete, a coach, a parent, an official, a youth sports leader, a fan or an administrator; anybody, really, who is "making a major contribution to youth sports" in the area, Taylor said.

Winners are selected by a panel of longtime area coaches, athletic directors, officials, parents and youth sports leaders.

This is the fifth year that Beyond the Scoreboard has handed out its awards at a spring banquet. This year's is scheduled for June 16 in the Community Building of the Emmet County Fairgrounds.

The organization has handed nearly 20 'character' awards in each of the past four years, and the evening always features a dynamic keynote speaker from the world of athletics.

The speaker for the inaugural champions of character banquet was General Peter Schoemaker, U.S. Army Chief of Staff, who played football at the University of Wyoming.

Other speakers have included former Detroit Lions coach Bobby Ross, and Dr. Dan Gould, a Michigan State University professor and the director of the Institute for the Study of Youth Sports Department of Kinesiology.

This year's speaker is Michigan native Sheila Toarmina, a four-time Olympian and member of USA Triathlon Hall of Fame.

"I think it's unfolded beautifully," Taylor said of the group's mission, which was drawn from other sportsman-ship- and character-building programs across the country, including Coaching to Change Lives, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics' Champions of Character program, and Pursuing Victory With Honor.

Toarmina fits the mold of inspiring and on-target speakers who have highlighted Beyond the Scoreboard's highly successful awards banquets.

In addition to the Champions of Character awards, the group organizes and administers workshops aimed at athletes of all ages, coaches, parents and supporters for Northern Michigan schools and sports organizations.

The workshops are administered by the Positive Coaching Alliance of Stanford University, a national organization that promotes character building through athletics.

The Positive Coaching Alliance annually hands out national awards, only four of which have gone to coaches from Michigan.

For more information on nominating, working with the group to bring the program to your sports organization or questions in general about Beyond the Scoreboard, call Joe Villemure, (231) 347-1077.

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

The last and most urgent seed catalogs have arrived and I have sent off the orders for this year's garden seeds. I can already taste, smell and see this year's crops, and it looks like an outstanding year. But then, all garden years look outstanding in February. I am annually optimistic. I have ordered an albino beet, which the catalog confidently states, "has the same flavor and texture as an ordinary beet, with none of the problems of stains on your clothes or counter." I am cautiously optimistic. Is it possible that our senses are so tuned to beet-red beets that a white one couldn't possibly taste the same? I will report at season's end. My annual attempt at growing Michigan sweet potatoes has begun with an ordinary grocery store sweet potato, partly immersed in a vase of water. It is growing roots, but no green leaves have appeared as yet. It is possible to get at least a half-dozen new plants from one such starter. Sweet potatoes need a very long season, and I have harvested from my plants only about one year out of four. Last year the plants were out a bit early and I learned just how sensitive they are to low temperatures. I am not even sure it was below freezing, but the plants shriveled and died before warm enough temperatures arrived. Several new varieties of summer squash are offered in this year's catalogs, and I can never resist them. Like regular zucchini, so much produce from so few plants. Way more than anyone can use or give away. The new ones are always described as having a nut-like or rich flavor. Don't be fooled. All summer squash taste like what they are cooked with. I'm trying a watermelon again. My father grew wonderful watermelons every year, without any apparent effort, but my attempts up to now have stopped short of being even qualified successes. Last year's seedless watermelon plants, with a pollinator plant to assure that flowers and fruit would develop, produced two or three baseball sized fruits before dying in late summer. I remain optimistic. Lettuce and Swiss chard I can depend on, although a good head of iceberg lettuce is elusive here in the north. As soon as the snow is gone, we will be harvesting the parsnips planted last year. We dug up a few in late fall, and they should be even sweeter after a winter in cold storage. Baked with a little bit of good vinegar and some maple syrup they are hard to surpass. It is not exactly a Victory Garden, like everyone had in the early 1940's, but fresh food from a garden is always something of a victory. Spring is on the way!

A group from the Community Reformed Church (CRC) of Charlevoix traveled to Guatemala to compete work on a church which three other CRC teams had worked on in the past two years.

The group headed by Fred Siegart also included Terry, Julie and Anna Smith, Richard May, Emily Pellusch (Ellsworth), Gary DeYoung, Steve Coen, Janine Gregory, Bill Fedus (Petoskey), Al Gooch, Josh Wolletz, Gary DeYoung and Dr. Bruce Deckinga (Walloon Lake).

This was the third trip to this village for Siegart, May and Deckinga; the second trip for Gooch and DeYoung.

The Smiths had done mission work in Guatemala years ago.

Anna Smith, 7 years old, was the youngest on the trip. Wolletz, Coen and Pellusch are all high school students.

The group stayed in a team house in Zacapa hosted by missionaries Robert and Thana Jackson out of Allen Town, Penn.

The group traveled each day up into a mountain village of Pe de la Cuesta to finish work on the village church.

The crew made shutters, doors and built some retaining walls.

The pastor of the church, Carlos, is going to live in the back room of the church now that it is complete.

One afternoon was reserved for a medical clinic. They saw 80 patients.

The team also visited Puente Blanco where some in the group had been last year working on a school. Call the CRC at 547-9482 for information on upcoming mission opportunities.

A "Sorry" is needed in regard to last week's item concerning the musical performance at Concord Academy Boyne. It was the multi-talented Gail Gernie, not me, who played the Irish Whistle.

Heartfelt sympathy goes out to the church family, as well as the family and friends of Everett Leist, 83, who passed away this past week. His final farewell service was held on Monday at the First Baptist Church.

Congratulations go out to Pastor Dave Crumbaugh and his congregation. They have relocated and the new Lakeshore Community Church opens its door at 10:30 a.m. for Sunday service in their new location at 457 Water St. in East Jordan.

The Brandon Ivey family is looking forward to enjoying a few days visiting parents and grandparents in Ann Arbor.

Please note that the Boyne Food Pantry will be closed on President's Day, Monday, Feb. 16. It will be open from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., Feb. 17. Happy Birthday goes out to Albert Nahulu, who will be 12 on Friday the 13th.

On Sunday, he and his 5-year-old sister Hilani enjoyed a bike ride in the beautiful sunny spring-like weather.

Great news came in from Leona Stanek.

She has been in touch with John Holowasko, as they were once close neighbors way back when.

In trying to lift his spirits, she called and e-mailed people who might know where his brother Ron was, as they had lost communications years ago.

Making a long story short, it seems Ron lives in Seattle, Washington, and was just released from the hospital after hip replacement surgery.

The two of them are communicating through e-mail and are planning to get together soon.

Thanking Leona for all she had done, Leona said, "I'd do anything for Johnny to help him out. He has been through so much."

John may be going through brain surgery again after he finishes the treatments he has been undergoing.

A phone call and a nice note came in from Bud and Sherry Jolly of Greenwood. The phone call was mainly about the Boyne Citizen and

86 CKD ASAP

Editor:

Recently, The DEQ recommended an on site test well to determine if CMS Inc. could inject leachate at Bay Harbor as opposed to trucking it to Alba.

This proposal does have some merit. It would result in tremendous cost savings and reduced danger to the environment by not trucking it off site.

And in the event of a catastrophic failure, they would only contaminate a site that is already contaminated.

However, a clean up plan that consists of sucking up leachate and injecting it into the ground still leaves some very important unanswered questions.

The most important is, how long will it take to clean up this site using these methods.

I have talked to highly qualified experts and Ph.D.'s in geology and chemical engineering working on this issue.

And, the time estimates I get range from 4,000 to 15,000 years before it stops leaching; longer than anything in human history has lasted.

When I ask anyone at the EPA, DEQ or CMS about this they only give very vague answers such as "It's going to take a long time" or "a few generations."

And, when I directly pushed them for an answer I was told that they do long-term clean up projects all the time.

I am sorry, but I don't believe that.

They have done clean up projects of cement kiln dust all over the country and nothing like this has ever been done.

And I think it's ridiculous to think that CMS is going to be around that long to take care of the problem.

This is our home. And I would like to leave it to my children at least as good as it was when I came here.

Our grandchildren are going to have their own problems to deal with.

Our grandchildren's grandchildren's grandchildren should not have to be dealing with our problems.

We need to look again at the original EPA order of 2005 that requires them to contain or remove the CKD.

H'ARTS A SUCCESS

Editor:

The "Healing H'Arts" art exhibit started as a great success on Valentine's Day.

Chocolate, refreshments, friends and flowers drew a crowd of over 150 individuals to the opening party, at the Charlevoix Circle of Arts. The show highlights the healing aspects of art; with the artists telling their stories of challenge and triumph.

Also displayed is Kathy Britton Mayes', solo exhibit "Eye Contact", featuring larger than life eyes of our beloved Marina La Blau, and many others. These strong visual art displays, helped to create such a strong community cultural event.

In our old public library, a building rich in a history of public service, these two exhibits will run through early April, free of charge.

The winter hours are noon to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Saturday.

SUPPORT YOUR LOCAL POLICEMAN

Editor:

I am responding to the story about the police stop. Every person with a license should know the proper procedure for being stopped. You pull over and come to a complete stop.

You do not mess or feel around in your car.

You should place your hands on the wheel and keep them there.

In this day and age we should all be aware how hard the police officers job is.

Anyone, and I do mean anyone, can be a felon.

When the officer does not get out of the car you should know he is calling in your plate to check on you. Who you are and whether there are any warrants or warrants on you.

Having done this, then and only then will be exit the vehicle.

When you decided to move your car you automatically went into a new category.

You were now fleeing and eluding a police officer and use of force is acceptable.

Before you spout off about how a job is done, know something about it.

I am not a police officer nor am I married to one. However, I can proudly say that there are several in my family.

I can assure you they would have had pretty much the same response had you done what you did to them.

You may think it is overkill but by now you should realize that every time a policeman or woman stops someone, it is their life in the balance. Proud to support our local police.

At 7:37 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 14, deputies from Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office were dispatched to a three vehicle personal injury accident at the intersection of U.S. 131 and M-75 North in Melrose Township.

Once on the scene, deputies discovered the crash began when a westbound passenger car on Springdale Road failed to yield right of way to a southbound passenger car on U.S. 131. The southbound vehicle on U.S. 131 got into a t-bone type crash which caused the westbound passenger car to rotate into an eastbound vehicle sitting in the left turn lane on M-75 North and U.S. 131. Alcohol is not believed to be a factor in this crash.

Thirty-five-year-old Brandon Honson was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital for treatment of a sore neck.

Thirty-year-old Beuna Baier was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital to be checked over.

Ten-year-old Wyatt Baier was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital for a broken leg and chest pain.

Weather savvy student gets award

Jacob Mitchell, a fourth-grade student at Charlevoix Elementary, has received honorable mention in the Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness 2009 Statewide Poster Contest.

Jacob was one of four winners in the state and which is quite an accomplishment considering there were over 670 posters submitted for judging. Jacob's poster will appear on the Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness Web site www.mcswwa.org as well as the Michigan State Police web site www.michigan.gov/msp along with this year's contest winners and winners of past years.

Last month fourth-grade students were challenged, as a culmination to the weather unit they were studying, to construct a poster that would include as much information as possible about proper responses to severe weather warnings and what kinds of things they would keep on hand to be prepared for any kind of emergency.

They were instructed to make colorful, legible poster that would inform the public how important it is to be prepared in the face of bad weather.

The Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness, formed in 1991, works to improve the public's awareness of severe weather events in Michigan.

It provides educational information through a variety of activities to foster increased preparedness and protection from the effects of severe weather.

Digital Imaging Exhibit opens at Jordan River Arts Council

The Digital Imaging Exhibit opens Sunday, Feb. 22 at the Jordan River Arts Center, 301 Main St., East Jordan.

The exhibit comprises over 250 works of art by area students producing digital enhanced photography.

Rachel Krino, Bailey Designs and Consulting of Belaire was the facilitator who went to the schools to aid in the project.

The objective of the project is to provide an expanded and enhanced art experience using computer imaging and at the same time to develop an understanding of the process of creating an art exhibit from conception to final exhibition. Encouragement in thinking outside the box, brainstorming, and school and community cooperation could become a part of the process.

Teachers choosing to have their student participate are: Leda Daykin, Alba seventh grade; Mary Manville, Belaire middle and high school; Marla Watson, Boyne City sixth grade; Deb McDowell, Central Lake high school; Beth McGraw, Charlevoix high school; Darrin Podskalny, East Jordan high school; Deb Hughes, Ellsworth high school; and Renee Guerrero, Mancelona high school.

Illustrated lectures will be presented at 1:30 pm during opening Feb. 22. Refreshments will be served.

This project was funded by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Jordan River Arts Council.

The exhibit runs through March 20, being open daily from 1-4 p.m.

School and other group tours can be arranged by calling the project coordinator.

One in eight people suffer kidney disease

Learn the risks and solutions during kidney month

In observance of National Kidney Month, the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is encouraging residents to understand their risk factors for chronic kidney disease and get tested this March.

The NKF defines an at risk individual as someone with uncontrolled high blood pressure, diabetes or a blood relative with kidney disease. People who fall into this category should make an appointment to get their kidneys checked as soon as possible.

Those who aren't at risk should take health precautions to keep their risk of kidney failure low. Eating healthy, well-balanced meals, exercising regularly, quitting smoking and monitoring your blood pressure are all ways to reduce the risk of kidney disease.

One in eight Michigan adults have chronic kidney disease (CKD) and thousands more are at risk. The good news is that more than 70 percent of kidney failure cases caused by diabetes or high blood pressure may have been prevented or delayed with proper treatment and lifestyle changes. For more information call the NKF at (800) 462-1455 or visit www.nkfmi.org.

The mission of the National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is to prevent kidney disease and improve the quality of life for those living with it.

Flame of discontent apparently burns strong

Not all fire departments ready to consolidate

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Decades of interest in consolidating local fire departments seemed to have culminated in tentative plans to begin a feasibility study.

But, say some city officials, mending age-old divisions to save money and possibly lives won't be easy.

"Back in 2004 the city council appointed a citizens committee to look at each of the departments," said Charlevoix Fire Chief Paul Ivan. "And, after taking a look at the Fire/EMS budget and what it costs to run it, the idea of consolidation seemed like a good idea."

Ivan said there was a time when the Charlevoix City and Township fire departments were one. But, he added, due to personality conflicts which date back nearly four decades, the township created its own fire fighting outfit.

"They had asked us if we wanted to do a feasibility study to see if it was feasible to combine that and the board declined," said Charlevoix Township Supervisor Dale Glass.

When asked why he thought his board was opposed to the idea, Glass said, "We were asked to participate in a study—that's as far as it got."

Currently, Charlevoix

City's fire/EMS consists of three full-time fireman, the chief and 24 paid on-call firefighters.

Ivan said, though it sounds like plenty of staff, the city would find itself struggling if faced with multiple EMS and structure fire calls.

"Staffing is critical," Ivan said. "Just to go into a structural fire you need two guys ready to go in, two guys backing them, a rapid intervention team with a minimum of two—so there's six people plus the guy running the pump, so that's seven before you even think of entering a burning building."

Once you figure the various shifts during each seven day week and then account for those volunteers who are working or sick or on vacation, and there is nowhere near an abundance of staff.

"We're not critically understaffed, but we're certainly not overstaffed," Ivan said. "A perfect day would be where I could staff two ambulances—that's three each—and still have enough people to fight a good size structural fire."

He added, "If we combined the two fire departments I think you could realistically do that."

Charlevoix City fire currently serves the city, the townships of Norwood, Marion and the northwest portion of Evelyn.

Charlevoix City EMS currently covers the aforementioned geographical locations plus a portion of Hayes Township and Charlevoix Township.

"I see consolidation as a way of serving rather than duplicating efforts," Ivan said. "Not enough people want to be volunteer firemen. Back when everybody worked in town it was easy to pull off the mechanic or the meat cutter or the barber for a call, but now with our mobile society, it is a very difficult thing to volunteer when people do not live in the town they work in."

In addition to utilizing the same pool of firefighters and EMS personnel, Ivan said consolidation would minimize spending on equipment.

Charlevoix City fire/EMS currently contract to carry out fire/EMS work for the surrounding townships, but Ivan said, those rates have remained stable for many years and it is costing Charlevoix.

"We're looking right now at putting together a proposal for townships to see the cost of providing service," he said. "Next week or so Rob (Straebel, Charlevoix City Manager) and I will present to the townships these rates."

Ivan added, "The consolidation effort is not dead and we would still like to facilitate something like this because bottom line: Staffing is what's going to kill us."

Straebel said the city certainly could not and would not attempt to mandate the township's cooperation in the matter, but said he feels the issue warrants a closer look.

"A feasibility study cannot be done without the township," he said. "We extended a collaborative hand to Charlevoix Township and I guess we were surprised at their unwillingness to work with us on this."

Straebel added, "We'll keep trying to move this thing forward."

Here's a "Checklist" for Surviving a Financial Crisis

Ben Muladere
Financial Advisor

Over the past few months, the news has been almost incomprehensible. It's hard for many of us to make sense of the failure of major Wall Street firms and large banks and the $700 billion bailout of the financial sector. And it's hard for investors to be calm when stocks have fallen more than 40 percent between October 2007 and Inauguration Day in 2009. What can you do to cope? Consider the following "checklist" for surviving a financial crisis:

• Close your ears — but open your eyes. These days, you may hear some so-called "experts" talking about end-of-capitalism scenarios. Try not to listen to these doom-sayers. We still have the most powerful economy in the history of the world and we will recover from these setbacks. However, even if you close your ears, you should keep your eyes wide open. Specifically, look for opportunities. Stock prices are down now, but they won't always be — and, all else being equal, investors who buy into the stock market at lower prices are likely to earn higher returns than those who buy stocks when prices are higher.

• Focus on things you can control. During a financial crisis, your success at weathering the storm depends on your ability to stay calm and concentrate on the things you can control. For example, you can control your emotions so that you aren't panicked into making unwise, short-term decisions, such as putting all your money under your mattress. And, to a certain extent, you can even control your portfolio's ability to withstand volatility. How? By diversifying your holdings as broadly as possible. The wider your range of investments, the less you'll be hurt by downturns that primarily affect one asset class. (Keep in mind, though, that diversification, by itself, cannot guarantee profits or protect against loss.)

• Review and rebalance your portfolio. During this market decline, some of your holdings have probably fallen more than others. As a result, you may now own a lower percentage of a specific asset class than you had originally intended when you built your portfolio. Consequently, you may want to meet with your financial advisor to determine if you should rebalance your portfolio by adding more money to those asset classes that have fallen the most. You may also want to rebalance if your risk tolerance or long-term goals have changed.

• Look for quality investments. In this economic environment, it's more important than ever to focus on quality investments. When you buy stocks, look for those companies with strong balance sheets. If you're purchasing bonds, stick with those that receive high credit ratings. If we are entering a prolonged economic downturn, these types of investments will, in all likelihood, fare better than lower-quality stocks and bonds.

• Be patient. No one can predict when a bear market will end, but history has shown that turnarounds can happen quickly and unexpectedly. So be patient. The most successful investors have the courage to stay the course and take advantage of opportunities while others are "bailing out" of the financial markets.

We may still have some rough roads ahead of us. But if you can check off every item on this list, you can smooth out some of the bumps you'll encounter on your journey toward achieving your long-term goals.

10 things about ... Leon Bolhuis

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Born and raised in Charlevoix, and having farmed most of his life, Leon Bolhuis comes off as a quiet, unassuming man. But, with a background of working for children's charities, having done work for the Peace Corp. in Malaysia and taken college and correspondence classes in his spare time, this modest bachelor is full of surprises.

Q: What's something few people know about you?

A: "I wrote a science fiction story about six years ago for a children's literature class."

Q: How did you become interested in writing?

A: "I just like to write stories for other people to read and then I like to translate them into other languages."

Q: How did you get into translating stories?

A: "I have about 119 foreign language dictionaries and language books I've been collecting since about 1980."

Q: What do you do for fun?

A: "I like to read science books and write computer programs."

Q: What is your favorite food?

A: "I like about every kind of food, but I don't like cottage cheese."

Q: What's something you've always wanted to do?

A: "I'd like to be a science researcher and do research especially with biology, genetics or robots."

Q: How did you get into your line of work?

A: "I grew up on a farm and I've been working on this (Bad Boss) farm for about 10 years. I mix batches of feed for cows and clean the barns."

Q: What is your favorite topic to write about?

A: "I like to translate some stories from the bible into different languages."

Q: You wrote a piece entitled "The Nut" about a little metal nut attached to a bolt on a piece of farm machinery. Was this based on a true story?

A: "From my experience working on farms I made it up—and then I translated it into Latin."

Q: If you could meet anyone in the world, living or dead, who would it be?

A: "Maybe the president of the United States."

Following is the story of "The Nut" by Leon Bolhuis.

There was a nut that sat on a bolt that was part of a corn picker sheller combine.

The nut just sat there day after day and thought it was not needed by anyone.

It thought it would not even be missed if it were gone.

So one busy day when the combine was picking corn, the nut decided to leave the high, and 20 feet long. The combine came to a screeching halt by the loss of a half-inch nut!

Now there were people looking frantically for that nut.

The nut heard them say, "Where is that nut?"

"It is not very far away because the combine could not go far without that nut!"

The nut wondered if they were talking about it.

"I caused all this! They really miss me!" The nut thought.

Just any nut could not replace this nut. It had a half-inch diameter hole with very fine threads of 75 threads per inch.

The nut was hardened, and was made of an alloy of metals, or a mixture of different metals, so it could stand the heat and pressure.

The nut was just the right size to fit on the bolt in that slot. It was specifically designed for that purpose!

It would take days or weeks to order or make another nut like this. The people looking for this nut had to find it as soon as possible!

This nut not only caused the combine corn sheller to quit, but also the corn dryer, and held the trucks back from loading more corn to take to the market.

The people looking for the nut found the very valuable nut on the bolt.

Then the combine corn Sheller was working again. More corn was picked, and the corn dryer was running, and the trucks could take more dry corn to the market.

We are something like that very valuable nut.

We were also designed or made for a specific purpose. If we don't do our jobs, everything else falls apart around us.

So find out what your job or talents are, and try to do it.

Leon Bolhuis

Celebrate women in your life Zonta's yellow rose day: March 8

The yellow rose is the Zonta service club flower.

In the spring the Zonta community awards scholarships to high school age girls who are scholars and active in their communities.

The following is a letter from one of these past winners.

"We have come a long way Baby but have a long way to go."

Honor women in your life this March.

BY ANNE SOISSON 2006
AWARD RECIPIENT

In 1908, 15,000 women marched through New York City demanding shorter hours, better pay and voting rights, and started a movement which many years later got attributed the recognition of International Women's Day. So, today, 100 years later, is there anything left to fight for? And what is the importance of International Women's Day in 2008?

Nearly a third of all adults living with HIV/AIDS are under the age of 25, and two thirds of them are women. Over 110 million of the world's children, two thirds of them girls, are not in school. Of the world's 875 million illiterate adults, two thirds are women. One in every three women is a survivor of some form of gender-based violence.

Girls between 13 and 18 years of age constitute the largest group in the sex industry. It is estimated that around 500,000 girls below 18 are victims of trafficking each year.

Nearly 1,400 women die every day from pregnancy-related causes, 99 per cent of them in developing countries. More than 80 per cent of the world's 35 million refugees and displaced people are women and children.

These are statistics, bare numbers, but every single figure stands for a life story filled with pain, suffering and discrimination. None of us can picture all this torment but at the same time none of us is expected to

All which is required from us, as citizens and women of this world is a response to these conditions.

International Women's Day gives the global community as a whole a renewed occasion to reassess its accomplishment and measure the efforts done and those still to be achieved to advance the status of women worldwide.

International Women's Day gives women as a whole a renewed occasion to reassess its accomplishment and measure the efforts done and those still to be achieved to advance the status of women worldwide.

Moreover, especially for women, today should be the day that women identify with all the other women on this planet. Identifying always includes comparing, comparing always implies awareness about differences and similarities. And it is this consciousness about different life circumstances better or worse which will motivate us and make us act. Knowing that a peer, an equal suffers, is in pain and has to fight for her basic rights will make us take the necessary steps to provide help and support.

So still, even hundred years later, globally as well as locally there is plenty to identify with, to reflect and to act upon, today and every day. So why not start now!

Contact the Zonta Club of Charlevoix at www.zontacharlevoix.org for more specifics on this initiative or any other issue related to improving the status of women and girls.

The Zonta Club of Charlevoix is a chapter of Zonta International, a global organization of executives and professionals working together to advance the status of women worldwide through service and advocacy.

Charlevoix Public Schools Learning Success for All

February 2009

Dear Parents and Guardians,

I want to take the opportunity to personally invite you to attend one of the "State of the School" forums that I will be hosting on Thursday, February 26 or Wednesday, March 4 at 6:30 pm in the Middle School Large Group Room. I will be providing updates primarily on the following four topics:

The quality of the academic programs

The impact of 2008 bond projects

The May 5 non-homestead tax renewal request

The 2009-10 budget challenges

I can assure you that the Board of Education, principals, teachers, all support staff members and I are united in the fact that the top priority of the Charlevoix Public School District is to "Maintain High Academic Standards At All Levels."

Just as with virtually all school districts in the state and this region, we are facing challenging financial issues for the upcoming school year due to decreasing enrollment and the condition of the Michigan economy. This budget challenge is simply too critical to be dealt with independently by the Board of Education, the principals and/or I and therefore I will be asking for your assistance in the process this year. I am forming a parental and community advisory committee to review the financial projections, suggest and explore all options that would allow the school district to maintain its high academic standards and to keep the budget cuts removed from the classroom while maintaining our fiscal responsibilities. Please consider attending one of the forums and volunteering for the budget advisory committee.

As always, please feel free to contact me directly if you have any comments or questions about the upcoming forums or any other issues regarding Charlevoix Public Schools.

Go Rayders!!!

Prep girls' basketball: Big second half lifts Charlevoix

Faminy Potter scored 10 points and Charlevoix outscored Boyne City, 34-15, in the second half Tuesday, Feb. 17 as the Rayders remained unbeaten in the Lake Michigan Conference girls' basketball race with a 57-34 win over Boyne City.

Charlevoix, 15-2 overall, 12-0 league, has won 11 in a row. The Rayders wrapped up their fifth straight Lake Michigan Conference title with a win last week over Kalkaska.

Rachael Butler scored seven points to lead Boyne, 7-10, 7-5, which saw its four-game win streak come to an end.

"We couldn't handle the pressure in the second half," Boyne coach Jim Brown said. "We couldn't claw back this time."

Meridith Rich added nine points, nine rebounds and five assists for the Rayders, while Shauna Spencley scored eight points; KC McCary added seven points, 11 rebounds; and Potter had nine rebounds, five steals.

Charlevoix won the first meeting, 47-45, hitting the game-winning shot with 5 seconds to go.

This time, the Rayders turned up the heat in the third quarter and maintained the pressure in the fourth and no clock-winding-down dramatic heroics were necessary.

"I just told them we've got to turn up the defense in the fourth quarter and not give it away," Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine said. "We finished really well. That was pretty big for us."

Kindergarten through second-grade students work in their new classroom at Northwest Academy. The school recently built the additional room to accommodate the ever-increasing early elementary program which is now in its third year of operation. The construction included a 24-foot by 20-foot classroom, a 12-foot by 20-foot office and a counseling room. Completed by Siegwert Builders, the renovations came in at just around $20,000. Northwest Academy's enrollment increased from 75 in the 2007-2008 school year to 103 in the 2008-2009 school year. The early elementary class moved into their new room on Jan. 6. While the school is filling up fast, there are still a few spaces available. This is Jordan's fourth year in Charlevoix's plays, and said this is the first time the performance has been in the mystery genre.

On her character, she noted, "I think she's different than the other characters I've played. I have to reach to be a widowed, older lady who's self-centered."

"Clue: The Musical" runs at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Feb. 27-28, and 2 p.m. Sunday, March 1, in the Charlevoix High School auditorium.

Tickets are available at the door, and are $7 for adults and $5 for students and children; Sunday matinee is $1 off. Wager said the play is similar to a Pixar movie, in that it can appeal to children but has some comedy designed more for adults.

Deceased Charlevoix resident Robert Craig and his wife Georgine may be long gone, but their memory will live on in form of a new Charlevoix Public Schools scholarship.

The funds, to first be distributed to deserving members of the class of 2010, will be given to those students of academic merit and financial need.

"We are pleased to announce the very generous gift of $97,025 for the Charlevoix Public Schools students," said Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent Chet Janik. "The interest from the trust will be used for college scholarships for our graduates."

He added, "It is hopeful that the scholarship will go on forever."

The funds will be handled by the Charlevoix County Community Fund and will be given in Robert Georgine Craig's honor to highly academically qualified but also financially in need students to attend college.

Robert Craig's father was superintendent of Charlevoix schools during the 1920s, and Robert eventually studied chemical engineering at the University of Michigan before moving to Buffalo, New York.

In 1945, Robert and Georgine married and Robert went on to teach at his alma mater. Robert eventually earned his master's and doctorate in dental chemistry.

The couple spent their summers in Charlevoix at their Clipperview cottage before Robert died in 2003 and Georgine died in 2008.

Generators can save or kill Extreme caution urged

The Michigan Public Service Commission recommends implementing safety procedures to ensure the safe, effective use of emergency generators.

In the event of a power outage, many Michigan homeowners and businesses rely on portable power generators to keep lights and a running until service is restored.

A portable generator is designed to run a limited number of electric appliances at a time and is typically powered by gasoline or diesel fuel.

A generator usually costs between $400 and $2,000, depending on size and features.

The Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) suggests that you consider the following important points when deciding to buy and use a portable generator.

• Sizing - To determine the size of the generator you will need, total the wattage of the lights and appliances you need to power. For example: Appliance wattage needed to run appliance: Furnace (1/3 HP blower) is 2,100; refrigerator is 1,800; microwave is 700; two 100-watt light fixtures are 200 for a total of 4,800.

And, because appliance wattage varies, these figures represent averages.

Some appliances require up to three times that wattage upon startup.

• A typical portable generator is rated at 3,000 to 7,500 watts.

Most household appliances are rated at 120 volts.

Some larger electric appliances (e.g., electric range, electric clothes dryer, well pump, air conditioner) are rated at 240 volts. If you want to power this type of appliance as well as smaller ones, you will need a generator that is rated at 120-240 volts.

• Installation - Always read and follow all installation and operation instructions for your generator. There are two ways to safely install and operate a portable generator: Direct Hook-up. Portable generators are designed to power a limited number of plug-in appliances like your refrigerator, freezer, lamps - or any other combination of appliances you determine to be essential. These and other home appliances not permanently wired to the electrical system can be powered directly from the generator through a heavy-duty (at least 12 gauge), polarized extension cord. The extension cord should be less than 100 feet long to prevent power loss and overheating.

• Safety transfer switch - some generators can be permanently connected to your electric system to energize your home's wiring in the event of a power outage. This type of installation requires a safety transfer switch. Before starting your generator, you must activate the switch. The switch disconnects your home's wiring system from the electric company's system and allows electricity to flow from the generator to your home's circuitry. The switch prevents the generator from back-feeding electricity into the power lines and possibly causing injury or death to unsuspecting utility workers trying to restore power. The switch also prevents damage to your generator, wiring, and appliances when electric service is restored. Only a licensed electrician should install a transfer switch.

• Safety - always follow the safety instructions in the manufacturer's instruction manual. Always follow local, state, and national fire and electric codes. A permit may be required for installation. Never plug a portable generator into an electrical outlet in the home or garage. It can "back feed" power into the utility company's lines - which can kill or injure utility workers fixing downed power lines.

Always use a heavy-duty (at least 12 gauge) UL-listed extension cord (less than 100 feet long) from the generator to your appliances - being careful not to overload the cord. Always make sure that the total electric load on your generator does not exceed the manufacturer's rating.

To avoid electrical shocks, always properly ground the generator according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Never operate a generator indoors or in an unventilated area. The exhaust contains deadly carbon monoxide fumes.

Do not store gasoline for a generator indoors. Gasoline should be stored in an approved, non-glass safety container. Extinguish all flames or cigarettes when handling gasoline or the generator. Always have a fully charged, approved fire extinguisher located near the generator. Make sure you have enough fuel to run a generator for an extended period of time - during a power outage, gas stations may be closed.

Never refuel a generator while it is running. Shut it off and let it cool for 10 minutes before refueling to minimize the danger of fire.

Parts of the generator are very hot during operation. Avoid contact - especially with the muffler area.

Keep children away at all times.

Protect the generator from rain and other moisture sources to prevent electrocution.

When not in use, store the generator in a dry location such as a garage or shed.

Eisenheimer, Allen host tax workshop
Event focuses on property tax appeals, foreclosures. Area residents can learn and ask questions about home ownership in Michigan's current economy at a forum hosted by Rep. Kevin Eisenheimer and Sen. Jason Allen at 6 p.m. on Monday, March 2 at the Charlevoix High School auditorium.

"People have been getting 2009 property assessments in the mail and are seeing their taxable value increase even though their home is now worth less, and that is confusing," said Eisenheimer, R-Kewadin.

"Other homeowners may be facing a lender's foreclosure, and can learn what steps can be taken in that situation."

The lawmakers have invited representatives familiar with the board of review process as well as the Michigan State Housing Development Authority. Information on state resources as well as details about legislation pending in Lansing to help homeowners will be provided.

"Getting as much information as possible and being proactive with it if you are facing home ownership challenges is important," said Allen, R-Traverse City. "There is potential help out there if you become familiar with the process and know where to go."

The high school is located at 05200 Marion Center Road, in Charlevoix.

Residents are asked to RSVP by calling Eisenheimer toll free at (877) 536-4105, or through the contact link on his Web site at www.gophouse.com/eisenheimer.htm.

People unable to attend the forum who are interested in receiving the information can contact Eisenheimer at (877) 536-4105 or by e-mail at kevin.eisenheimer@house.mi.gov, or Allen at (866) 525-5637 or by e-mail at senjallen@senate.michigan.gov.

Should four-wheelers be allowed on public roads?

Opponents and proponents of the state's new off road vehicle (ORV) law will have their chance to opine on the matter during a public hearing set for 6 p.m., April 9 in Charlevoix City Hall chambers, 210 State St.

"I think it looks like a good program, but I think time is going to be the test," said Charlevoix County Commissioner Joel Evans (R-District Four). "Maybe in a year or two we will take a good look at what roads we should open or what roads we should close, so this is a good trial basis to lay things out."

The state made HB 4323—legislation which allows off road vehicles to travel the shoulder of select roads—a law in August, 2008.

While the new law allows for 43 of Michigan's more than 80 counties to participate, the law is not mandatory and municipalities may opt out of allowing four-wheelers to ride certain roads at up to 25 mph.

Charlevoix County's proposed Ordinance Nine If passed the ordinance would allow four-wheelers, three-wheelers, multi-track recreational vehicles, dirt bikes, motorcycles, amphibious machines and hovercraft "or other means of transportation deriving motive power from a source other than muscle or wind."

According to ordinance nine, it does not cover any of the following: "a registered snowmobile, a farm vehicle being used for farming, a vehicle used for military, fire, emergency, or law enforcement purposes, a vehicle owned and operated by

St. Marys Cement monument recovered

A disgruntled spouse's tip led police to Scott Allan Louisselle's home on a larceny complaint involving stolen DVDs, but they found also found St. Marys Cement's missing monument.

The monument, stolen in August 2008, from the plant's 16000 Bells Bay Road facility, consisted of a 70-pound Potoskey stone and 100-pound maple trunk base which was handcrafted by a former long-time cement plant employee.

"We got a tip that it was out there and did a search warrant and searched with the wife (a former St. Marys Cement employee), but they couldn't find the Potoskey stone," Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney John Jarema said. "The wife was moving out and she went to the house to pick up some of her belongings in the attic and she saw the stump that the stone was mounted on and she recognized it as the missing item."

"He added, "She went home and called St. Marys and they contacted the police."

Union, administration to mediate

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Now more than six months after Charlevoix Public Schools' teachers' and support staff's contracts expired, the union and administration will mediate.

Janik

Unable to come to agreeable terms on both a benefits and financial compensation package for the bulk of their employees, the school's administration, headed by superintendent Chet Janik, filed for mediation in recent months.

"We're hoping to come up with some compromise that's fair and equitable for both parties," Janik said. "We're down to where we need to cut expenses or cut personnel—just like most school districts, we're experiencing declining enrollment and with fewer dollars coming in from the State of Michigan."

The mediation, March 2 for support staff and an as-of-yet undecided date for teachers by press time, comes in the wake of what some are calling public negotiation in the form of both the Michigan Educational Association's (MEA) Arch Lewis who told an audi-

Suspect in custody

According to Jarema, Louiselle was serving a 30-day jail sentence for violating a personal protection order stemming from domestic violence and assault and battery charges when city police began investigating his alleged role in the theft of at least one DVD from Family Video of Charlevoix.

Though already in custody at the time, city police formally arrested Louiselle on Feb. 20 at the Charlevoix County Jail.

Both the Charlevoix City Police and Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office were involved because, while the alleged crimes occurred within the city limits, the Louiselle residence is in Norwood and, therefore, in the sheriff office's jurisdiction.

"I'd like to commend both departments for a good working relationship with recovering of stolen property from two separate crimes," said Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan. The monument, taken in the late evening hours from the cement plant's lobby, has an estimated value of $5,000.

Louiselle was arraigned on Feb. 27 and pleaded not guilty to charges of receiving and concealing stolen property on the St. Marys' monument and larceny in a building, a four-year and/or $5,000 fine for his alleged role in the DVD theft. "You had a guy who spent a year building this monument and then you had somebody come along and steal it," Jarema said. "It's not a pink flamingo that got taken from someone's yard—someone put a lot of time into that thing and it's disheartening to have someone steal someone's property especially when it came from the heart."

A preliminary examination is scheduled for 2:45 p.m., Tuesday, March 10. A spokesman for St. Marys Cement did not return calls by press time.

Still no complaint filed

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

According to local law enforcement, the 30-year-old woman who claimed to have been victim of excessive force has still not stepped forward in an official capacity.

Gwen White Erickson of the Michigan State Police Post in Petoskey, Charlevoix County Sheriff W. Don Schneider and Charlevoix City Police Chief Gerard Doan all said Warner has filed no complaint with any of their offices.

"I would like to take this moment and reassure to the visitors and people of this community that this alleged matter has been looked into as thoroughly as possible with the existing circumstances," stated Doan in a March 3 written statement. "I have spoken with the witnesses and I thank them for their cooperation. To this date, there has been no complaint filed with this police agency or any other agency."

Doan went on to say he hoped drivers would heed all common sense rules of the road and conduct themselves with care during traffic stops.

"I would encourage those who have questions with an officer to come forward and report it to a police agency," he added.

According to Charlevoix District Court records, Warner is scheduled for March 5 to fight the speeding ticket she received the day of the alleged incident.

Warner, who claims to have had a gun drawn on her during a traffic stop on Feb. 1, did not return calls by press time.

And then there were five Norwood planners shrunk by two

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Following last month's failed attempt by the Norwood Township Board to alter the size of their planning commission, the board voted overwhelmingly on Feb. 16 to reduce the commission by two seats.

While the move falls in line with Michigan's most recent zoning enabling act requirements to dissolve planning commissions and reinstate them by ordinance, and the move could save the township thousands of dollars each year, opponents to the move are crying foul.

"At one point in time a couple years ago I advocated that, maybe it should be five members," said planning commission member Tom Mielke.

"But, because of my experiences I have changed my mind and believe that, due to the amount of work necessary, and the need to keep as wide a variety of personalities and backgrounds on the PC (commission) as possible, seven members is a much more appropriate number."

He added, "It can be done with five, and it's cheaper, but seven is more appropriate."

Norwood Township Supervisor Frank Hamilton said the move merely changes the commission to what it was approximately six years ago.

"They had a new master plan at the time and they felt it would be great if they had more input," he said. "So, they went from five to seven ... (and) they just continued on."

Hamilton added that they now have a professional zoning administrator, which makes planning work easier. And, he said, most surrounding townships work just fine with a five member board.

Since the old planning commission was dissolved all members who wish to retain their old seats must reapply.

By press time the planning commission seats had nine applicants.

One of the seats on the commission must be filled by a board member, so there are four seats open for interested applicants.

The deadline to file is March 16 with the interview process to begin sometime in April.

The lone "nay" vote in the matter came again from Norwood Township Treasurer Dave Leusink.

"My position remained unchanged from last month," Leusink said. "I do believe by having seven members on the planning commission we can have a better representation of the community. Although we can do it with five members, if cost were really an issue we could have reduced costs by reducing pay for each meeting."

He added, "The intent of a well-rounded planning commission is so that you can review the planning issues before you from different backgrounds—some educational, vocational, geographical in the township."

Leusink said he, Hamilton, board member Dana Pajtas and interim attorney Bryan Graham will review the applicants.

Mielke said he just doesn't see any positives to the board's move.

"I think with everything we've had before us they might be jumping the gun on this one," he said. "I think it's important that we don't consolidate too much power in the hands of a few."

Mielke, who had not filed for re-appointment by press time added, "I've got the experience of six years and I know what's going on, but I doubt I would be re-appointed because my mindset and political outlook does not match that of Frank (Hamilton) and his advisors."

The interview process for prospective planning commission members will be open to the public and the date will be published as soon as one has been set.

Four vie for school board
Candidate's second run for seat

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Lifelong Charlevoix resident Kevin Pearsall is making his second run at a Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education seat.

While the candidate has no formal political experience, Pearsall said his years running his own landscaping company has given him the experience to responsibly operate a large entity like the Charlevoix schools.

"I've been involved and going to school board meetings over the last year trying to educate myself on the issues," he said. "I just want to try to help balance the budget and make some decisions to help improve our schools."

Pearsall added, "I'm running for the kids. I don't have any personal agenda."

Pearsall said he is the best candidate of his opponents Michael Pearsall and incumbents Dean Spenceley and Christine Michaud because he puts his all into everything he does.

"I like to investigate the whole situation before I make decisions and I say what I think," he said. "I guess I'm one to make my own decision and I think that's what we need on the school board."

SEVERAL OPENINGS ON NORTHWEST SCHOOL BOARD

The deadline to file for two positions on the Northwest Academy Schools Board of Education is on April 22.

While the community does not have the chance to vote on who will be seated on the board, there is still a strict selection process involving Northwest's charter holder Saginaw Valley State University.

"The seats include one vacated by Jack Russell on Feb. 11 and the other currently held by Joanne Olach.

Applications for the three-year board positions can be obtained and filed by visiting Northwest Academy at 115 West Hurst St. in Charlevoix.

Help yourself by helping others

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

Volunteering is good for what ails you. Individuals who volunteer are more likely to live longer.

I didn't make this up: According to the Chronicle of Philanthropy, people who contribute their time to a good cause often say they feel a 'helper's high.'

This same report claims that volunteering raises life expectancy, helps lessen depression and aids in the recovery from illness.

The positive attitude acquired from volunteering will actually make you healthy. Of course if you volunteer for everything then stress will occur and you'll defeat the purpose.

I just wanted to remind you overachievers out there. I volunteer to keep myself out of trouble, out of my husband's hair and besides I can't sit still for long.

It really is nice to know the returns are beneficially healthy as well.

Just as we've learned that 15-30 minute workouts five times a week are good for our bodies, a mere two hours of volunteering per week is also a health benefit. It really is good to be good.

Volunteering is a positive outlet for your talents, a great way to network, and an opportunity to develop new skills.

I just finished sending a letter of recommendation to one of our former Charlevoix students who applied for a volunteer position at the University of Michigan.

You have much to gain if you're a student. It gives you a chance to discover whether or not you're suited to the line of work you might be interested in.

You gain practical knowledge and it assists in marketing yourself for future job interviews. Hands on experience and networking are always a plus.

Once you've experienced the rewards of volunteering first hand you'll find that giving up a little bit of your time follows the old adage, "If you want something done, ask a busy person to do it."

Plus volunteering improves your overall attitude and during this winter of shoveling snow and then shoveling once again an hour later, who couldn't use a little attitude adjustment.

There are a variety of opportunities in our community and in this time of economic need I feel certain any community would benefit from an extra hand.

Just look in your newspaper or on the Internet and you'll find information on the need to assist someone with foreclosure related help.

There isn't a single food pantry that couldn't use an extra hand.

Have you thought about becoming a Big Brother or Big Sister?

Have you thought about volunteering with a special needs student learning to ride a horse? What about the library, churches, hospital or schools?

What a great way to role model for our children.

Volunteering leads to meeting new people, learning new things, it keeps your mind sharp and in turn can lead to a healthier you.

Be generous with your time and if you are ever in need of someone's help you'll surely receive it tenfold. I may already be preaching to the choir but if your not one of fold already lending a hand in your community or someone else's, now is the time to act upon it.

What are you waiting for? Audrey Hepburn truly was "My Fair Lady" when she said, "If you ever need a helping hand, it is at the end of your arm. As you get older you must remember you have a second hand. The first one to help yourself, the second hand is to help others".

Negative perception can lead to negative reality

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Stephen Guthrie

Last month I received a call from a client canceling an appointment she had made earlier for marriage counseling, really.

When she had first called she had already made up her mind to leave her husband and wanted to talk it through with an objective third party. When she called to cancel she told me she had decided to stay with the marriage.

"Great," I responded. "Were you able to patch everything up?" She told me things between her and her husband were just as empty and pointless as they had been but now the economy was so bad she couldn't afford to leave.

So, where marital bonds weren't strong enough to keep that family intact economic bondage saved the day.

"Our house isn't worth what we owe on it, so neither of us can move to where we could make a decent living," she said. "And it takes both of us working to pay this mortgage, so I can't move out."

"We're stuck with each other," she lamented, "because we're stuck with this house."

The impact of these difficult economic times on American families may give new meaning to the vow to stick it out for better or worse, in richer or poorer.

Under this sort of pressure, husbands and wives can react in one of two ways. They can either lock arms and stay committed to get through these times together, or they can take out their fears and frustrations on one another until somebody has to get away.

When things reach that danger zone, husbands and wives change the way they act and speak to one another. Here are four behaviors that only make matters worse.

First, one spouse or the other simply withdraws. They don't want to argue, so they physically remove themselves from the room and from the conversation while they emotionally remove themselves from the marriage.

They stop sharing feelings, and communication is limited to the raw facts associated with schedule and logistics. They choose to disengage, not only from the other spouse but from the high-tension issues that ideally would be faced together.

Expressions like "do whatever you want" become common responses.

The second behavior occurs when one spouse begins to belittle the other. Talking down to a spouse with an attitude of superiority, or using a tone that telegraphs the message "you're stupid" only leads to resentment and escalation of the battles.

Ideally, husbands and wives compliment each other's strengths and weaknesses and they relate to one another as two adults.

When one spouse assumes a parental posture and begins to treat the other as a child tensions build.

Third, one or both intentionally escalate the tension. Husbands and wives have a first hand knowledge of each other's hot buttons, and tend to push them in a form of emotional "jockeying."

Each time a button gets pushed the relationship gets a little more stressed. When tension leads to argument and argument leads to warfare things are said and done that are hard to recover from. Words hurt, and the hurt lingers.

Fourth, one or both fall into the trap of seeing more negative in their spouse than is actually there. When things get tense and approach that danger zone where divorce is a suddenly attractive option, be on guard against the tendency to regard them as worse than they really are.

By peering through the negative lens, a wife looks at her husband's 10 pounds of pot belly she once thought was cute and now thinks he looks like Jabba the Hutt.

Through the negative lens, a husband hears the wife's laugh he once thought of as a charming lilt and suddenly cringes at what sounds like a cat being strangled.

Neither exaggeration is accurate, and both lead to dissatisfaction for dissatisfaction's sake.

As always, the best advice to prevent marital meltdown is found in the Bible, Jesus, as he prepared to die for us, gave us the new commandment to simply love one another. (See John 13:34) There is in that imperative a call to respect and uplift and simply be there for the man or woman you chose as a life partner.

Paul, in Ephesians 5, calls husbands and wives to love one another with a self-sacrificing love that is rooted in respect for one another.

In Ephesians 4 Paul instructs us to only speak words that are uplifting, and to get rid of anger before it turns ugly.

If you can do what the Bible asks of you, and if you can avoid those four destructive behaviors, your marriage should come through these tough times just fine.

LETTERS to the editor

TRAFFIC STOP

Editor: Dear Chief Doan, I was very disturbed to read the article in the Charlevoix Courier regarding a traffic stop on Feb. 1. While I appreciate your desire to investigate the matter, the public needs to know that the investigation was independent, thorough and that appropriate action was taken.

I can see no justifiable reason for the drawing of a gun for a minor traffic offense on a side street in downtown Charlevoix.

Even if Mrs. Warner moved the car a little further after the stop, it does not justify the drawing of a gun and pointing it at Mrs. Warner.

The news report does not indicate that there was any threat directed at the officer.

I can see no legitimate reason to draw the gun except for the fact that we may have an officer out of control acting like a SWAT team.

If Mrs. Warner can be assaulted by a gun, then who is next?

Will the consequences be worse? Will the next person drive away when they see a police officer pointing a gun at them? Will the Police officer shoot an innocent person?

The Community needs to know who this officer is and the outcome of the investigation.

I trust you will not claim that Mrs. Warner did not file a complaint so you cannot do anything.

I would also hope that the Charlevoix Courier will keep on top of this investigation.

The citizens of our Community deserve to be fully informed. Donald A. Van Sittchem Charlevoix

FIX THE FLOW

Editor: It has been stated that "if you build it they will come" and thus has become a living reality here in Charlevoix as proven with the opening of our new marina-park complex.

It's definitely the gem of these Great Lakes and, in conjunction with our busy waterfront business district, we have created the best of both worlds to attract welcomed visitors by land and sea.

Yet, this new development dances on both sides of the fun/grief ratio - as we embrace one - we give birth to another. As the positive side continues to explode, it also fosters a negative conundrum. I refer to the downtown corners of Bridge/US 31 and Clinton Streets.

In the height of our festival season, let alone routine summer traffic, this area becomes a mega bottle neck.

Pedestrians stroll, oblivious to changing traffic lights, leaving little or no time for vehicles to proceed or turn thus creating motorist frustration.

If your commercial vehicle is sitting in this pattern when time is money, well, one can see where this comes back to bite us all.

Now add Venetian week and you have to pity those in grid lock south by the Dairy Grille or north by the IGA—been there and done that, right—and just when this flow moves forward 200 feet, the bridge goes up.

So where am I going with these thoughts? Let's look for a positive in this nightmare.

Moving traffic and pedestrians through this intersection efficiently and safely should be the top priority, yet it is the lonely child waiting for winter.

All over our country similar situations are being addressed and remedied by the installation of pedestrian "walk/do not walk" digital countdown traffic signals.

From major cities like Indianapolis to Mitchell Street in Petoskey, these innovations are giving heads-up instruction to slow-moving foot traffic.

This becomes a win-win situation for all.

Yes, we have built it and they have come.

Now departments and personalities need to step up and do the right thing.

WHAT OTHER COLUMNISTS ARE SAYING...

Will a liberal Democrat reform American education?

Who would not want to compensate the best performers, provide incentives for others to improve and perhaps make some changes?

By Steve West, Northern Islander Newspaper contributing writer

President Obama seems to be surrounding himself with an interesting, intellectual and somewhat diverse group of advisors. His appointments to key positions are encouraging, particularly Hillary Clinton for Secretary of State, General James Jones as National Security Advisor and Education Secretary Arne Duncan.

There is an old saying: "It took Nixon to go to China." It would have been politically difficult for a Democrat to seek normal relations with Communist China. The accusation of "soft on Communism" was much too threatening during the cold war. Perhaps in 2009 it takes Obama to reform American education.

Education Secretary Duncan, during his time as Chicago's senior educator, closed some low performing schools, was pro charter schools and supportive of performance pay for teachers. These are views not associated with one of the Democratic Party's biggest supporters, the National Education Association (NEA).

In our Fabled Federal City the school board is finally facing up to a little secret that every education professional knows. The biggest factor in student performance is excellent teachers. That is an area administrators can control. Yes, indeed, bad teachers are a key reason for poorly educated students and Washington DC has an abundance of both.

Because DC schools are the worst in the nation, by most measurements, the elected board finally decided to bring in the big gun. She is Michigan born Asian American Michelle Rhee. Chancellor Rhee is engaged in a major battle with entrenched unions and poor teachers for the radical idea of... Take a breath... compensation based on performance. The teachers union is not pleased.

This revolutionary Michigan-der thinks that a young teacher with five (yes 5) years of experience should earn upwards of $100,000 a year in salary and performance bonuses. She also thinks that lousy teachers should be fired. Okay, let's be more touchy-feelie and say, helped to find a new profession.

Her revolutionary two-tiered contract proposal includes large pay increases for all DC teachers. Teachers could select the "red tier" and retain their near iron-clad job protection. Or they could sign up for the new and very lucrative "green tier," in which they would give up tenure and allow themselves to be evaluated and potentially dismissed in exchange for higher raises and bonuses.

The Washington Post, in a February editorial aimed at teachers and their union was uncharacteristically blunt, "Teachers are the single most important factor affecting student achievement, so why would you not want to compensate your best performers, provide incentives for others to improve and get rid of those who don't produce?"

In a moment of candor, a Michigan teacher's union executive once said, "We will take an interest in students when they start paying dues." Shocked? Why? He was simply articulating normal human self interest in his and members paychecks. Serious education reform starts with the premise that the NEA is all about teachers, not children. A Democratic President must be prepared to risk this huge block of votes in order to do the right thing with respect to education. It will be interesting to see what approach Obama's Duncan takes.

Law allowing ORVs on certain roads

a utility company or an oil or gas company when performing maintenance on its facilities or on property over which it has an easement, a construction or logging vehicle used in performance of its common function, or a registered aircraft."

Prohibits operation of ORV on the following stretches of road: Thumb Lake Rd., US 131 to the Charlevoix County line; Boyne City/Charlevoix Road in its entirety; Boyne City/East Jordan Road from M75 to the East Jordan City limits; Ellsworth Road from the East Jordan City limits to the Charlevoix County line; Marion Center Road, from Charlevoix City limits to the Charlevoix County line; Kings Highway, which includes Main Street, from the Light House, Sec. 26, St. James Township... to East Side Drive, Sec. 34, Pease Township, Beaver Island; and any roads that have been excluded by a city or township ORV ordinance in Charlevoix County.

Of those interviewed, even the proponents are concerned over the safety issue of untold numbers of recreational vehicles traveling the shoulder.

"This is another state mandate that's unfunded," said chairman of the board of commissioners Chris Christensen (R-District Two). "It's going to bring in some tourism probably, but it is going to bring in enough tourism to cover the pain of enforcement?" That remains to be seen.

He added, "A lot of people really want it, but there are some really sticky issues here: 12 year olds who don't know the rules of the road have access to it."

While townships may opt out of the ordinance beginning July 17, the county road commission may not close more than 30 percent of total linear miles of road to ORV.

ORV may not be operated on road or shoulder of state or federal highways in the county.

ORV riders must stay with the flow of traffic and ride only a half-hour after dark and a half-hour before sunset unless they have a head and tail light.

Beginning Jan. 1, 2010, ORV riders may ride at any hour of the day or night so long as they are equipped with a head and tail light.

Riders must wear a crash helmet and protective eye wear and drivers must be 16 unless within the direct supervision of an adult and has an ORV safety certificate.

Ordinance violations could be as steep as $500.

Proponents of the ordinance say it cannot be passed to soon.

"I think it's going to be very positive," said Dave Galmore, owner of Galmore's Honda dealership in East Jordan. "Frankly, it's been a long time coming."

He added, "They let snowmobiles run around and they need to open the tourism part of this up for ATVs. Most customers that want to purchase ATVs talk about buying them but don't because they don't have any place to go."

Galmore said he understands the concerns of those who worry about vehicles on the road shoulder, but added that snowmobiles and bikes and walkers already occupy that space without creating an unreasonable hazard.

"A 12-year-old can take a riding course from the DNR and frankly they can ride a snowmobile by themselves," he said.

"Some people are very responsible and there are some irresponsible people out there."

Galmore added, "I don't have any concerns with it at all."

Charlevoix County Commissioner Bob Drebenstedt (R-District Five) said he feels any minor negatives with the new ordinance will be far outweighed by the positive impact of tourism, local sales of ORV and fees generated by enforcement.

"If that will keep another mom and pop business open selling sandwiches or gasoline or parts, I'm for it, because we need as much money here as is legally possible," he said.

"If people use logical sense and obey the laws of the highway I don't think we'll have any increase in accidents."

Galmore echoed Drebenstedt's sentiments and added that many of his potential customers say they would like to buy, but are concerned about where they can ride.

"I think I'd see an increase in both sales and simple foot traffic from people," he said. "If you talk to the people in businesses in Grayling that have a trail system close to them, they'd say they get people that come from down state just to ride. I've had four separate people I've talked to say if they could ride a four-wheeler all the way up to Mackinaw, they would."

Galmore added, "When snowmobilers do that they drive through all these towns and have to stop for fuel and stop to eat. It opens the door for people to move around and spend money."

Get your copy of the draft ordinance at the county's Website www.charlevoixcounty.org or from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the county clerk's office at 203 Antrim St. in Charlevoix.

ence of mostly teachers that Charlevoix Public Schools are flush with cash; and the first of two Charlevoix Public Schools' sponsored budget forums, wherein Janik and his business manager told the audience that the schools will face between an $800,000 and $1 million deficit in the coming school year.

While MEA employee Walter Ochs, the UniServ union representative for Charlevoix Public Schools' teachers, said he would not bargain in the newspaper, he did parrot Janik's claim that both sides seek a fair and equitable solution.

"I don't believe we are that far apart," Ochs said. "Chet will present his issues to the mediator and I will present our issues to the mediator and we will attempt to get an agreement."

Both sides will be in separate rooms during mediation and the mediator will go back and forth between the rooms to discuss the issues with each side.

Neither side would put a dollar figure on how far apart they are in the negotiations.

"It's just a difference of opinion on compensation and employee benefits," Janik said. "How do we maintain our high academic standards and remain financially responsible?"

Ochs said his side has made some concessions.

"We had made movement and we are hoping that the board will recognize that," he said.

The teachers and support staff will continue to receive last year's contracted pay and benefits until a new contract can be finalized.

Not redeemable

CertifiChecks gift certificates will no longer be accepted at downtown Petoskey or Charlevoix businesses

CHRISTINA ROHN
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

If you have a CertifiCheck gift certificate you've been saving up to use in downtown Petoskey or Charlevoix — you're out of luck.

As of Friday, Feb. 27, chamber-member businesses in both towns are no longer accepting these redeemable certificates.

Carlin Smith, executive director of the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce, said, on Friday, his office found out through a chamber member that CertifiChecks, Inc. — a company they've been doing business with for nearly 8 years — had ceased operations.

According to CertifiChecks Web site, www.certifichecks.com, effective Thursday, Feb. 26, the company is no longer doing business and is currently in the process of filing Chapter 7 bankruptcy in Dayton, Ohio. CertifiChecks, Inc., cites an "extremely difficult economic environment" as the reasoning behind its closing.

The company advises those with gift certificates to not attempt to deposit them in a bank because they will be returned.

They also tell customers that if they have a CertifiCheck, they can submit it for potential reimbursement to the following address: CertifiChecks, Inc.; Attn: Redemption Dept.; P.O. Box 13603; Dayton, Ohio, 45413.

Smith said, during the month of January, the Petoskey chamber sold about $1,250 worth of CertifiChecks to patrons for redemption at local chamber member businesses.

He said he is unsure, to date, how much of these have been redeemed.

Smith said, currently, the Petoskey chamber is sitting on around $395 worth of CertifiChecks that its bought directly from the company.

"They didn't notify us," he said. "To have some warning or heads up would have been nice so we could get a strategy in place."

Erin Bemis, executive director for the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, said it has been with the company since 2000, and were shocked to hear the news.

"We were really surprised," she said. "It was an abrupt notification."

Smith said, today, he is meeting with the Michigan Association of Chamber Professionals to discuss the issue. He estimates that around a dozen chambers in Michigan have been affected by this situation.

"I know it's many chambers that have been impacted," he said.

Smith said the Petoskey chamber is currently consulting with its attorney, and has every intention of finding a solution that is acceptable for everyone involved.

"We're going to do all we can to hold CertifiChecks accountable for our member and our residents," he said. "I hope that we can have some advice for people in the next couple of days, and have a strategy in place."

For more information, visit CertifiChecks Web site at www.certifichecks.com, or call (877) 770-4438.

The News-Review attempted to contact the East Jordan Chamber of Commerce, but was unable to obtain any information from them before deadline. Harbor Springs and Boyne City chambers did not use CertifiChecks.

Charlevoix's Daman, Petoskey's Arthur, earn State Finals berths

Two area wrestlers, Petoskey's Kegan Arthur and Charlevoix's Zeke Daman, are headed to the Palace of Auburn Hills.

Arthur finished 3-1 to place third in the rugged 130-pound weight class Saturday at the Division II Individual Regional Tournament at Mount Pleasant High School. Arthur pinned Josh Freitas of Linden in 2 minutes, 6 seconds, to win the third-place match.

Daman went 2-1 to finish second at 125 in the Division IV regional at St. Ignace LaSalle High School, falling to Gavin Knight of Leroy Pine River, 6-4, in the championship.

The Individual State Finals are March 12-14 at the Palace of Auburn Hills.

DIVISION IV

Charlevoix's Daman pinned Robin Taylor of Holton in 52 seconds to open the day, then defeated Jake Faber of Blanchard Montabellia, 7-5, to reach the final, where he fell to Pine River's Knight.

Daman who is ranked fifth at 125 in Division IV, takes a 42-5 record into the State Finals, while Knight, 25-6, is ranked seventh. Faber finished third, while Jordan Bosma of Hesperia, who is ranked third, finished fourth.

Charlevoix's Mat Golovich, a state medalist last season, finished 1-2 at 160 and failed to qualify for state.

Golovich was pinned by Hesperia's Malcom Martin in his opening bout in 5:30, then defeated Chris Rush of Pine River, 5-0. Golovich then dropped a 6-5 decision to Kalkaska's Luke Gillespie, ending his season at 38-12.

Aaron Smith of Mio defeated Nick Schiavo of Iron Mountain, 6-0, to win the title, while Hesperia's Martin placed third, and Gillespie finished fourth. Martin is ranked No. 1 in Division IV, Smith is second, and Gillespie, sixth.

Steve Robinson was the lone Boyne City wrestler to win a match in the regional, and none of the Ramblers qualified for state.

Robinson, 215, opened with an 8-3 win over Travis Barton of St. Louis, then lost, 4-1, to eventual champ Josh Leonard of Onaway. Robinson then dropped his final match to Steve Opsahl of Iron Mountain, 5-2, finishing the season 16-12.

Boyer's Drew Nohel, 160, and Marc Calo, 171, each finished 0-2.

Nohel was pinned in 1:15 by Hesperia's Daniel Yates, a two-time defending state champion who went on to easily win the weight class and improve to 57-0 on the year. Nohel then fell to Dennis Belson of Blanchard Montabellia, 9-7, in overtime, ending his season 19-6.

Calo opened with a 15-7 major decision loss to Justin Gordon of Frankfort, then fell to Alex Rubick of Manistiquet, 6-4. Calo finished 18-12. Gordon won the weight class with an 8-3 victory over Bruce Rohm of Frankfort.

Girls' basketball: Northmen hang on to beat Charlevoix

STEVE FOLEY
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS WRITER

The Michigan High School Athletic Association girls' basketball tournament may not begin until next week.

Thursday's season finale for both Charlevoix and Petoskey had plenty of that March Madness atmosphere.

In what's become a fine rivalry over the past few seasons, Petoskey closed its regular season in style as it eked out a 45-44 non-league victory over the Rayders at the Charlevoix High School gym.

With the win, the Northmen close a 16-4 regular season for a second straight season and take a six-game win streak into their Class B district tournament opener Wednesday, March 4, at home against Roscommon.

"This game had a tournament kind of feel to it and it always does when we come down here," Petoskey coach Nelson Greener said. "(Charlevoix coach) Bret (Erskine) does a good job and his kids did a great job. It was a good game."

"It was back-and-forth, it was physical and it was basically whoever had the ball at the end was going to win it."

The game did come down to the closing seconds as Petoskey sophomore point guard Bernadette LeBlanc hit what proved to be the game-winning shot, a pull-up jumper in the lane from 10 feet, with 37 seconds to go. "Bernadette will step up when the game's on the line and that's a credit to her," Greener said. "She made a great move."

Charlevoix had a good chance to take the lead with 10 seconds to go, but a Meredith Rich's 10-foot shot from the baseline rimmed out and Petoskey's Anne Crittenden and Kristi Ellis battled for the rebound, which landed in the hands of LeBlanc, who called timeout with 7.7 seconds remaining.

"I told Anne and Kristi their only job at the end was to rebound and to not give up a second chance and they did a great job of doing just that," Greener said.

On Petoskey's next possession, sophomore guard Holly Laver streaked past the Rayders' full-court pressure, but missed a layup attempt with 1.8 seconds to play.

Following a time-out, Charlevoix's Tammy Potter threw a full-court inbounds pass to Meredith Rich, who's heavily contested shot fell short at the buzzer.

"It was a good effort," Erskine said. "We had a chance to win it at the end a few times. We had an open three with a minute to go and we had a great pass at the end, but we just couldn't seem to get a call at the right time."

Charlevoix, which finishes the regular season 17-3, suffered its first loss in 13 games dating to their 64-41 setback at St. Ignace.

"I think we've come a long way since that game," Erskine said. "We just have some little things we can fix and I think we'll see a team like Petoskey again coming up."

Charlevoix trailed by as many as five points in the fourth quarter, but drew to within one, 43-42, as Ericka Faust nailed back-to-back 3-pointers in a 53-second span, and Rich scored on a steal and layup with 2:17 left to put the Rayders in front, 44-43.

"Ericka Faust came off the bench and nailed two big threes," Erskine said. "With about a minute to go, I wanted them to pull it back, pull it back and let Petoskey come after us, but we didn't do that."

For the Rayders, who earlier in the week wrapped up a perfect Lake Michigan Conference season at 14-0, Rich finished with nine points, while Faust, Sarah Potter and Tammy Potter added eight each.

Charlevoix will open Class C district play at 7 p.m. Monday, March 2, against East Jordan at the East Jordan High School gym.

"It was what we needed for a tuneup for the districts and hopefully we can go far in the tournament," Erskine said. "It was a great physical game for us and en of which came in the fourth quarter; LeBlanc added 11 points and three assists; sophomore forward Kerby Tamm finished with 10 points and five rebounds; and Ellis had six points.

"It's a big win for us going

Petoskey won the JV game, 42-20, to close a 15-5 season. For the Northmen, Madison Hooley had 10 points, Carrie Eggleston added nine, and Gabin Vandenberg and Maire Carmody had eight each. For Charlevoix, Jenit was something we needed. I just wanted it to be a good game where both teams got a tournament like game. Neither team wanted to lose and I thought both teams played well. Hopefully, we can both go a long way in the tournament."

Charlevoix's (from left) Sarah Potter, Olivia Catt and K.C. McCary and Petoskey's Kristi Ellis look on as Petoskey's Anne Crittenden (32) and Caitlin Ludlow (22) chase after a rebound during Thursday's non-conference contest at the Charlevoix High School gym. The Northmen defeated the Rayders, 45-44.

For Petoskey, Laver, finished with a game-high 12 points, sevinto districts," Greener said. "We know Charlevoix is going to make some noise in their district and they should win their district and maybe even their regional."

"Our kids were pretty excited after this one. To come down here and beat a good Charlevoix team that's been building for awhile is big."

na Way had 13 points and Lynzie Gotshall added seven.

Petoskey won the freshman game, 33-30. For the Northmen, 6-14, Olivia Pizzi had 15 points and nine rebounds, Katelyn Crittenden added five points, seven rebounds and four steals. Lauren Bartling had 13 points to lead Charlevoix.

With the Annual Congressional High School Arts Competition fast approaching, Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee) urged high school students across northern Michigan to demonstrate their artistic talents by submitting their artwork to represent Michigan's First Congressional District. The winner's entry is displayed for a full year in the U.S. Capitol complex. The "An Artistic Discovery" competition is open to any art work created this school year by a high school student who either resides in or attends school in the First District. "There is so much talent and enthusiasm among students in northern Michigan," Stupak said. "This is an excellent opportunity for high school students to showcase their work. I encourage any interested young artist to participate in this competition."

Entries are limited to original concepts done as drawings, collages, paintings, prints, computer graphics or photography. Entries reproduced from an existing photo, painting or any other work will not be accepted. Entries must be two dimensional and no larger than 30" x 30" and 4" deep, including frame. School budget under scrutiny Some dubious despite deficit claims

BENJAMIN GOHS

Despite claims by both the Charlevoix Public Schools' superintendent and business manager that a major deficit is pending, some citizens remain unconvinced.

During the first of two Charlevoix Schools budget forums at Charlevoix Middle School on Thursday, Feb. 26, Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent Chet Janik and the school district's business manager, Shawn Biddle, presented a group of nearly 60 with an overview of Charlevoix Schools' accomplishments in education, improvements planned and already implemented using the $5.9 million bond as well as explaining the state of the school system's budget—to which several questions were raised concerning the accuracy of the budgeting process.

"They're saying they're looking at a deficit for the next year and this year and this fellow (Arch Lewis) who's an MEA fellow was saying this just isn't the case and that's why my wife was asking these questions," said spouse of a Charlevoix Public Schools teacher John Murdick. "Can an outside person with no vested interest in the community come in and look at everything and give an honest assessment of what's really happening here. Is there really going to be a budget deficit?"

According to Biddle, even with the federal stimulus monies set to be doled to states, the schools are likely to receive the same per pupil funding as they did last year.

Estimated stimulus breakdown:

• Title I for special needs or at-risk education - $177,749

• Education incentive grants funding which Biddle said she was unsure of the definition - $29,000

• Stabilization funding to be used to stabilize general funds in danger of going into deficits - $405,000

Some audience members at the forum had a tough time understanding how the school district's numbers could be so far off from the MEA's numbers.

"They're working without a contract so I view a lot of what's happening with these kinds of meetings as negotiations disguised as public forums," Murdick said. "I'm biased because my wife's a teacher, but I view this as ongoing negotiations. The teachers want to know because is this just a negotiating ploy by the administration and the board? If it's true then the teachers need to know that too. Everybody needs to be on the same page."

Another audience member read aloud an excerpt from the schools' July, 2007, audit by Baird, Cotter and Bishop, which stated that certain "significant deficiencies" were identified in internal control of financial reporting.

Biddle and Janik were asked how they could be certain their books were in order when the audit stated, "A significant deficiency is a control deficiency or combination of control deficiencies that adversely affects the entity's ability to initiate, authorize, record, process, or report financial data reliably in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles such that there is more than a remote likelihood that a misstatement of the entity's financial statements that is more inconsequential will not be prevented or detected by the entity's internal control."

However, said Biddle, the statement was taken out of context when one reads further in the audit.

"The relatively small number of people in the accounting functions of the district make it difficult to adequately segregate duties," the auditors stated. "We realize that it is not financially practical for the board to establish a larger accounting staff in order to implement proper segregation of duties and have taken measures of management oversight to help compensate for this limitation."

They further stated, "We believe that the significant deficiency described above is not a material weakness."

Murdick said he isn't one to make accusations, but he would like to see an independent, third party take a look at the books and determine whether the school is truly facing an $800,000 to $1 million deficit next year or whether the MEA's figure of nearly $900,000 in surplus is accurate.

"In a way it's kind of frustrating because if he's (Lewis) not telling a straight story then he's kind of monkeying up the works, but if the administration isn't telling the straight story, well, then I guess it's just how negotiations play," he said. "This area is a lot of conservative Republican people. I just feel there's going to be a sentiment in the community where the teachers should be lucky to have a job."

Murdick added, "I think it's wearing on the teachers, the morale ... they've been working the whole school year without a contract." When asked if the school administration would meet with MEA officials to discuss the apparent discrepancies in their versions of the budget, Janik said he and Biddle have been trying since last summer to contact Lewis to no avail.

"I'd like to have somebody who's credible, not that the superintendent's not, but somebody that could back him up and say 'this is it.'"

The next Charlevoix Public Schools' budget forum is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 4.

Copies of the schools' audit are available upon request by calling 547-3200.

FAA reg' renders dollar dubious

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The $1 enplanement fee recently approved by Charlevoix City Council and pending approval by the FAA may never get off the ground.

According to FAA regulations, isolated communities can be exempt from passenger fees if they meet certain criteria.

"Basically it means a remote location with a population under 10,000 and not connected by any roads can apply for exemption," said Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Steve West. "So, it could be a waste of time for the city to even apply for it."

Beaver Island's official U.S. Census numbers were nearly 550 when it was taken several years ago.

According to section 158.11 of the FAA code, a public agency may apply for an exclusion as West stated, or if they have fewer than 2,500 boardings annually.

Charlevoix City Manager Rob

Strabel said the city is aware of the clause, but since city council approved the 2009-2010 budget, the proposed enplanement fee must be sought unless an alternative is found.

"We are looking at some options for new revenue streams. And, whether city council decides to pursue the enplanement fee, at this point, is up to them," Strabel said.

The $1 enplanement fee would be levied on all commercial flights originating from Charlevoix Municipal Airport.

The approximately $15,000 expected to be generated from the proposed fee would be used in conjunction with other monies to apply for grants from the federal government of up to $1 million for airport improvements.

Various improvements could include work to runways, new lighting, security fences and expanded terminal to allow for a second airline to operate from the airport.

Questions raised over collectibility of flight fee

"I believe this is an unnecessary tax that is aimed directly at Beaver Islanders and, given the regulations, I think it is highly unlikely that we'll be paying this extra fee," West said.

Strabel said he feels the city has taken a collaborative approach with Beaver Island residents.

"We are actively seeking other revenue possibilities at this point," he said. "If we can come up with a solution that is in the best interest of the city, Beaver Island residents and both commuter companies, we will bring that forward to council and may be not pursue that enplanement fee."

West said the real key in this situation is, because Beaver Island is served by Charlevoix's airport, Charlevoix gets money it would not otherwise receive from the federal government.

"In the interest of us getting along, Beaver Island helps Charlevoix and Charlevoix helps Beaver Island—we're in this together," he said. "But we are the reason that airport is as nice as it is and you pretty much can't come to Beaver Island without spending money in Charlevoix."

So far no dates have been set for a meeting or meetings between city officials and island residents and officials, but Strabel said the meetings will happen.

"We are still visiting with Island Airways and Fresh Air (Aviation) to see if they have any proposals that will suit everyone's needs," he said. "We would like to finalize some options before we make the trip to Beaver Island, but I can say it is both the mayor and my intent to go to Beaver Island as soon as we have some creative solutions to that problem."

Weight restrictions lifted on all state trunklines

Weight restrictions have been lifted on all state trunkline highways within the state of Michigan.

This includes both the upper and lower peninsulas.

There are no restrictions for legal axle weight loads on roads designated as "all-season trunklines." On routes designated as "seasonal," there will be a posted reduction of 25 percent for rigid pavements and 35 percent for flexible pavements.

All extended permits will be valid for oversized loads in the weight-restricted area on the restricted routes. Single-trip permits will not be issued for any overweight loads or loads exceeding 14 feet in width on the restricted routes.

For weight restriction information and updates, call 800-787-8960, or you can access this information on MDOT's Web site at www.michigan.gov/mdot.

"Life isn't about waiting for the storm to pass. It's about learning to dance in the rain."

Robin Merzen
Jan. 30, 1994

We have learned to dance in the rain and we thank you for your love, courage and inspiration which helped us on our journey. Fifteen years ago we weren't sure if the storm would ever pass. We weren't sure if we would never be the same without you. But now we know that the memories of you would not allow us to return in the storm, but would lead us to dance once again. You showed us that life was to be shared and enjoyed, not just lived and then passed. We will always love you.

within the terminal."Both Straebel and Charlevoix Municipal airport manager will create an even more at-include updating lighting to Second school budget forum heated

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITORA surprise guest and point ed questions from the public highlighted the Charlevoix schools second budget forum.Those asking for a meeting between school administration and MEA financial analyst Arch Lewis finally got their wish."I understand that Chet's been trying to get a hold of me ... since April," Lewis said in response to claims that Charlevoix Public Schools
Superintendent Chet Janik and Charlevoix Public SchoolsBusiness Manager Shawn Biddle had been trying to contact him on his version of the schools' finances and the apparent discrepancy between both sides' numbers. "The FID (financial summary) report showed the cash balances for the last five years. In 2008 just in the general fund you see it $373,000 in cash at the end of the year ... and you see $2,732,263 in investments and then there's also receivables that you have from the state."
Biddle responded that investments are not counted as cash on hand in the general fund.

"The purpose of that slide in my slide show I gave to the community I actually gave the working capital for all those months and how much was payable. And the whole idea was that the district has a lot of cash to meet its obligations," Lewis told Biddle during the meeting.Audience member John Jarema asked how there could exist such a disparity between Lewis' financial picture and Biddle's budget."The MEA is saying you have a $900,000 surplus andyour saying you have a $1 million deficit," he said. "I want to know who's right. I want somebody to explain how you could have roughly a $2 million difference."Biddle said the difference was closer to $1.2 million.
"Our funding is based on $8,424 per pupil, roughly $10 million. When we started the budget process way back last December when I calculated looked at the taxable value
I had to do a projection and
I projected that to be high

Charlevoix Chamber to honor CertifiChecks

After much discussion, feedback and research, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce is announcing that they will continue to honor CertifiChecks through their expiration.

"It is not the fault of our local business owners, nor our consumers that CertifiChecks closed its door. Why should they bear the brunt of the responsibility? We are choosing to honor these CertifiChecks to continue to promote the original intent of the program, to shop local."

CertifiChecks Inc. posted a message on their website, www.certifichecks.com, Thursday, Feb. 26 stating they had ceased operations effective immediately, due to an "extremely difficult economic environment." It is our understanding they are currently in the process of filing Chapter 7 bankruptcy in Dayton, Ohio.

The company advises those with gift certificates to not attempt to deposit them in a bank because they will be returned. Not so much in Charlevoix. Instead of merchants depositing them in the bank like a check, they will bring them to the Chamber and we will reimburse them.

"The original intent of the program was to keep dollars circulating in our own community. The Charlevoix Chamber wants to see this continue."

Our Board of Directors feels very strongly that this is the right decision to make on behalf of both our membership and community members who may be in possession of a CertifiCheck."

Says Erin Bemis, Executive Director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

"An unbelievable amount of information has been travelling via email and phones over the course of the last week. There were so many questions, many still without answers, it was a great benefit to have open communications with other Chamber executives around the state and beyond."

One significant thing of note... CertifiChecks purchased at the Charlevoix Chamber are only good at participating Charlevoix Chamber Members. You can not pass them through another community.

For more information, call the Charlevoix Chamber at 231-547-2101.

She was 11 when women won the right to vote.

Born March 16, 1909, in southern Michigan, Helen Campbell has seen more than her fair share of history unfold.

"I remember saying to my husband one time, 'I don't know if I want to vote anymore, I don't know the people' and he said 'You better vote; you don't know how hard those women worked to get that vote,'" Helen said. "And, believe me, I still vote."

Helen had one son, John Campbell, a local landscape design firm owner.

"She and my father moved up here about 28 years ago from the Grand Rapids area where she lived the majority of her life," John said. "They moved up here to be close to family and grandchildren and now great-grandchildren."

He added, "She reads and takes pretty good care of herself and speaks to her grandchildren a lot and was a pretty good artist primarily in watercolors and was also a beautiful seamstress."

John and his wife and children will celebrate Helen's 100th year of life from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, March 14 at the Lodge water meeting room.

"All of her grandchildren will be here from the east coast and the west coast and one from Charlevoix," he said. "She is a member of the Congregational church and also she was an active member of the PEO (Philanthropic Educational Organization), an organization she was a member of for years and years and years."

John added, "I guess her good health is attributable to the medical care here in Charlevoix, the respite program, the hospital, the commission on aging and the health department ... allows her to live in her home."

But, according to Helen, she has another secret for her longevity.

"Always look forward to another day," she said. "I'm going to try to make it to 200."

According to John, Helen at tended school with former president of the United States Gerald Ford.

However, Helen said, her biggest accomplishment was getting to watch her grandchildren grow.

"Oh my, I used to take rides in sleds with one horse pulling it. That was the most wonderful thing; I've seen so many things it doesn't seem possible—I've taken trips by airplane and I hope to go up in a balloon for a ride this spring," she said. "But, seeing all my grandchildren graduate from college, that's one of the best things in my life."

Helen has six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. "She enjoys life," John said.

Thanks to SeaPorts Great Lakes, a 137-foot, three masted schooner is coming to Charlevoix.

In addition to the mighty S/V Denis Sullivan, a recreation of 19th Century cargo schooners which sails out of Milwaukee, Wisc., SeaPorts is bringing the Great Lakes School ship, a 77-foot schooner named Inland Seas and will likely host a class on building old-fashioned timber framed structures.

"We would like to get all local youth involved, and anyone interested in preserving our maritime heritage, involved with us," said SeaPorts Great Lakes board member and educational program director Gary Stutzman. "There is a group of people that have secured the lighthouse on the end of the pier. We would like to see possibly a lighthouse district happen where we could create maybe—my vision is a mystic seaport kind of setting—where we put up this timber frame building that will become a boat assembly building."

SeaPorts Great Lakes is a nonprofit organization founded to promote the maritime heritage in the area.

Organizers said a lakeside gem like Charlevoix is only made better when its maritime heritage is celebrated and taught.

While the timber framing class has yet to be finalized, it will include instruction on the proper techniques to build a heavy-duty timber frame suitable for a barn, storage facility or small boathouse.

SeaPorts, in cooperation with Charlevoix City officials, has secured space on the north side of the old DNR fish hatchery at Lake Michigan Beach, a site where they someday hope to begin construction on their own boats.

"It's huge, it's like two football fields," Stutzman said. "The city is working in chorus with us and the DNR and the corp. of engineers (Army)—a whole lot of paperwork has been done to create that spot." He added, "If that area became a lighthouse district, it could really be an amazing area for a small boat assembly building and other programs to benefit our youth."

SeaPorts board member Bob Schofield said the art of traditional boat building, Great Lakes exploration, the science of the Great Lakes and sailing is a vital piece of this area's history.

"When she (Niagara) was in last year and her spar was sticking way above the hills, it's an eye-opener," he said. "During the build process of the Welcome ... that boat was drawing so much attention by people wanting to watch this boat being built that they were unhappy the day she was launched because she drew more attention while she was being built."

Stutzman added, "This (Niagara) is a boat that can go anywhere in the world and they said they want to come back here because our port is so nice—they didn't even know it was here. They got here by happenstance."

Schofield said, a former boat builder, it is an awesome sight to raise a ship from timbers on the ground to a finished vessel sailing the Great Lakes.

On May 29, 30, 31 and June 1, the Denis Sullivan will offer educational day trips which promote awareness of tall ships and help teach maritime heritage in addition to focusing on the importance of a healthy fresh water source.

On June 28 and 29, Inland Seas will travel from Charlevoix to Suttons Bay while teaching scientific research to students aboard. The trip will culminate in a presentation of what the student learned on their trip.

July 1 and 2, educational day trips for families will be offered. Participate in scientific studies of the area's inland waters.

Schools are asked to contribute $10 per student and educator who wish to ride the vessels as the cost of the full day is $3,000; a half-day costs $1,500.

SeaPorts Great Lakes is seeking grants and donations to help offset the cost of these programs.

Call Stutzman at 547-9000 for more information. Visit www.charlevoixchallenge.org for more information.

Arts patron Cyg Riley dies

STEVE ZUCKER
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

Cygred Riley, a long-time patron of the arts, community supporter and founder of the Portside Arts Fair and East Jordan Historical Society died Tuesday at the age of 84.

Current Portside organizing committee member Kim Prebble said Riley, along with Doris Huckle, organized the first Portside Art Fair in 1962.

"She had a connection with an artist group in Detroit and wanted to bring a fair to Northern Michigan," Prebble said.

For the first few years the show took place in Memorial Park. It then moved to the Towns Park. It moved to its current home at Elm Pointe in the early 1970s after George Westgate gave the estate to the City of East Jordan in 1972.

The main floor of the lodge at the Elm Pointe has since become the East Jordan Portside Art and Historical Museum. Another building on the site has become the Cyg Riley Art Gallery, which is filled with art pieces that the have received the fair's "Purchase Prize" since 1971.

Today the fair brings in about 80 artists and 2,600 guests each year.

Prebble said she joined the volunteer group which runs the fair shortly before Riley and the group of women who were then running the fair (some since its inception) turned over the reins around 1985.

"She and her group of ladies that were involved in the committee felt the time had come to turn it over. So, the met with one day and said, 'We're retiring.' And it was now going to be up to us."

Prebble described Riley as strong-willed and "feisty," especially when it came to things involving the fair or the historical society.

Long-time friend and recently-retired county sheriff George T. Lasater, agreed saying she had a "type-A personality."

"She gave you her marching orders and you saluted and did it," Lasater said. "You didn't say 'no' to Mrs. Riley."

Lasater said he developed a long-lasting friendship with Riley her late husband Bret around the time he became sheriff 32 years ago.

He described her as an avid reader and staunch advocate for the East Jordan area.

"She was a walking chamber of commerce," Lasater said.

Lasater said in recent years Riley had been living at a care facility, but he still made weekly visits with her, as recently as a few days before her death.

He said Riley was really hoping to live to 100 — which she would have turned on June 24.

"She's somewhat of a legend," Lasater said.

Prebble agreed saying that Riley's legacy is a big part of what motivates current committee members to forge on, even when faced with difficult economic times.

"We feel a responsibility to keep it going," Prebble said.

Lasater said Riley's family has asked him to organize a memorial service for Riley which will take place around the time of her birthday at Elm Pointe.

Doctor builds hope through 'Pass the Positive' campaign

Keep your chin up

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

You've heard of mass hysteria in one form or another—witch hunts, mob rule, baseless panic—but what about mass hope?

The idea that you can change the world with one smile, one kind word, one small act of decency is the basis behind Dr. Rick Randall's "Pass the Positive" campaign.

"I was trying to get a project going and I kept meeting all this negativity and I started to get down and it just kind of hit me: if negative thinking breeds negative thinking, then positive thinking can breed positive thinking," Randall said. "Too often we let the few negatives in our life overtake the many positives."

Determined to do his part to make the world a better place, Randall took his idea to his business partner Tim Paczesny and the two developed the idea for the Pass the Positive silicone bracelet.

The simple one-size-fits-all bracelets come in more than a dozen assorted colors, cost $2 including tax and read: "Pass the Positive."

Randall and Paczesny explained that their trinkets were designed to be a low-cost, portable way to brighten a dark spot in somebody's life.

"I envision people buying a few of these and keeping them in case they see someone who's having a rough day and give them one," Randall said. "You are the editor of your thoughts; they show up everywhere. You can take negative thinking and turn it around."

He added, "There's a saying that goes, 'You don't drown when you fall in water, you drown if you stay there.'"

Paczesny said Pass the Positive is about the message, not the bracelets.

"I think you can change the world and make it a more positive place," he said. "This is just a small thing that reminds me to tell my wife that she looks good or tell the kids to have a good day at school."

Randall added, "Everyone inevitably gets caught up with worrisome thoughts and it's our responsibility to help each other out. You never know when your light is going to brighten someone's day."

Pass the Positive bracelets are available for purchase at Charlevoix Wear, Gallery 7 & 4 and Charlevoix Courier in downtown Charlevoix.

Randall and Paczesny are currently working on a Web site: www.passpositive.com; and invite others to join their mission.

Contact them at tim@educationoutdoors.net for more information or send your positive story for inclusion on the Web site.

You can live without water for days and without food for weeks, but without oxygen — only about nine minutes.

Respiratory therapists, also known as respiratory care practitioners, evaluate, treat and care for patients with breathing disorders. They treat all types of patients, ranging from premature infants whose lungs are not fully developed to elderly people whose lungs are diseased.

Ferris' curriculum is designed so that all lecture courses are delivered over the internet. The hands-on laboratory experiences are conducted at a partner institution on weekends. During the laboratory sessions, students practice various therapies and with different equipment as they develop their patient care skills in preparation for the clinical internships. Four vie for Charlevoix board of education

BY BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Two incumbents and two newcomers want your vote for the two Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education seats in this May's election.

The incumbents Registered Nurse Christine Michaud is looking to secure her second term on the board.

"I have learned that you can't really make a decision all on your own," she said. "And, you can't go and change things the next day after you've been voted in."

Michaud said her four years on the board have taught her to be patient when it comes to wanting a change.

"When I first ran for the school board I thought I was going to go in and change things I thought needed to be changed," she said. "It took three years to get some things changed."

But for the most part, Michaud added, "It's not that things are running wrong, it's that you just don't have all the information, and once you get all the information, you realize things are running pretty good."

The wife and mother of three children said she is the best candidate because she always collects the facts before making a decision, and she truly cares about future generations.

"I want to protect the future for our kids," Michaud said. "We have great teachers and administration and people who know me know I put the kids in the community first."

She added, "I am honest and I take in what everybody thinks—it's not my personal vote, it's the community's voice that I vote for."

Incumbent board member Dean Spencley said win, lose or draw he will remain a part of Charlevoix schools.

"If everything goes well I'll still be on the board; if not, I'll be in the crowd making sure everyone understands what is going on with the board," he said. "There are so many times where it is hard to enjoy what you are doing that you have to get your own gratification out of it."

Spencley added, "It seems like a lot of what we are doing is taking hours away from somebody or taking a job away from somebody, and in such a small town it always seems like it is someone you know."

Spencley a big part of his job is making tough decisions.

"Our top priority is education," he said. "We are here for our kids, and in my mind, I feel we have made the right decisions in the past couple years."

Despite the economy and cuts which have been made, Spencley said Charlevoix schools and staff remain the best around.

"We will continue to work to make Charlevoix the place where people want to move, where jobs will come," he said. "They are certainly top notch."

Spencley also thanked Charlevoix schools superintendent Chet Janik for his effort in getting the bond measure passed.

"He made people understand the bond issue," he said. "He made them see what it would do for the school district."

Spencley added, "Getting that bond issue passed is one of the things I'm proudest of."

School board position applications are available at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office. Call 547-7200 for more information.

The challengers, former school employee Michael Pearsall, is running to ensure the building and grounds are properly cared for.

"I'm retired now and I will have the time to devote to something like this," he said. "I feel it's going to be needed—by the sounds of the budgeting—somebody who will do the right thing for the community."

While Michael has no political experience, he did spend 32 years working for Charlevoix Public Schools as the maintenance supervisor.

"We put a lot of money into these buildings and I'd like to make sure they're taken care of," he said. "I realize the economic times are not very good and I want to stay in-involved with the schools and help where I can."

Michael added, "I have past knowledge that would be an asset."

The Charlevoix native, who has three grown children, said he will make a good school board member because he always devotes himself to his work.

"Whenever I took care of the football fields or drove into the buildings, I always wanted (people) to have a 'wow' impression," he said. "It was like they were coming into my house and I wanted them to feel good; I wanted them to have pride."

Lifelong Charlevoix resident Kevin Pearsall is making his second run at a Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education seat.

While the candidate has no formal political experience, Pearsall said his years running his own landscaping company has given him the experience to responsibly operate a large entity like the Charlevoix schools.

"I've been involved and going to school board meetings over the last year trying to educate myself on the issues," he said. "I just want to try to help balance the budget and make some decisions to help improve our schools."

Kevin added, "I'm running for the kids. I don't have any personal agenda."

Pearsall said he is the best one to make my own decision and I think that's what we need on the school board."

Create a Strategy for Maturing CDs

Ben Muladore
Financial Advisor

Some things, like fine wines, get better with age. But a certificate of deposit (CD) is not one of them. If you have a maturing CD, you need to decide what to do with it — and the earlier you make this decision, the better off you'll be. So if you've got one or more CDs coming due in the next few months, start planning now.

Of course, if you had a specific goal for a maturing CD — such as a college tuition payment — your decision has already been made. But if you've purchased a CD for another reason, you'll have to choose whether to renew it or invest the proceeds elsewhere.

If you bought the CD for the income it provides, you may want to renew it. If prevailing interest rates are the same, or higher, than the rate on your maturing CD, you can purchase a new CD without worrying about reducing your income stream. But if rates have fallen, you may have a dilemma: How can you reproduce the income you received from your now-maturing CD?

Here are a few alternatives to consider:

- Purchase a bond that pays a higher rate. Instead of buying another CD, you could possibly purchase another fixed-income instrument, such as a bond, that pays a higher interest rate. Be aware, though, that if you find a bond that pays a higher rate, you may be taking on more risk, so make sure any bond you purchase is considered "investment grade quality" by the independent rating agencies.

- Buy a longer-term CD. Generally speaking, you can get a higher interest rate when you purchase a longer-term CD. Your money will be locked up for a longer period of time, but it will help provide you with a more stable income stream over time.

- Create a fixed-income "ladder." To combat interest-rate concerns, you might want to build a fixed-income "ladder" by buying several CDs or bonds with varying maturities — short-term, intermediate-term and long-term. When market rates are low, you'll still have your longer-term vehicles earning higher interest rates. And when market interest rates are high, you can reinvest the maturing short-term bonds and CDs at the higher rates.

Thus far, we've talked about replacing a maturing CD to protect your income stream. But if you bought a CD for another purpose — such as removing some of your money from a volatile stock market — then the CD's maturity gives you a chance to re-evaluate your investment strategy. As you know, 2008 was a tough year for the stock market, so, at the time, diverting some of your money to a CD might have seemed smart. But history tells us that even the worst bear markets don't last forever, and that the biggest gains in a rally often occur at the early stages. Consequently, you may want to take this opportunity to "rebalance" your portfolio, and, if appropriate for your individual situation, look for ways to invest the proceeds of your CD into quality equities or other securities.

By planning ahead, you won't feel rushed to make a hasty decision when your CD matures or, even worse, be tempted to spend the money and have little to show for it. Your maturing CD can help you achieve your financial goals — if you give it a chance.

OFFICIAL: Nuclear waste won't go to Nevada site

H. JOSEF HEBERT

AND JULIE WITTHOFT
NEWS-REVIEW

Charlevoix's hopes to move spent nuclear waste to Nevada have been slashed.

For two decades, a ridge of volcanic rock 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas known as Yucca Mountain has been the sole focus of government plans to store highly radioactive nuclear waste.

Not anymore. Despite the $13.5 billion that has been spent on the project, the Obama administration says it's going in a different direction.

Some of that waste sits on the shores of Lake Michigan at the former Big Rock Point nuclear power plant in Hayes Township outside Charlevoix, which operated for 35 years until decommissioning began in 1997. Its spent nuclear waste is sitting in dry storage on site, and was supposed to be shipped to Yucca Mountain as early as 2010.

"The federal government reneged on its promise to take fuel from the sites. It's the federal government's responsibility for all nuclear fuel they license it, make it available to power plants and they take responsibility to remove it from the site. Until that time it's our responsibility to keep it in a safe condition," said Mark Savage, communications manager for Entergy, a power supplier and owner of Palisades nuclear power plant located south of South Haven in Covert Township and Big Rock Point dry fuel storage in Charlevoix.

The Obama administration's decision to slash funding for Yucca Mountain in its recently announced budget came as no surprise to Savage.

"Yucca Mountain has been over the last several years not so much a technical issue as it was a political one. With every change in the administration there's a change in the amount of attention given to these facilities," he said.

On Thursday, Energy Secretary Steven Chu told a Senate hearing that the Yucca Mountain site no longer was viewed as an option for storing reactor waste, brushing aside criticism from several Republican lawmakers.

Instead, Chu said the Obama administration believes the nearly 60,000 tons of used reactor fuel can remain at nuclear power plants while a new, comprehensive plan for waste disposal is developed.

Savage said Consumers Energy, which owned and operated Big Rock from 1963-1997, paid Entergy $30 million in 2007 to take ownership and responsibility of fuel at Big Rock. The dry fuel storage canisters are licensed for 100 years.

"We will continue to keep that fuel safe in its current configuration unless there's a situation where we will make repairs and so forth. We monitor the fuel and have people at the site to respond if there's an issue," Savage said.

While many residents would like to see the fuel moved out of Charlevoix, Hayes Township Supervisor, Ethel Knepp, said she's not surprised Yucca isn't coming to fruition.

"The bottom line is, I can understand the people that live near the Yucca Mountain site being concerned with it being put there. So it's not surprising. I wouldn't say disappointing. We just need to deal with it," she said.

Rayders outslug Boyne, win Class C district crown

ANDY SNEDDON
NEWS-REVIEW SPORTS
EDITOR

Charlevoix had a little too much experience, a little too much poise, a little too much depth — just a little too much of everything for Boyne City.

The Ramblers didn't lack for heart, guts and desire.

Meridith Rich scored 17 points, Tammy Potter had 14 and KC McCary added 10 Friday as the Rayders held off the valiant Ramblers, 59-47, in a slugfest of a Class C girls' basketball district championship game at East Jordan High School.

"I was nervous today, I didn't know what to expect," said Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine after his team captured its fifth consecutive district championship. "It was a great game, and our girls showed up. I thought our girls did a tremendous job. Just a great game."

Shelby Mittig scored 14 points and Maddie Moeke had 10 for the Ramblers, 9-13, who could muster just one 3-pointer on nine attempts, made just 12 of their 34 field goal tries overall, and committed 28 turnovers, yet somehow managed to hang in with hard-nosed defense and flat-out guile.

"We made a deal at the beginning of the year," Boyne coach Jim Brown said. "I'd coach as hard as I could if they'd play as hard as they could and tonight was a prime example of that. They played their butts off."

"And my hat goes off to Charlevoix."

The win sends Charlevoix, 20-3, to the regional at Indian River Inland Lakes High School where it will play Kingsley, 15-8, in a semifinal game on Tuesday, March 10.

Kingsley beat the Rayders, 52-44, on Dec. 6.

"You've just got to go, show up, and play," said Erskine, whose ultra-deep team features seven seniors who saw significant playing time on Friday. "Hopefully we can just keep on going. I've looked at the teams (in the regional) and I think we're more senior-oriented than all the teams we might face in the next week. Hopefully we can use that experience — and keep playing hard."

"We've just got to show up and play as hard as we can and if we lose, if we get beat by a better team, we can always live with that. If you get beat by somebody who's not as good as you, then it's harder to take."

The Rayders drew on their experience to wrestle away a win from the Ramblers on Friday. There were no neighborly pleasantries exchanged between the Charlevoix County rivals as the game included 52 fouls — two players from each team fouled out — and no less than three Ramblers had to be helped from the court at one time or another because of injuries.

"We have a little saying called 'the man in the glass' and basically the bottom line is, 'Can you look yourself in the eye at the end of the game?'" Brown said. "And every one of those girls can look themselves in the eye and know they gave 110 percent."

"As a coach I couldn't be more proud, and I couldn't ask any more of them at all. And that's almost word for word what I told them in the locker room."

Charlevoix led all the way, but it never got comfortable against an inspired Rambler squad that matched it blow-for-blow in the intensity department.

"They just did a great job," Erskine said of the Ramblers. "They had a great game plan, and they just came to play, and I told my girls they were coming to play."

"It was a great girls' basketball game. It was up and down, it was physical. It was the kind of game that a team like us needs if we're going to go farther. And if they would have won, it would have helped them to go farther."

Charlevoix seized the early lead and slowly expanded it to 10, 32-22, by halftime.

It led by as many as 13 points, 51-38, midway through the fourth quarter, but the refuse-to-budge Ramblers kept lapping at the Rayders' heels, and five times in the second half trimmed their deficit to seven points, the final time with 1 minute, 27 seconds remaining on a Cheyenne Shumaker bucket which drew Boyne to within 53-46.

But that turned out to be the Ramblers' last field goal. They could muster just one more attempt at the bucket the rest of the way and turned the ball over five times as Charlevoix leaned on its bread and butter stifling press.

Charlevoix — which made just 14-of-31 free throw attempts on the night — made enough of its charity tosses, 6-of-10, in the final 1:13 to finally snuff out Boyne.

"Breaking their pressure, that's the first step," Brown said. "The second step is they're coming from behind trying to tip the ball, so you know you've got to get it across (midcourt), get it under control, and then let them get

Island girls grab the gold

FRANK SOLLE
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

After claiming their second straight regular season title with a 9-1 march through their Northern Lights League schedule, all that was left for the Beaver Island Lady Islanders was to win the championship of the league's annual post-season tournament, held this year at the Hannahville Indian School in the Upper Peninsula.

And win they did, defeating Grand Marais 65-26 in semi-final action, then besting their arch rivals, the Mackinac Island Lakers, 45-34 in the title tilt.

It was not an easy tournament win, however, as a number of the Islanders were sick, battling either cold or flu-like symptoms. Yet they played through that obstacle, just as they did their opponents.

"They were like a bunch of sick puppies," said Islanders coach Mike Myers. "Yet they were able to pull it together. I was real proud of the way they responded and came through."

A strong first half against Grand Marais in the opener allowed Myers to turn to his bench and rest his starters as the Islanders built a 30-14 margin at the break. Junior Briana Maudrie led the team with 12 points with senior Deven Cook adding 11. Ten of the team's 11 players scored in the win.

Against Mackinac Island the Islanders saw an early four-point edge slip away as the Lakers used a 13-4 second-quarter run to take an 18-13 lead at intermission. But the Islanders regained control on a 14-4 run to open the third quarter, then sealed the deal on a 10-2 run to start the final frame.

Senior center Heather McDonough scored eight of her team-high 14 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Islanders. Junior Alex Kuligowski added 11 with Cook chipping in 10.

Mackinac Island defeated Ojibwe Charter School 66-5 in the first round, then Hannahville 33-19 to reach the final game. Grand Marais topped Paradise 44-34 in the other first-round game.

The Islanders, whose basketball program began just last year due to the change of sporting seasons, closed out the campaign with a 14-3 record.

The Islanders boys team also wrapped up their season at the tournament with a loss to Paradise 49-38. The Islanders were not only battling illness, but were short-handed as well due to a number of schedule conflicts.

"When you've only got seven players including two middle-schoolers suited up and five of them are sick, that's pretty tough," said second-year Islanders coach Dan Martell. "But still, I don't think I've had a team play harder than these kids did."

The Islanders held a 24-18 lead at the half, but Paradise used three treys to outscore the Islanders 17-5 over the third quarter to pull away.

Only the three upperclassmen scored for the Islanders led by senior Patrick Cull and junior Dereck McDonough each with 14. Junior Cameron LaVasseur added 10.

The Islanders wrapped up their season with a 5-12 mark.

Mackinac Island, which claimed the regular season crown, defeated Hannahville for the boys tournament title, 85-75. Senior Michael Gambie led the Lakers with 41 points to go with the 52 he scored in their 93-72 win over Grand Marais. Hannahville beat Paradise 83-35 in the other semifinal game.

BUDGET

er than it actually was," she said. "In addition to that, the state changed from the single business tax ... so our taxable value decreased significantly."

Biddle said they amended the budget later to correct her calculation to keep it in line with the changes at the state.

"So when Mr. Lewis hadn't seen that December amendment and just assumed that money wasn't in the state," she added.

Lewis said he actually looked at the last five years of budgeting and the average yearly miscalculation from what the schools began with and what they actually received was a difference of approximately $930,000 and that their best year the schools' budget was off by $500,000.

"My concern, of course, was that kind of disparity in budgeting. In 2008, the original budget projected a fund balance at the end of the year of $868,000. The actual fund balance was $1,738,000," Lewis said. "The problem with that is simply two-fold. One is, if you're always projecting that you're going to have all this less revenue by a million dollars a year on the average, then you've made some decisions about how you're going to allocate resources to educate kids that say 'I better cut this, I better cut that, because I'm not going to have the money and you get to the end of the year and you have a million dollars left—it's too late to deploy those resources to target them for educational purposes."

He added, "That's the problem when you don't have that kind of close planning. And, not every district is like this. Very few are like this."

Janik again gave an overview of school finances showing a projection that per pupil funding will remain at $8,424, that enrollment is declining across the state and that retirement, health care and other costs continue to increase.

The district expects to lose 45 students next year through graduation and the trend of people leaving the state.

"This is a sad comment on the State of Michigan: We lost 29,000 students (statewide) this year," Janik said. "You could imagine about 12 or 13 school districts the size of Charlevoix just disappearing."

Retirement increased from 16.54 percent to 16.94 percent for a $25,000 increase. Blue Cross/Blue Shield increased by three percent for administrators and bus drivers for $3,300.

MESSA insurance for teachers and support staff is anticipated by Janik to increase by eight percent for an additional $128,000.

Energy retrofits are expected to save $73,000 and the board will look into the potential savings from academic class reconfiguration.

Also, since there has been a five-year freeze on spending on text books and other classroom supplies, a capital outlay will be necessary to ensure students and teachers have the materials they need.

"If you do the math and you keep every line item the same, we're anticipating a budget deficit of between $800,000 and $1,031,000," Janik said. "This is not unique to Charlevoix or to the State of Michigan."

Janik went on to explain that East Jordan is anticipating an $800,000 to $900,000 deficit; Boyne City faces a $500,000 deficit; and Petoskey schools could see between a $400,000 and $500,000 deficit in the 2009-2010 budget year.

"So it's virtually every district in the state of Michigan," he added.

Lewis asked how he could believe the administration's projections for the upcoming budget year when their projections are consistently off by hundreds of thousands of dollars each year.

"There is this consistent pattern of a fairly substantial amount of money that is miscalculated in those budgets and that is very difficult to plan," he said.

Biddle explained that numerous changes including staff retirements and increases and decreases in enrollment after a budget has been passed in June can alter the amount of expenditures by hundreds of thousands of dollars.

And, Janik said, the sale of property in several of the last few years also changes the amount of the fund balance.

390 school districts in the state get about $1,000 less than Charlevoix per pupil funding Lewis said.

One audience member asked if the teachers had the ability to switch between the MESSA and Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

Janik said he has had both insurances during his career and he found them comparable. However, all the teachers and support staff must agree on which insurance they choose.

MESSA insurance plan the teachers currently have comes with no deductible and costs the district just over $1,400 per employee per month.

A question was raised as to the "high deductible" of $4,000 which accompanies the Blue Cross/Blue Shield, but Janik explained, the school pays the deductible in full so there is no cost to the teacher.

One audience member said she was concerned that insurance providers may begin penalizing employers who pay the deductible for the employee because the employee will be more apt to visit the doctor more often when they don't have a financial stake in the insurance.

"Charlevoix Public Schools fronts the deductible," Janik said. "We fund it 100 percent."

Janik said he spoke to his insurance provider and he had not heard that.

"I'm looking at some of your figures and when you're talking about this the school paying deductibles I'm kind of appalled that I look up here and you've got $1,496 in insurance premiums plus the school, the taxpayer funds the deductible," said small business owner John Haggard. "I have one employee who has full coverage for himself and his family with a $500 deductible, which he has to pay and it's only $698 a month."

How as a taxpayer can have this and pay $1,496 per employee through an insurance agent that I can buy here locally with a lower price and a lot less deductible. So, for $500 let's have the taxpayers pay the $500 deductible and then pay only $698 per employee. That's a simple way out."

Janik said the insurance costs are set by contract.

"I think, as a taxpayer, the school board and the teachers should step forward in this day and age and not have to pay that kind of money. It's too much money for what we're paying in return," Haggard said.

Haggard also asked if the teachers get a percentage of the insurance premium if they opt out.

Any employee who is eligible for the insurance and opts out gets $588.

Rick Brandi, Charlevoix City treasurer asked if the teachers or support staff had any monetary responsibility for the insurance and went on to say that the city had found it beneficial when the employees have a financial stake in their insurance. "We found by having an employee contribution we've kept our costs down considerably for health care because they have to buy in," he said. "Your rates have increased by 66 percent over six years. The city's cost has stayed flat. We actually are paying less now than we did in basically in 2005-2006 and it's because we have involved the employees in selecting the benefits and having some contribution."

Brandi also said he is concerned on future costs as it pertains to retirement.

The auditor addressed the concern raised in the last meeting by a teacher who wanted to know if an independent audit could be completed.

The auditor said her firm is an independent accounting company licensed by the state.

Lewis asked how many districts received a letter on the deficiency noted in the Charlevoix schools audit as it pertained to the lack of segregation of accounting duties.

The auditor said approximately half of the more than 25 school districts her company serves have accounting offices so small that segregation is not physically possible or, as Janik added, financially viable.

"I was surprised, because when I pulled the management letters showing that deficiency were pretty rare out of the 500 school districts in the state," Lewis said.

Janik said he wanted to be clear that it was simply because one person keeps the schools' books, not because the accounting practices were in question.

Brandi said the city's audit contains the same comment because, again, the city has a minuscule accounting staff.

When asked why Charlevoix was unique in not having a settled contract, Janik went on to say that he would love to give Charlevoix teachers and support staff a contract similar to local school districts because it would save the district money.

"We have some very unique costs in our contract. We have costs that other districts do not have that are very expensive. They were great when we could afford them—we can no longer afford them," Janik said. "So, we have to cut personnel costs, cut employees, increase class sizes. We cannot continue the path we're on."

He added, "We're trying to maintain our high academic standards. What are we going to do to maintain the long-term financial stability of this district. We need to think more than one or two years into the future."

One audience member asked how other districts can be so much better at budgeting, to wit the auditor said Charlevoix schools' books were well kept.

"The fact is we do have $1.7 million but we're glad we do because we're going to have to dip into it," Janik said. "East Jordan right now is about to lay off six teachers, a principal, bus drivers and a curriculum director because they don't have a fund balance."

Audience member Tom Barnes said in his business he creates budgets and his concern is less on the difference between what is forecast and what is actually there and more on how much of a fund balance exists.

"If a board is coming to me with a conservative budget to make sure you're not going to fall on the south side of that, more power to them," he said. "I'm in favor of having a good healthy safety net."

Lewis challenged Janik to another forum where they could debate the items in question point by point, but the matter was not further discussed.

For more information on this, call Lewis at (800) 292-1934 or Janik at 547-3200.

gate replacement and lightning protection for airfield circuits.

Total cost of the architectural planning phase is estimated to be $103,400 including the required 2.5 percent city matching grant of $2,585.

Architect Mark Buday PLLC's firm will be designing the expansion projects plans.

"RW Armstrong reviewed the four proposals to determine, in our opinion, the firm whose expertise and vision best matched the City of Charlevoix's goal for the expanded airport terminal building," stated project manager Ron Leebon in a Feb. 19 letter to city council.

While the firm chose N.J. White Associates of Petoskey, Buday of Harbor Springs was chosen by city council.

"The city council felt Buday was the right choice, though both were qualified and I'm sure very talented and capable, but they just felt comfortable with Buday because of the job he did down at East Park," said Charlevoix Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. "Nothing has been proposed as to the type of building, so it basically came down to who we wanted to work with."

Since no actual architectural plans have been created at this point in time, city officials have no idea on the amount of square footage of the construction.

Straebel also said that, since they do not yet know the size and scope of the project, there is no way to determine how much the actual construction will cost.

"We will be using the existing building and expanding on that building," Straebel said. "Once we do get the project specifications solidified we will put that out for bid to the general contractors that are qualified."

According to Bailey, making small changes to the airport will result in big returns for the Charlevoix area.

"First and foremost we want to better accommodate our passengers and pilots who use utilize our airport," he said. "We're unique in that, in the winter we're pretty slow, but as business picks up in early spring and on through Christmas and New Year's, we often do not have room to house every one of our patrons."

Bailey, who works part-time at the airport to help cut costs, said that, while the plans are tentative, offering refreshments, meeting space, a room for pilots and more restrooms has the potential to draw more flyers to the Charlevoix area.

"We have a lot of people, believe it or not, who fly in for meetings and then turn around and fly back out when they're done," he said. "It's all real preliminary right now, but we're trying to figure out better ways to utilize what we have."

Bailey also said making an improvement to the runways by adding 300 feet—an idea that has not yet been finalized—would allow airlines to carry more fuel and therefore spend more money with Charlevoix's airport.

Charlevoix airport has 23 hangars which currently house 18 aircraft year-round.

The more weight you have the longer the runway you need in order to take off," Bailey said. "With 300 extra feet of runway, we could easily bring in another 55,000 to $10,000 (annually) in fuel sale proceeds. That could be a pretty cost-effective improvement."

An as-of-yet unscheduled public hearing will be held on the matter. Look for updates in future editions of the Courier.

Weed warehouse coming to Charlevoix? Folks buzzing over pot plaque

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Those baffled by the red sign in an empty Antrim Street office window proclaiming a medical marijuana store is coming to Charlevoix are not alone.

Several owners of businesses in the vicinity said they were unsure who erected the sign and whether it was genuine—all were emphatic about not being identified due to what they deemed a controversial topic.

"At this time I don't know if this is actually going in or not," said Charlevoix City Police Chief Gerard Doan.

The bright red sign, which reads: "Coming Soon! Medical Marijuana Store—Thank You Proposal 1," in white lettering is posted in the window of an empty building on Antrim Street near the corner of State Street.

Look to serve, not control

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Stephen Guthrie

I had a pastor friend a few years ago who led a fairly sized congregation in a neighboring community. I met him one day and asked how things were going and he told me he was getting his resume tuned up to go looking for a new church assignment.

Now, this fellow had come here from Arizona and he'd never been a big fan of winter in the frozen north, but that wasn't his reason for leaving the church he'd spent more than a decade building—it was a church building expansion program.

His church had grown large enough that the leadership had made the big decision to build on. And, to my friend, that decision marked the beginning of the end of his tenure there.

"How so?" I inquired of him. From my view, adding on to accommodate more people in the pews seemed like an endorsement of his work there.

Turns out my friend had a stack of statistical and anecdotal evidence showing a high probability that the pastor who leads a congregation through the fundraising, design and construction phases of a church expansion will leave within a year of dedicating the new building.

"It's all about control," he explained. "How so?" I asked again. "It's all about control," he explained. My friend's position was there were too many people wanting to be in control of some piece of the action. The power plays and infighting introduced so much conflict into the congregation that seeking after the right to choose the color of the carpet becomes more important than seeking after God.

The congregation has to vent all that frustration somewhere, he predicted, so they take it out on the pastor. Next thing anyone knows, he is being driven off into the wilderness.

I remembered my friend's insight when I encountered a church's need for control a couple years later.

Interviewing for an assignment as pastor of a small congregation, I sat across the table from the leaders of the pack. We were reviewing what they were expecting of me if I took the job.

Rather than discussing spiritual matters, one by one they informed me of what piece of church life they controlled, and how that piece would be off-limits to me and anyone else.

One woman was in charge of music, another in charge of décor. One man was in charge of the grounds, but a third woman claimed authority over the flower beds.

One couple counted and controlled all the money that passed through the church budget, and made it clear all of that was a closely held secret that I, as we used to say in the Navy, didn't have the "need to know."

As each one staked out their turf it became so clear to me that, for these folks, church was more of a fraternal organization than a body of believers.

Largely lacking in influence in their Monday through Saturday lives, their greatest fulfillment seemed to come not from worship or service but rather from exercising power and control over a little piece of their very small world on Sunday.

This whole business of being in charge and exercising power and control is evident in many churches, but that sort of behavior is not in keeping with the teachings of Jesus.

Jesus emphasized service, and was the very personification of humility. Although He was well within His rights as the Son of God to be served by all creation, He modeled the servant's heart for His disciples by humbling Himself and serving them.

He was sensitive to the needs of others and put their needs ahead of His own. Mark describes Him as healing the sick all night long. Motivated by compassion for suffering humanity, Jesus seemed willing to change His plans and rearrange His priorities to meet their needs.

Completely submissive in the way He related to others, nowhere in Scripture did Jesus model the need to control that is so common in many of today's congregations.

WEEKLY POLL

Although each congregation has at least one person seeking power, He who had all the power chose not to exercise it.

And although each congregation has at least one person claiming authority, He who had full authority chose not to impose it.

I propose that if we Christians would stop focusing on our need to control and begin cultivating ways to personally serve others we would send a very different message to the world than we do now.

If, when they looked at us they saw the humble, servant heart of Jesus, they might be drawn to Him in a way they are not now.

Oh, and my pastor friend? He went back to Arizona shortly after the new paint dried.

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

I recently traveled south to Lansing, Michigan with my husband since he was scheduled to attend a conference.

Though I've lived in Michigan my entire life I have yet to venture forth into the Michigan State Capitol. I missed my high school senior trip back in 1967 so I decided it was time to catch up.

I started my adventure by picking up a self-guided tour book in the lobby.

"Start on the third floor," suggested the dark haired woman with a warm welcoming smile.

After the brief flight upwards, the elevator door opened up, and then my mouth was open just as wide.

I walked into an art history major's dream come true.

Exquisite details and colors very close to the natural colors used in the 1800s were displayed before me.

I saw magnificent marble-like columns, beautiful art work and detailed chandeliers with the additional embellishment of elks standing majestically near the well lit globes. Everywhere I looked beautiful hues of blue and shades of burnt amber reminiscent of a bygone era swirled in various designs along the walls.

I turn to hear the giggles echoing off the hallways as school children learn about the Capitol's history.

They gathered together in a well niche space poised at attention while their local Representative shared the importance of what takes place in this building.

I continue on my educational tour viewing the House and Senate Chambers but spent more time looking at the gold leaf décor and checkerboard tiled floors.

While walking down an empty hallway admiring the exquisite handiwork of many craftsmen a gentleman with a warm smile took notice of my presence and began to explain the technique of using stale beer and water to create the effect of grain in wood.

This novel idea fooled the eye into thinking pine was actually deep, dark walnut.

"One more way of saving money but keeping the opulent look of the Victorian Era," he said.

I listened as he continued to tell me about matching the colors perfectly by gently scraping chips of paint from the original plaster and studying it under a microscope.

He felt no computer image could capture the correct hues. He directed me to what I thought were marble columns but were actually cast iron and plaster skillfully crafted to look like marble.

Now my curiosity peeked and I asked this soft spoken man with the wire rimmed glasses who he was.

The smile widened and his eyes sparkled as he explained he was one of the master decorative painters hired to work on the restoration of the Capitol building.

Right place, right time.

He gave me a guided tour as he pulled a key from his pocket and opened doors not listed in my guidebook.

REPEAL GUN BAN

Dear Representative Bart Stupak: I am extremely disappointed that you did not stand up for the Second Amendment on the issue of S.22, the Omnibus Public Lands Management Act of 2009.

This bill would greatly expand land controlled by the National Park Service, and thus spread the agency's gun restrictions to even more areas. The park service's gun ban should be repealed, not expanded.

Although the pro-gun side won today, the battle is not over. The anti-gun leadership will try to bring the bill to the floor again, this time with a rule intended to exclude a pro-gun amendment to repeal the park service's anti-gun regulations.

If that is the case, I urge you to protect the Second Amendment rights of law-abiding Americans and vote against the rule.

CHARLEVOIX FEE UNFAIR TO ISLANDERS

There have been many suggested taxes in the history of the relationships between Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, and Beaver Island.

Many of them have been logical. Many of them have been fair. Many of them have provided better services to the Island residents that are required by geographical barriers to get to Beaver Island by using a flight service based in Charlevoix or a ferry service that is based in Charlevoix.

Some of these fees, taxes, or whatever word you want to use to describe them have been fair.

For example, it makes perfect sense to have to pay a fee to park a car in the parking lot there at Charlevoix Airport, and, as long as the fee is not excessive, the fee is reasonable because there is a benefit.

No one likes to pay this fee, but it is fair and acceptable.

The newest suggested tax/fee that has been proposed by the Charlevoix City Council is totally unfair and unacceptable.

The proposed tax involves a $1 tax on each person traveling by air from Charlevoix Airport.

Since both air services use Charlevoix Airport to fly to and from Beaver Island, Beaver Island residents and visitors would be required to pay this tax.

How would Charlevoix city residents feel about a tax for essential trips over the bridge to go north toward Petoskey?

Would this tax be fair and acceptable to them?

Charlevoix residents and visitors could obviously get to Petoskey another way. And, although there is a ferry service for part of the year, there is no other way to get to and from Beaver Island for several months of the year other than by using one of the air services.

Some might argue that the tax would be acceptable depending upon the reason for the tax. Beaver Island residents are being told that the reason for this tax is to balance the Charlevoix City budget. Would that be an acceptable reason to Charlevoix residents for a bridge tax?

Would Charlevoix residents want to pay a $1 tax to the City of Charlevoix for every time they needed to go to a medical appointment, do some shopping or just get away for a short period of time and then pay another $1 tax to be able to get home again?

Charlevoix has been a lifeline for Beaver Island throughout the years. Never before has the City of Charlevoix suggested a tax on Beaver Island travelers.

Beaver Island has come to depend upon the businesses of Charlevoix, and probably contribute a not-so-small amount to the economy of Charlevoix.

Is a $15,000 shortfall in the city budget a reason to jeopardize this wonderful relationship that has developed?

I would certainly hope that Charlevoix businesses, individually and collectively, think seriously about this proposed tax and help, individually and collectively, change the minds of those in city government who continue to propose it against obvious Beaver Island opposition.

The phrase "taxation without representation" seems appropriate here.

A headline also comes to mind: "City of Charlevoix Proposes Unfair Tax on Beaver Island."

mediately as one of the Project Manager's for the Capitol Restoration and he is still working at the Capitol today.

His art studio is above the chambers of the House and Senate, a location he chose because of the natural light coming in through the skylights.

Among the heat ducts and pipes in this attic art studio you could peer through the etched glass squares and catch a glimpse of the hearings below.

Willard "Bill" Finch was one of the four ornamental paint contractors hired to complete this project within the scheduled time frame.

All worked together as a team and when you see how much restoration was done in the time frame of 1989 to 1992 you will be amazed.

If you ever venture to visit our state capitol and happen to look up towards the glass ceiling tiles while watching a being bill passed or vetoed, know that a very special person is right above you replicating artwork from photos taken in the early 1900s.

I am grateful he found me on his walk down a quiet hallway. My high school senior trip in '67 would have paled in comparison.

Regional quiz bowl results ENGAGEMENTS

In its most competitive final yet, more than 80 students from seven area schools participated in the fourth Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District Quiz Bowl League tournament of the school year.

The 16 teams played seven round-robin games to determine final placement in the championship round. Seedings for the final round were determined by won-loss record with total score serving as the tie breaker. The Feb. 20 event was held at North Central Michigan College.

In the contest for the grand championship Charlevoix C (5-2) was ahead of Petoskey A (6-1) by a score of 100-85 going into the last lightning round, the equivalent of the fourth quarter. Petoskey A won by a final score of 145 to 110 to take the overall title while Charlevoix C secured the Class C championship.

Concord Academy Petoskey won the Class D division with a record of 5-3, taking 5th place in the overall standings by defeating East Jordan A in the final round.

This was one of the most competitive tournaments this year. East Jordan B won in sudden death overtime to defeat Charlevoix B for seventh place. The upset of the day occurred in round 3 when eventual 11th place finisher Boyne City B delivered Petoskey A's only loss of the day by coming from behind in the last lightning round to win 155-150.

Final standings, overall won-loss records and final scores for the 16 teams are as follows:

1st Petoskey A 7-1, 1540; 2nd Charlevoix C 5-3, 1125; 3rd Petoskey B 6-2, 1140; 4th Charlevoix A 5-2, 1050; 5th Concord Academy Petoskey 5-3, 940; 6th East Jordan A

Make Eye Contact at art exhibit

As long as Kathy Britton Mays can remember she has been passionate about art.

Receiving her first easel at 2 years old, she loved painting with her artistic dad.

From youth until now, drawing and painting was what she chose to do with her free time.

Mays said she can't remember a time when she didn't draw.

The past eight years has been truly a huge growth period for her art, according to Mays.

During a trip to El Salvador, Mays gave children the opportunity to use paints and create murals together. She also collaborated with a local artist to create a piece that would stay in El Salvador.

When Mays came back to her home in Charlevoix, she began painting the people that she had met.

"I fell in love with faces and painting portraits; people inspire me," she said.

Now, her "Eye Contact" exhibit currently featured at the Charlevoix Circle of Arts has taken her in yet another direction.

"Making eye contact acknowledges another person's presence and humanity; another person's worth," Mays said.

In the "Eye Contact" series, Mays has painted people of different races, ages and situations.

She wants the portraits to look right into the viewer's eyes.

Mays said she wants viewers to have to make eye contact. In doing so, Kathy hopes for people to look through social boundaries to recognize common emotions.

The reaction to viewing this series has been phenomenal according to Mays.

The newly elected Charlevoix Circle of Arts president Kathryn Lobenherz said people cannot help but look back into the eyes of the paintings—whether it is the eyes of an African woman, your neighbors or the autistic boy.

"This exhibit has evoked strong reactions from our viewers," she said. "You can't help but engage yourself and imagine the personalities behind the paintings."

Lobenherz said the Circle of Arts believes Mays' motivation in this series, which is her conviction that art in any form is valuable and something people need to enrich their lives.

To bring this passion and conviction into action, Mays and the Circle of Arts plan to take this series into Michigan schools.

Working collaboratively, the goal is to provide youth with the opportunity to engage in art imaginatively.

The instructional series is designed to develop art appreciation and promote creative writing skills in our area's students.

The exhibit will run through April 4 at the Circle of Arts, 109 Clinton St.

Robots to battle: Fun and learning with LEGOs

BENJAMIN GOHS

EDITOR

What more could a kid want than building his own remote controlled robot out of LEGOs?

Why, using that multi-colored mechanized automation to do battle, of course.

"They (children) are in for math and science and engineering with LEGOs," said Karen Bogoski, Michigan program director for All About Learning, the group presenting the LEGO Battle Bot program.

Founder and All About Learning president Dave Stackpole will instruct youth from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday, March 21 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Bogoski said participants will use advanced LEGO pieces unavailable for retail purchase to design, build and then do battle against the LEGO robots built by other children the same day.

"Mostly they're going to have fun," said Charlevoix Public Library director Valerie Meyerson.

"It's learning without knowing they're learning."

Meyerson added that, while there is no cost to attend, you must call 237-7350 to reserve your spot by March 20.

"Some of the concepts we teach are simple machines, forces in motion, electric motors and gearing ratios," Bogoski said. "The kids have a blast. It ranges from those who have never played with LEGOs to those self-proclaimed experts."

Students will learn to identify LEGO blocks, plates, beams, connector pegs and much more.

"In the battle bot program, they will build a basic chassis and then we give them five choices of bots they can turn that chassis into," Bogoski said. "They get to make like three different machines either using our design or they can experiment and come up with things on their own."

Each robot contains a simple motor capable of forward and reverse

The motor is connected to a battery/control box via wire.

The robots will be rammed into each other demolition derby style while students are advised to watch for their opponent's construction weaknesses.

Bogoski explained that, despite the apparent complexity of engineering their own robot, children generally retain much of what they learn.

"We don't lecture the kids," he said. "We certainly strive to teach them in the program, but it's more of a hands-on, exploratory learning, and that's the best kind of learning the kids can do."

Field trip programs such as battle bots, a video game creation workshop, crazy science and others are available in 20 states nationwide.

Contact All About Learning at (616) 328-3172 or karen@michiganlearning.com for more information about bringing one of their educational programs to your school or organization.

OBITUARIES

Marian G. Beatty: December 8, 1913 - March 7, 2009

Marian G. Beatty, 95, of Charlevoix, died Saturday, March 7, 2009, at Munson Medical Center in Traverse City.

She was born Dec. 8, 1913, in Lester, Wash. to Harry and Hazel (Kinch) Taylor.

Marian graduated from Central Michigan University, and earned a master's degree in Education from the University of Michigan.

On Sept. 24, 1936, she married Jackson K. Beatty in Phillips, W. Va.

They retired to Norwood (Charlevoix) in 1967, and Jack preceded her in death on March 29, 1992.

Marian was a member of the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix, and she attended the Norwood United Methodist Church.

She enjoyed painting in watercolor and quilting.

Marian is survived by her sons, Jackson Taylor (Rebecca) Beatty of Sherman Oaks, Calif., and Scott Turner (Kaye) Beatty of Charlevoix; granddaughter, Alison Beatty of Ann Arbor; grandson, Jesse (Jessi) Beatty of Clawson; great-grandson Turner Beatty; and very dear friends, Ruth Hoppe and Yasmin Richmond of Norwood.

Memorial contributions may be made to the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

A service will be held later this spring.

The Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix is handling the arrangements.

"I believe, from what I've heard, it's a joke," said Charlevoix Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. "I don't know any of the facts and, as far as I know, no one has come to the city and applied for any variances."

Michigan joined more than a dozen states last November when voters approved the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act.

According to the Michigan Medical Marijuana—spelled thusly in governmental literature for no apparent reason—Program Web site, you must be a Michigan resident who has an established relationship with your primary medical doctor and you must qualify as having at least one of the following debilitating medical conditions including, but not limited to: Cancer, glaucoma, HIV/AIDS, hepatitis C, Crohn's and Alzheimer's disease.

While the program will not go into effect until April 4, concerned inquiries to local government have spurred action.

"At this point, we haven't heard or seen anything about that (marijuana business) coming to the city, but we have been researching the legality of it and whether or not it could be controlled by zoning," said Charlevoix City Planner Mike Spencer. "I've heard rumors about this and ... somebody wanted me to look into it, so I did, and there's nothing to prevent putting a banner up inside a building."

He added, "If there is a lawful use under Michigan law, my initial opinion is it is something we could not prevent but, if research indicates that type of store could be associated with increased crime, then maybe the city could do something about keeping it away from schools, churches and out of downtown."

Application forms and instructions are not available at this time but, now that the law has been passed, the Michigan Medical Marijuana Program will be overseen by the Bureau of Health Professions, Department of Community Health.

Patients under the age of 18 can get a prescription for medical marijuana for certain medical reasons as long as they have the consent of their parent or guardian.

Qualifying patients will be allowed to possess up to 2.5 ounces of marijuana or 12 plants—both of which must be kept in a secured location.

A $100 application fee applies unless you can demonstrate financial need.

Stop Hamlet, stop McBain, right?

Tough task when there's two of 'em.

Charlevoix managed to hold All-Stater Elizabeth Hamlet to 10 points Wednesday, but her sister, freshman guard Annemarie Hamlet, scored 20 and displayed poise and cool well beyond her years as McBain ended the Rayders' season in a Class C girls' basketball regional championship game, 53-47, at Inland Lakes High School.

"I'm so proud of those girls," said Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine after his team finished 21-4. "Tonight we came and competed for 32 minutes. ... And that was our big thing, compete for 32 minutes, and you can't ask for anything more than that."

The Ramblers, 24-1, will play Houghton, 24-1, in a state quarter-final game 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 17, at Petoskey High School.

For Charlevoix, the loss ended yet another outstanding season, one in which the Rayders reached the 20-win plateau for the second straight year, went undefeated en route to the Lake Michigan Conference championship, and won their fifth consecutive district title.

"You can't ask for anything more than that," Erskine said. "They're young kids, they're teenagers, they're trying to do the best they can and I thought

First place in the Powerlifting Championships

The Charlevoix Football team took first place in the UP State Powerlifting Championships. The Rayders narrowly defeated Gaylord and Sault Ste. Marie to take the title. Several players received medals in their weight class including River Gauthier with a first, Jacob Roach with a first, Josh Wolletz with a second, Marc Durkee with a second, Jon Boss with a second, Isaac Hosper with a third, Casey Helstrom with a third, Justin Williams, Alex Foster with a fourth, Jake McClean with a fourth and Braden Knoop with a fourth. The team gave special thanks to Keith Carey, Steve Gauthier, Tom Rankl and Roger Knoop for helping make the trip possible. Pictured are (front, from left) coach Gauthier, Jacob Roach, Justin Williams (second row, from left) Ian Gauthier, Marc Durkee, Chris Waha, Corey Loucks, River Gauthier, Isaac Hosper, John Boss, Jake McClean, Coach Carey, Gunner Whitely, Clayton Mitchell, Casey Helstrom, Jake Rankl, Braden Knoop, Chris Kele, Josh Wolletz, Dylan Sladek, Alex Foster and Coach Jess.

they just did a tremendous job."

The Rayders employed a for nala of tenacious full-court pressure to wear down and eventually sink their teeth into opponents all season long. On Wednesday, they met their match in an outstanding team of solid athletes, led by Oakland University signee Elizabeth Hamlet and her sister who, though just a freshman, proved to be as skilled and heady as any point guard the Rayders have encountered this season.

"I'll tell you what, I give Charlevoix a lot of credit," said McBain coach Todd Hamlet, Annemarie's and Elizabeth's father. "I thought Bret had an excellent scheme tonight, triangle-and-two (defense), sagging in the middle, throwing our offense off a little."

"But I give our kids a lot of credit too. They overcame that and they worked it out and they were tough down at the end."

The Rayders employed that defense to a certain degree of success against a McBain team that snapped a four-year streak of regional futility, capturing the school's first girls' basketball regional crown since 1994.

But try as they did, the Rayders simply didn't have an answer for the younger Hamlet, who scored 16 of her points in the second half, committed just four turnovers — none in the final two quarters — and knocked down nine of her 14 fourth-quarter free throw attempts to keep the Rayders at bay as they scrambled, ultimately in futility, to catch the Ramblers during crunch time.

"Annemarie had 16 (points) and zero turnovers in the second half against a press like Charlevoix's. I've got to lift her up on that one," Todd Hamlet said.

McBain seized the lead early in a game that evolved into a knock-down drag-out brawl, the type of game Charlevoix typically excels at, particularly during tournament time.

But the Ramblers refused to back down, and they matched the Rayders blow for blow. "I give props to them because they played their guts out and they did a very nice job," said Elizabeth Hamlet, who, despite scoring well below her season average of 17 points per game, had 12 rebounds, six assists and six blocks. "Yeah, we expected it to be physical and our practices are just as physical as that. We've got girls beating each other up (in practice)."

Charlevoix, which never trailed by more than six points until very late in the fourth quarter, led just twice, both times by a point. The second and last time came 27 seconds into the final stanza when Tammy Potter nailed a 3-pointer for a 37-36 advantage.

"We took the lead in the fourth quarter, thought everything was going our way, and stuff happens," said Erskine, who led the Rayders to a 62-57 win over McBain in a regional semifinal game last season. "Last year it happened to them, this year it happened to us."

McBain then went on a 9-2 run to seize a 45-39 advantage with just under three minutes to play. With the Rayders scrambling to stop the clock, they sent Annemarie Hamlet to the line and the freshman delivered, making nine charity tosses over the final 2:58 to ice it. She finished 11-for-16 from the line for the game, and also made six steals.

Charlevoix made four of its 14 field goal attempts in fourth quarter, including a pair of Erica Faust, 3-pointers that kept the game in doubt until the waning seconds. On top of that sub-par shooting performance, the Rayders turned the ball over on several occasions during crunch time, costing them precious scoring opportunities.

Mendith Rich scored 11 points to lead the Rayders, while Faust added nine, all on 3-pointers and Shauna Spenceley had eight KC McCary hauled down 16 rebounds for Charlevoix, while Potter added eight.

McBain center Jamie Geesman finished with 13 points, 12 rebounds and seven steals turning in an outstanding performance in the paint against the likes of Charlevoix's Potter and Mendith Rich.

"That girl (Geesman), we tell her she had to be a beast tonight in the middle because Charlevoix is tough," coach Hamlet said. "We knew that along this road there was going to be some ugly ones and some tough ones, and it was both tonight. You look at any (tournament) run and there's one gouge and scratch-your-eyes-out game and I hope that's it. Hopefully it's good preparation for us."

New Rent Concessions will benefit low-income households

USDA Rural Development Authorizes New Rent Concessions at Pine Cove & Charlevoix Apartments

For income-qualifying applicants, we have been authorized to deduct up to $200 per month from our rents, making the effective minimum rents $250 for a one-bedroom apartment and $284 for a two-bedroom. According to Shelly Fuller, area director of the Traverse City USDA Rural Development office, "Rent concessions are to be based on the household's net income and offered to applicants whose rent-to-income ratios are more than 40%, with each household receiving in concessions the amount that would have been given to them if RA (subsidy) was available."

Since all of our subsidy is currently being used, these new rent concessions will be a great benefit for low-income households in the area who are in need of rental assistance. We have several one-bedrooms available immediately; some two-bedrooms will be available later this month, as well as a barrier-free one-bedroom. Job fairs in Charlevoix, Petoskey

The particulars

Northwest Michigan Works! job fairs are scheduled as follows this spring:

• 1-4 p.m. Tuesday, March 31, at Castle Farms at M-66 in Charlevoix

• 1-4 p.m. Tuesday, April 7, at Emmet County Fairgrounds Community Center in Petoskey.

Job seekers should bring along copies of a current resume. They should be prepared to fill out job applications and meet prospective employers on the spot for interviews.

RYAN BENTLEY
NEWS-REVIEW

If they're in the hunt for employment, area residents soon will be able to pursue multiple job possibilities in a one-stop setting.

Northwest Michigan Works! has scheduled two job fairs this spring around Emmet and Charlevoix counties. The first runs 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, March 31, at Castle Farms on M-66 in Charlevoix and the second from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 7, at the Emmet County Fairgrounds Community Center.

Each fair is expected to have booths representing at least a dozen employers.

By scheduling two job fairs for the area rather than one as in the past, Michigan Works! business liaison Angie Ross said her agency hopes to offer more convenience for residents and provide a less-crowded atmosphere. The fairs are offered at a time of year when many of the area's businesses traditionally gear up for their busy season.

Once again, participation will be free for job-seekers as well as businesses.

"The Job Fairs make the hiring process more convenient," Ross said. "Job seekers will be exposed to varied work opportunities and employers will save time and money in advertising, recruiting, and interviewing."

Health care, resorts, manufacturing and job placement are among the business fields that will be represented at the job fairs.

"Obviously, we all know what's going on in the economy and we weren't sure what would happen, but we're looking pretty good on the business side," Ross said. "We've got a nice variety so far, and I think we'll get a few more before the dates pop up on us."

Last year's job fair in Petoskey drew at least 400 job seekers from Emmet, Charlevoix, and several neighboring counties. With joblessness on the rise in recent months — Michigan Department of Labor and Economic Growth statistics showed the unemployment rate for December 2008 at 12.2 percent, compared to 8.5 percent a year earlier — Ross figures this year's events combined will have a bigger turnout than the 2008 fair.

Emmet County and Castle Farms have donated the use of their facilities for the job fair, Ross noted. Businesses interested in free booth space should contact Diane or Angie immediately at 347-5150.

Bringing back familiar flavor Restaurant specializes in comfort food

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

While it will carry the name Kelsey B's Lakeside Food & Spirits, fans of the old Nanny's Restaurant will see some familiar faces later this spring. The most recent incarnation of the site located at 230 Ferry Ave. was Scoville's Waterfront Grille—which closed in November, 2008—but, said Jack Strand, a partner in the new business, he couldn't resist the temptation to reopen a restaurant in his former location.

"It's going to be similar to the old Nanny's menu: northern Michigan comfort food," Strand said. "We're going to have fresh salads, fresh local fish and our specialties will probably be our surf and turf and burgers, salads, steaks."

Tentative hours will be 11 a.m. to midnight seven days a week, though the hours may vary.

"We plan on being open year-round," Strand said. "We're going to be a community-minded and there's been a lot of demand for this type of restaurant to come back and that's what we intended to do is give them the old Nanny's Restaurant back with a few changes in the decor and changes in the menu."

He added, "We're going back to the soft, relaxing ambiance. It's going to be a place where you're going to want to come in and be comfortable."

Strand hopes to open his doors in late April or early May.

Kelsey B's is a joint venture among Strand, Patricia Abbey, Karlee and Philip.

"We're excited about it and look forward to opening it up for the community," Strand said.

Peace activists mark six years of war

Public welcome to event

For the sixth consecutive year, northern Michigan residents will join with individuals and peace advocates across the nation to protest the invasion that started the Iraq War and to call for an immediate end to the occupation.

Representatives of Northern Michigan People for Peace, Little Traverse League for Peace and Freedom and Traverse City groups Veterans for Peace, Traverse for Peace and Justice, Neahawanta Center and MidEast: JustPeace will gather in their respective communities at 11 a.m., Saturday, March 21 to mark the war's sixth anniversary.

"In all of our previous demonstrations we said, 'Support the Troops, Bring Them Home Now!' We're still saying that," said NMP4P and LTLPF member Ellis Boal. "And, we're also saying we don't want our government to start any more wars like this."

Northern Michigan People for Peace will gather from 11 a.m. to noon in Petoskey, at the corner of Mitchell St. and U.S. 31.

Little Traverse League for Peace and Freedom will gather from 11 a.m. to noon at Bridge Park in Charlevoix.

Traverse City area opponents of the Iraq and Afghanistan wars will meet at 11:30 a.m. directly across from the Horizon Bookstore, near Front and Park streets, and walk through downtown to the Parkway.

"Look what has the war cost us," said LTLPF member Rachel Wright, of Charlevoix. "U.S. troops have suffered 4,255 casualties, 3,423 of these in combat. Counts of injured soldiers are unreliable; the official tally is 31,089, but most estimates exceed 100,000. It's estimated that 320,000 of our soldiers have suffered brain injuries. Among veterans, there are 18 suicides a day."

She added, "And, have we made life better for the Iraqi people? Millions have fled the country, and one million people, mostly women and children, are internally displaced, homeless and without a means of support."

"With the U.S. policy of 'We don't do body counts,' it's difficult to obtain exact figures of Iraqi civilians killed," said MidEast: JustPeace member Marian Kromkowski of Suttons Bay. "JustForeignPolicy.org estimates that more than 1.3 million Iraqi civilians have died since 2003. But even though Americans aren't counting, Iraqis are dying, and every victim has a name and a family. It is time to recognize that more war will not bring more peace."

Wright said Donald Rumsfeld scoffed at Lawrence Lindsey's prediction that the war would cost $100 to $200 billion, calling his estimate "baloney."

She added, "Six years later we're enmeshed in the second-longest war in U.S. history—after Vietnam—and the second-most expensive—after World War II—and estimates of total cost are now between $1.5 and $3 trillion. What could we have done instead with our money? We could have paid for universal health care and new schools across the country, and still had money left over to repair our crumbling roads and bridges."

Participants at each of the gatherings are asked to bring signs and banners.

People in Charlevoix and Petoskey are invited to a soup lunch immediately following the event.

The Traverse City event will include a solemn reading of all the names of Michigan soldiers that have died in Iraq and Afghanistan by members of Veterans for Peace.

City: Disparity in EMS/fire fees; rates could increase

BENJAMIN GOHS EDITOR

Charlevoix City's fire department and ambulance service is equitable, at least for some.

According to officials, the city taxpayers are funding more than their fair share for fire and ambulance emergency medical service (EMS) services provided by the city.

"It appears, at this point, the City of Charlevoix residents are subsidizing some of the fire/EMS services for at least one township, and we want to bring some parity to the cost of those services," said Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel.

A portion of the cost of an ambulance runs is paid for by one of two medical insurance companies: Medicaid; and Blue Cross/Blue Shield, the latter of which pays $407.23 for basic life support services which includes ambulance services from treating a sprained ankle to transporting a patient from one place to another.

and $483.23 for advanced life support which includes the administering of drugs, starting an IV and critical care.

The rest of the funding must come from public coffers.

Since Charlevoix City Fire Department is the only provider of emergency medical service in the immediate vicinity, surrounding townships including Charlevoix, Marion, Norwood, Eveline Stimulus funds for Cvx schools? Administration, union officials differ

BY NOAH FOWLE NEWS-REVIEW

Although evidence of stimulus money has shown up in communities throughout northern Michigan, Charlevoix Superintendent Chet Janik is reticent to count on any federal money in next year's budget.

"The process hasn't been finalized. It'd be nice to know if we're going to get any funds," said Janik.

Anne Marie Conway, a negotiator with the local chapter of Michigan Education Association and Charlevoix

High School teacher, said the union recently sent out a postcard purporting the local school system is scheduled to see $600,000 from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

She cited an early Senate Fiscal Agency report for proof of the funding.

"There is a lot of doom and gloom out there and that will only scare people away," said Conway. "But this is good news."

But, Janik said, "We're not anticipating the federal money. We've been reducing staff for the last five to six years and we're anticipating 40 to 45 less students next year."

Working on a tight budget is nothing new for Janik, who, like most of the state's school districts, is witnessing a decline in enrollment.

"Every time we lose a student, we lose $8,424," Janik said.

Conway countered that more energy needs to be put towards allocating funding more efficiently, and said

Tapawingo closes after 25 years

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The gray house-turned-restaurant on seven acres near the shores of St. Clair Lake in Ellsworth known as Tapawingo is no more.

Mobil Travel Guide called it "Michigan's most acclaimed restaurant" and celebrity chefs like Mario Batali and Emeril Lagasse even had guest chef stints at the eatery, but according to owner Harlan Peterson the current economy has forced him to close the doors.

"This has been a very, very difficult decision," Peterson said. "The numbers had been diminishing as the economy has been diminishing, and it just becomes harder and harder to maintain the standards that we want to be known for."

He added, "There is a lot I will miss, as I was very proud of the restaurant and the style and identity of the restaurant."

Located at 9502 Lake

Street, the restaurant for 25 years offered dishes ranging from pumpkin gnocchi and pheasant sausage to bacon-wrapped rabbit loin with creamy spaetzle.

"We called it American modern," Peterson said. "It was relatively specialty dining where everything from the bread on up was from scratch, and never frozen—and never a deep fat fryer."

Peterson got his start in the food business working at the Rowe Inn, another of Ellsworth's culinary mainstays.

"I took a little cooking class in Paris (France) and it turned me on to being a food professional," he said. "I was an automotive designer for Ford Motor Company for about 10 years and I'd always loved to cook—that brief class kind of pushed me into the restaurant business."

Peterson thanked his many customers for their quarter-century of support.

"Our public announcement went out to our mailing list yesterday to about 4,000 addresses, and I've been reading e-mails all last evening and all today," he said. "Sometimes they've been coming in faster than I can read."

Peterson added, "We were quite a bit like family because our staff became known to these people—so this has been emotional."

The business will now be placed for sale.

"It is my fondest hope ... and with the right game plan, that it could continue to be a seasonal restaurant," Peterson said.

Medical marijuana store a hoax
Local man behind sign

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The red sign stating a medical marijuana store would soon open on Antrim Street was a prank.

Charlevoix resident John Haggard admitted to posting the sign nearly six weeks ago.

"I wanted to see if there was any reaction from the voters to see if the voters really knew what they (had) approved," he said. "It wasn't a protest. I just put it up with the idea that, whoever drew the proposal up didn't have any concept of what the ramifications were going to be when they tried to implement what they were trying to do."

In addition to posting the sign, Haggard also sent a check for $100 and a request to the Michigan Department of Community Health to see if they would grant him a license to grow and sell medical marijuana.

"I've had quite a few people want to invest when, and if, I could get a license," Haggard said.

Haggard received a response in a letter dated March 13 from Celeste Clarkson, manager of the compliance section of the health regulatory division of the bureau of health professionals at the Michigan Department of Community Health.

"Specifically, the Michigan Medical Marijuana Act does not provide a certification process to allow for facilities, to grow and sell marijuana," Clarkson stated. "The ... act is a registry program for patients with certain, identified debilitating medical conditions, and for the patients' designated caregiver."

Haggard's check was returned, uncashed.

"That just goes to show there are a lot of questions in this issue that have not been answered," said Charlevoix City Police Chief Gerard Doan.

During a March 23 phone interview, Clarkson would not say how many requests similar to Haggard's have been made.

"I can't speak specifically to your situation, but, at this point, we have had very limited request because the program is not up and running," she said.

Under the marijuana act, approved by voters in November, 2008, Michigan citizens will be able to begin receiving marijuana registration cards on April 6.

"The act does not provide for the state to provide or endorse a (marijuana) provider," Clarkson said. "This act provides for a registry program for patients and their caregivers."

Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. said he sees nothing wrong with Haggard's practical joke.

"It's just something to stimulate conversation and trying to get different opinions out there," he said. "On any issue there's always those for it and those against it."

Carlson added, "Obviously the people voted to approve that proposal, but that does not mean everyone is always going to agree with it."

Carlson preferred not to opine on Michigan's Medical Marijuana Act.

And Haggard, a cancer survivor, closed by saying, "In all my years I've never indulged (smoking marijuana)—even when I was in the service."

Sister cities meet: Islanders, city heads talk flight

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The March 18 meeting between Beaver Islanders and Charlevoix's mayor, city manager and airport manager was apparently a productive one.

Charlevoix Mayor Norman Carlson Jr. said the meeting reinforced his position that he intends to recommend that Charlevoix City Council not levy the proposed $1 per person boarding fee.

"It was a pretty good turnout and I think we answered most of the questions they (islanders) had," Carlson said of the nearly 30 people who attended the gathering at Beaver Island's new community center.

Island resident and director of the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce, Steve West, said he felt as though the city officials were interested in the concerns of his fellow islanders.

"The Island-Charlevoix relationship is good; the meeting helped improve it," he stated in an e-mailed response to questions.

West said Carlson's decision to not to recommend the proposed fee, which was expected to have raised $15,000 if levied, was an important step toward helping taxpayers already suffering from a struggling economy.

"At this moment in economic time we should be looking for every possible way to lower taxes and fees, not raise them," he stated. "I think it is important for readers to understand that a huge chunk of Charlevoix airport's funds come from the FAA and the federal government because there are over 10,000 commercial departures a year from Charlevoix."

West added, "Those departures are not to Ireland but to America's Emerald Isle. In short, the air traffic to Beaver Island is a key reason Charlevoix has the money for such a fine facility."

Charlevoix City Manager Rob Straebel said the trip strengthened relations between the cities by allowing both sides to voice concerns and answer each other's questions.

"I think we shed a lot of light on the overall financial conditions of the airport," he said. "And, I think that the Beaver Island residents have a lot clearer picture of the cost of services and revenues that come into the airport and what we're ultimately trying to achieve with our long-range plans with the airport."

Carlson could present city council with his proposal to not pursue the flight fee and seek alternative sources of revenue generation at the 7 p.m., April 6, council meeting.

Taxes are never popular

EAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Taxes are never popular, especially not this time of year. Something most people consider to be certain as death is not likely to be on anyone's top 10 favorites list.

Few political candidates achieve office by promising to raise taxes for everyone. Although promising to tax those who make a lot of money is more popular.

I've read varying reports of what proportion of each person's total income we ordinary citizens pay in taxes.

The figure runs from 30% to 50% or more, depending on which commentator you listen to.

That includes sales taxes, social security taxes, taxes on gas, line, tobacco, liquor and a host of other smaller categories, in addition to the income taxes that are on our minds this time of year. Precise numbers are hard to come by, since what counts as a tax differs from one situation to another.

We are sometimes encouraged to believe that the government—federal, state and local—is taking our hard-earned money from us and squandering it on worthless projects that favor only a few.

We currently hear questions like: why are our tax dollars being given to huge financial institutions and major auto companies? why do I have to pay taxes to support projects I don't approve of?—such as stem cell research, abortion or welfare; why should I pay taxes to support schools when I don't plan to ever have any children who would attend them?; and why should I support the military if I am a pacifist?

The question finally must be what we get for the taxes we pay. The easiest answer to what we get is, in one word: "community." A community being a place where everyone, to a greater or lesser extent, helps support the other members of the community and thus doesn't have to expend all that extra energy standing alone. That support includes roads, bridges, schools, public buildings, clean water, waste disposal and help for people temporarily out of work or without food or housing.

A few years ago a very conservative friend—yes, some of my best friends are conservatives—said that the government had no right to take his hard-earned money away from him. I suggested that, without that much-despised government, there wouldn't be any money, and we probably owed them a little something for that. Case in point: I have in my desk drawer a two dollar bill issued by the Bank of Washtenaw in southern Michigan in 1854. It looks like money, it has an appropriate serial number and is signed by both the cashier and president of the bank. It is, of course, worthless, except as a curiosity. It is good to have a stable monetary system, backed by "the full faith and credit" of the U.S. government.

Taxes make that stable system possible, even for people or corporations who don't pay any taxes.

The question finally must be what we get for the taxes we pay. The easiest answer to what we get is, in one word: "community." A community being a place where everyone, to a greater or lesser extent, helps support the other members of the community and thus doesn't have to expend all that extra energy standing alone. A few years ago a very conservative friend—yes, some of my best friends are conservatives—said that the government had no right to take his hard-earned money away from him. I suggested that, without that much-despised government, there wouldn't be any money,

Biological communities—plants, animals and microorganisms occupying the same location—have been the subject matter of ecologists for nearly a century, and researchers have learned a few things about how they work. For nearly all communities—there are some deep sea exceptions—energy and substance are the mediums of exchange, kind of like money in human communities.

Plants acquire energy from the sunlight and substance from the earth, and make it into suitable food for all those things that eat plants. And those plant-eaters pass their energy and substance along to meat eaters. Every organism in the community eventually dies and its parts and molecules are recycled by still other organisms. The system works well and has for hundreds of millions of years.

What does this have to do with taxes? For each of those diverse plant or animal community members, there is a cost for being a part of the community. Each individual organism in a community grows less well than it might if given unlimited resources of energy and substance, but the whole community grows better, more certainly and remains more stable through time. Taxes are the cost of living in a human community.

It is worthwhile to argue about just how much tax should be paid and exactly what they are spent for, but taxes as an idea needs to be supported by anyone who does not wish to live alone on an isolated mountain top without a cell phone.

If we want the advantages that communities provide, we should be pleased to pay enough taxes to support those structures and activities. The whole community needs schools, police, and all the other amenities.

Just like the many plant and animal parts of a biological community, we humans are necessarily dependent on one another. Taxes are the mechanism by which that dependency is addressed.

Benjamin Gohe

Oh, how I do like me some pot. Let me begin this by saying I'm not going to debate the right, wrong or indifference about Michigan's Medical Marijuana Act. I think we, as a whole, are an overmedicated people. Pain, depression, anxiety and other effects of disease has its place.

With the admission by a local prankster (see MARIJUANA, page 3) that the medical marijuana store purported to be coming soon was little more than a hoax, I am left with a few questions and concerns.

My first concern is how undereducated people are on the new law. And we're not just talking Joe Meatloaf, here. We're talking about law enforcement, legislators and other public officials.

My second concern with the new law comes in how ridiculously the law was written: If you are a labeled as a qualifying patient—meaning you have cancer or AIDS or some other disease which is not responsive to treatment, you would be relieved of nausea, lack of hunger, pain, etcetera—then you may legally possess the seeds, stems, leaves and bud of the pot plants; and you or a designated caregiver may grow up to 12 pot plants, but the law does not provide for a place to obtain the seeds and plants.

That's right, while it has become legal in the state of Michigan for a cancer patient to smoke marijuana, they cannot legally obtain it.

Sure, there are Web sites like www.canaseed.com which are cleaning houses for the many marijuana distributors in a handful of countries where pot is legal.

And, you could track down an old Chevy van in hopes of finding some 1960s throwback willing to sell you a "My Little Pot-head" home-starter kit, but don't let your employer find out.

That's right, in addition to the legalized use of medical marijuana still being illegal to buy and sell, your employer can fire you for testing positive for marijuana.

We don't even have time to get into the hypocrisy of firing cancer Bob for smoking pot in his off time when his coworker Joe is hopped up on OxyContin, Quaaludes, Jack Daniel's and Pall Mall cigarettes—and all that before lunch.

Not only that, but the federal government can still haul your ass because marijuana is a schedule I narcotic—that's fancy talk for illegal drug.

And the best part of this giant mess—the old man had a better phrase, but, well, you know—is that, right now, the guys making bongos out of pumpkins and drinking gallons of pickle juice before they meet with their PO are thinking that their sweet Mary is one step closer to being legal, but it ain't.

Take a look around at all the other drugs labeled "medicine" and you will find them locked up behind the pharmacists' 12-foot counter.

There is no movement to legalize methadone or morphine. Hell, you have to sign a permission slip just to get your three boxes of snort pills because the government is afraid you might mix it with Dran-O and goats blood and sell it on the local playground.

Nearly as hysterical is the predicament public officials and the tax-funded public service announcement creators are now faced with. Ever since the 1930s and Harry Anslinger's congressional fight to label marijuana as the herb, if not root, of all evils, popular propaganda has told us the drug causes everything from mental derangement and hyperactive sex drive to an unquenchable thirst for crack cocaine, heroin and Roger Cornman movies.

Now granddad keeps a nickel sack in his sock drawer to help him cope with his glaucoma.

LETTERS to the editor

THANKS FOR MCSAUBA

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter to thank all of the dedicated people who make Mt. McSaubia ski hill, sledding hill and ice rink such wonderful places to enjoy.

My kids are 2 and 4 years old and throughout this long cold winter we could always count on one of those three places for fun.

This last weekend made us all hopeful for spring.

We enjoyed a great day of skiing and sledding with perfect conditions both Saturday and Sunday, and many evenings at the ice rink during its season.

Thank you for providing a place where families can enjoy such fun activities for a low cost, if not free.

We are fortunate to have such well-cared-for recreational activities to get us through the winter.

Although I am very happy spring may have sprung, I look forward to spending more time next winter enjoying your labors of love.

CHARLEVOIX BIDDING FOR THE BANKS?

Editor:

I am very disappointed that State Representative Kevin Elsenheimer voted against a bill that would allow homeowners about to have their homes foreclosed, a 90-day period to work out a payment plan with the bank.

With thousands of people in Northern Michigan threatened with foreclosure, this is the kind of common sense legislation we need.

Instead of voting for it, Rep. Elsenheimer did the bidding of the banks and voted against it.

Rep. Elsenheimer needs to decide who he works for—us or the special interests in Lansing.

SCHOOL BOARD NEEDS YOUR HELP

Editor:

To the parents and other residents of the Charlevoix school district:

You're probably aware that your school, like most others across the state, is dealing with a severe budget crisis. Faced with rising costs and anticipated cuts in state aid, the Charlevoix district is currently projecting a $900,000 budget deficit for the fall semester.

What you might not know is that your school board, like many others across the state, wants to address part of the problem by purchasing less costly health insurance for teachers and support staff.

But the teachers' union is standing in the way, and the school board needs your help getting past that roadblock.

The Charlevoix district currently purchases health insurance from the Michigan Education Special Services Association (MESSA), which is owned and operated by the Michigan Education Association (MEA). The MEA, the largest teachers union in the state, is also the parent union of the Charlevoix Education Association.

The school board wants to save an estimated $230,000 per year by dumping MESSA insurance and purchasing an alternative plan from Blue Cross/Blue Shield. The proposed coverage would provide nearly as many benefits for employees, without costing them a cent.

But the teachers union has no interest in that very reasonable plan.

This situation is hardly unique to the Charlevoix district. Across Michigan, school boards that were forced to accept MESSA insurance during past contract negotiations with the union are scrambling to dump it for more affordable coverage.

Already school boards in Waterford, Gaylord, St. Clair Shores, Lakeview, Pinckney, Mendon, Centerville and Elkton-Pigeon Bayport have dumped MESSA, at great savings to their districts. The Waterford district, for instance, estimated saving approximately $500,000 just two months after dropping MESSA coverage.

School boards in Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Cass City, Leslie, Caseville and Mayville are currently trying to dump MESSA, or at least cap the dollar amount they pay for the coverage.

But dumping MESSA is not easy to do.

That's because MESSA, a "not-for-profit" organization, makes a great deal of money every year and shares it with the MEA.

According to state insurance records, MESSA currently has a fund balance of more than $350 million, and transferred more than $4 million to the MEA in 2008.

So the MEA fights hard, and sometimes dirty, to keep MESSA coverage in every district possible.

In several districts, the MEA has initiated or encouraged recall campaigns school board members who vote to dump MESSA. In the Wayne-Westland district, the teachers actually staged an illegal strike last fall to preserve MESSA coverage.

Now the Charlevoix Education Association is carrying the MESSA torch in contract negotiations with the school board. Thankfully there's no current talk about recalls or strikes, but school administrators and residents would be wise to closely monitor the situation.

We at the Education Action Group (educationactiongroup.org) strongly encourage the Charlevoix school board to stay on course with its plan to find reasonably priced quality health coverage for teachers and support staff.

We also encourage the residents of Charlevoix to back their elected school board members as they battle to preserve precious dollars at the bargaining table. They need your support now more than ever, as they struggle to do the right thing for the district, its students and taxpayers.

She shoots for a living Local lady turns army photographer

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

One local young woman is truly seeing the world... through the eye of the camera lens.

Now a United States Army Documentation and Production Specialist, Phoebe Allport is on a six-month tour taking pictures for Uncle Sam in Afghanistan.

"I do a lot of office work viewing, correcting and sending photos to the Pentagon where they decide whether they want to put the photos on their military Web sites, or just stick them in their massive archive for later use," Allport stated in an e-mailed response to Courier questions.

Allport, who has been stationed in Bagram, Afghanistan since January, graduated from the army's photojournalism school in April, 2008 and was stationed in Fort Meade with the 55th Signal Company, a combat camera outfit known as the most active and most deployed camera unit in the world.

Allport's mother LuAnn Griffin said she was quite surprised when her daughter enlisted.

"It is still hard to believe that my only daughter has been through tear gas chamber and is now in a war zone on the other side of the world," she said. "She is confident, focused, I'm hoping the overall experience leaves her the same sweet, talented, gentle woman I knew before she enlisted."

While the change of ideas in occupation may have come recently, Allport's desire to serve has been around for a long time.

"I had been interested in the military as a little kid watching movies and hearing about real people that had served," she stated. "I originally wanted to join the Army Band, but they were looking for people that were higher educated in that field (with) master's degrees."

Allport was 18 years old and had recently graduated from Northwest Academy in 2007 when she made the choice to enlist in the army.

"I went back through the list of jobs I could pick from and we came across the documentation and production specialist, which is the long term for combat camera," she stated.

Allport added that she has yet decided whether to leave the military when her six-year contract expires or remain.

"It just depends on the places I'm able to go and the job openings I can get as a military photographer," she stated.

Allport said basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C. from July through September 2007, was not exactly what she was expecting.

"You always see those movies where the training is all hard and muddy and yelling coming from everybody, but in reality it wasn't all that bad," she stated. "We did PT (physical training exercises) every morning for about two hours. Every day after PT was a different experience: We would do hand-to-hand combat training outside in the grassy areas; weapons training at the ranges; first aid training here and there; drill and ceremony whenever we could."

Following basic training, Allport attended advanced individual training in Maryland at Fort Meade where she took a four-month class in both still photography and video documentation.

Allport is slated to come back to the United States in July, so long as the group set to relieve her team arrives on schedule.

"I try to talk to my family members by phone when ever I get the chance and I've been getting letters of support from family and friends back at home," she stated. "My husband, Evan Malkowicz, is back at Fort Meade living in a two-story unit with our three pets. He's also in the army as a combat medic... working at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research near the D.C. area."

Allport said she maintains contact with her husband via cell phone and computer, her father, James Allport, lives in Boyne City.

More than a decade of drawing and painting has paid off for 13-year-old Pauline Sheets.

The seventh-grader was not only accepted to Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp in Twin Lake, but she also received a full scholarship to pay for it all.

"I'm really excited," Pauline said. "I've been doing this for as long as I can remember."

Pauline's mother Barb Sheets said her daughter began her art career by creating the family Christmas cards.

"She chooses the theme and designs the Christmas cards," Barb said. "She uses all sorts of mediums to draw and paint — she's just kind of exploring right now."

Pauline will spend two weeks in the middle of April at the 1,300-acre arts camp in Manistee National Forest.

"It's two weeks of art, music, dancing, acting and they've got an orchestra and a band," Pauline said.

Barb said before Pauline was accepted and awarded the tuition, the middle-schooler had asked if she could pay for the camp herself.

"I'm very proud of her, and she's ecstatic," Barb said. "It's all we're hearing about; she cried when she found out she was accepted."

While Pauline enjoys drawing, she said painting with her grandmother was most enjoyable.

"I like to do animals and landscapes," she said. "I go out with my grandma and paint the beach or in her garden."

Pauline enjoys art so much, she dropped hand so she could begin art classes one year early.

"I like it a lot — art class at school," she said. "It's a good way to get your feelings out."

To the Max!

Their low profile and high capacity have made mp3 players extremely popular among the music-listening public, especially children and teenagers. Researchers caution however, that mp3 players, like the Apple iPod™ should be used with care. Listening to an mp3 player in noisy environments encourages users to turn up the volume to unsafe levels in fact, maxing out the volume of a typical mp3 player for more than five minutes per day can lead to permanent damage of the listeners hearing. Researchers say that most people can safely listen to an mp3 player daily for 4.6 hours, at 70 percent full volume. They recommend a limit of 1.2 hours of listening at 80 percent on a daily basis.

P.S. The research mentioned above was conducted with mp3 players that had the stock in-ear "bud" headphones that come with the players.

Charlevoix falls to McBain

STEVE FOLEY
NEWS-REVIEW WRITER

The Charlevoix boys' basketball team got a second chance at McBain on Wednesday.

Ironically, it would be second chances that would plague the Rayders throughout their Class C regional final.

McBain simply dominated on both ends of the glass and used multiple second chance opportunities to their advantage en route to claiming a second straight Class C regional title, 77-60, over Charlevoix at the Gaylord High School gym.

McBain, 22-3, ended Charlevoix's season for a second straight year.

"I have the utmost respect for (Charlevoix coach) Keith Haske and his team," McBain coach Bruce Koopman said. "I think the headline for our team was our team effort."

Wednesday's regional meeting was the sixth over the past eight seasons McBain and Charlevoix have met in the postseason, and with the win McBain evens the series at 3-3.

"We've been banged up all year, but our kids really stepped up tonight," said Koopman, who's team knocked out Charlevoix in a regional semifinal last season. "We know Charlevoix is usually going to get their little runs off their press and we had to make sure we didn't quit and we did a good job of doing that."

After building a 33-27 half-time advantage, McBain took firmer control of the game in the third quarter thanks largely to offensive rebounding.

Junior forward Ryan Hoekwater stuck an offensive put-back and sophomore forward Cody King added an inside shot as McBain's lead grew to 46-36 late in the third.

The Ramblers then outscored Charlevoix, 6-2, in the final minute as senior forward Garrett Sterk, who finished with a game-high 25 points, added another offensive put-back to make it 51-39 going into the fourth.

"When you play McBain, I know one thing and they're going to shoot the ball up there and unless you don't put a body on people, they're going to beat you," Haske said.

"I thought in that third quarter, we were terrible as far as rebounding the ball goes," added Haske. "I think out of 10 baskets they had, eight of them were on second of third shots."

Charlevoix cut the deficit to 10 points, 51-41, early in the fourth, but couldn't get any closer as the Ramblers continued to dominate on the interior and put the game away at the free throw line.

Sterk shot 7-of-8 from the stripe in the fourth quarter, while Hoekwater was 5-of-8 from the line down the stretch as McBain outscored the Rayders, 26-21, the final eight minutes.

"This type of game was really tough on you because you're playing tough defense on them and forcing them into tough shots, but they're getting rewarded because they're crashing the boards," Haske said.

Also for McBain, who finished 23-of-35 from the free throw line, senior point guard Caleb Sluter finished with 17 points, Hoekwater added 15, while King, playing in his first game in more than two weeks because of mononucleosis, provided a spark off the bench and finished with 10 points.

"I hate offense," joked Koopman. "Every year as a coach I feel I'm stupid when it comes to offense, but I love what we do defensively and I love what we do rebounding the ball."

"The guys off the bench were huge for us and we made some free throws," added Koopman. "We didn't shoot well from the line on Monday, but we put a nice orange dot at the center of the line here tonight and that helped us."

For Charlevoix, who closes a 19-5 season, senior point guard Thomas Parrish had a team-high 19 points and six assists, while senior forward Justin Frieke added 16 points and seven rebounds.

Also for the Rayders, senior guard Weston Bryan had 10 points, six rebounds, three assists and seven steals.

Charlevoix collected 16 total steals off their patented full-court press, but finished with just nine defensive rebounds.

"Actually, I felt great at halftime because we were getting the shots we wanted, but not a lot of them fell," Haske said. "They had a couple of threes that banked in and had some shots where I thought OK, they've had their deal and we'll come out in the second half strong like we have all tournament."

"But second shots killed us in the third quarter," Haske added. "We couldn't get anything going because they'd get the ball back and keep putting it back up."

The Rayders shot 9-of-24 (38 percent) from the floor in the second half and finished 21-of-58 (36 percent).

"If we could've made more shots and added more pressure, that mounts up," Haske said. "We just couldn't get to that point, especially in the first half."

The Rayders, who've won 10 district titles and six regional crowns since 1999, lose seven seniors to graduation in Parrish, Frieke, Bryan, Brock Yenglin, Jon Putman, Scott Silberhorn and Collin McDonough.

"It was a great group of guys and a tremendous group of kids to coach," Haske said. "The seniors especially. They're just great kids and the nicest group of kids to coach."

"I'm proud of what they've done and how they've represented the community well. They've kept the streak and tradition of Rayder basketball alive. I'll tremendously miss the seniors. They've been great over the years."

Give Your Investment Portfolio a Spring Cleaning

Ben Muladore
Financial Advisor

Spring is almost here — time to spruce up your house and get rid of your clutter. But this year, don't confine your spring cleaning to your home and yard. Why not "freshen up" your investment portfolio at the same time?

Of course, you can't just take a mop and broom to your brokerage statement. But some of the same principles that apply to your basic spring cleaning can work just as well when you tidy up your investments. Consider the following suggestions:

- Take an inventory of your belongings. If you're like most people, you've got some things lying around your house that have outlived their usefulness. It might be that lawn mower that died in 2004 or the toaster that warmed its last slice during the Clinton Administration, but whatever it is, it's beyond repair — and it should go. And the same may be true of some of your investments. If one hasn't performed the way you had hoped or no longer fits into your long-term goals, this might be a good time to speak with a financial advisor.

- Dispose of your duplicates. If you went through your house carefully, you might be surprised at how many items you have that do the same thing. Do you really need two colanders? And how many radios can you listen to at one time? If you looked at your investment portfolio the same way, you might be surprised by some of the redundancies that pop up. For example, you may have several stocks issued by similar companies that make similar products. This might not be a concern when the stock market is booming, but it could be a definite problem if a downturn affects the industry to which these companies belong. Always look for ways to diversify your holdings. While diversification, by itself, cannot guarantee a profit or protect against a loss, it may help reduce the effects of market volatility.

- Put things back in order. Over time, and almost before you're aware of it, the spaces in your home can get "out of balance." Perhaps you have too many chairs in one corner, or maybe your new desk takes up too much space in your home office. With some rearranging, however, you can get things back in order. The same need for rearrangement may apply to your portfolio, which might have become unbalanced, with too much of one investment and too little of another. This situation could undermine your financial strategy, especially if the imbalance means you are taking on too much risk or, conversely, if your holdings have become too conservative to provide the growth you need. So, look for ways to restore your portfolio to its proper balance.

By giving your portfolio an annual spring cleaning, you can help make sure it's up-to-date, suited to your needs and well-positioned to help you make progress toward your key financial goals. And you can do it all without going near a dust cloth.

EJ health center gets $247,641 grant

U.S. Congressman Bart Stupak (D-Menominee) announced that the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) has awarded a $247,641 federal Community Health Center grant to the East Jordan Family Health Center.

"This funding will help the East Jordan Family Health Center continue to provide health services in Charlevoix and Antrim Counties," Stupak said. "I am pleased the Department of Health and Human Services has provided this funding to sustain vital health services in our communities at a time when they are needed most."

The East Jordan Family Health Center was created in 1976 to address the lack of local health service providers.

Initially serving the City of East Jordan and surrounding townships, the organization has grown to serve most of Charlevoix and Antrim Counties, with satellite offices in Bellaire and Central Lake.

More than 10,000 patients receive care at the center annually from six full-time physicians and four full-time physician assistants.

Nearly 40 clinical support and administrative employees are also employed by the center.

This funding is provided to HHS through the regular federal appropriations process and is awarded through competitive grants. This funding is not part of the recently passed economic recovery legislation.

Esperance Market to open restaurant Nine, world flavors on menu

ENJAMIN GOHS
DITOR

A thousand wines, house made pate and the relaxed floor plan of an old world cafe awaits you at Esperance Market and Restaurant. Step onto the slate floor and walk along the giant planters made of oak barrel slats lined with red from the wine they hold—and yes, all those ants are real. "The store is now just over eight years old and we're adding a new venue, a seasonal menu," said Pram Acharya who owns and operates Esperance with his wife Suzanne. As things become available locally, we'll be working with local produce farmers and products. He added, "Right now we have maple glazed duck, and the maple syrup is from Currey Farms here in Charlevoix."

Seating for 50 is now available in either the cafe style tables or at the glass-topped, hardwood bar which contains photos and other memorabilia of the Acharya's, wine and food.

Ask what will be on the menu and things get a little tricky.

"We're exploring. It's going to be ever-changing, but we have fresh made spring rolls, empanadas—one of the salads is prosciutto and arugula—and we're doing shrimp with a fresh herb risotto," Suzanne said. "It's just a lighter, fresher approach. I think everybody's eating a little more health conscious and more and more as we've worked in the industry we've seen people want fresh ideas."

Market hours, beginning with the April 14 grand opening, will remain 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday; cafe hours will be Noon to 8 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and Saturdays Noon to 6 p.m., though if someone walks into Esperance at 10 a.m. and wants a cup of coffee and a piece of cheese, Pram and Suzanne will gladly oblige.

Reservations for lunch and dinner are suggested and group events are available, but call ahead for availability.

"It's all about the last bastion: Service," Pram said. "You can find everything everywhere these days online, but you won't get the service."

Esperance is located at 12853 US 31 North, Charlevoix.

Call 237-9300 for reservations or more information or visit esperancewine.com.

and a portion of Hayes each pay an annual one-tenth of a mill millage to pay for EMS; and Marion, Norwood and Eveline Townships each pay four-tenths of a mill annually for fire fighting services.

A financial statement by Charlevoix City Fire Chief Paul Ivan shows the City of Charlevoix pays 70.4 percent of the costs not paid for by insurance companies, but the city only constitutes 40.6 percent of the ambulance runs.

Conversely, Charlevoix Township — based on 2008 numbers — accounts for 35.5 percent of ambulance runs, but pays 12.5 percent of the costs not covered by medical insurance.

This apparent disparity among end users and those who pay for the services has prompted Straebel and Ivan to work on proposals, not only to combine fire services with Charlevoix Township, but to also consider raising EMS rates.

"The question is: How do you logically spread the cost so those who are using the services are paying for them?" Ivan said. "We haven't re-negotiated the contracts yet because we were reluctant to negotiate before we looked at the possibility of a consolidation effort."

Charlevoix Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson said his fire department and the township officials might be more willing to consider consolidation if there were any potential positives for them.

"This is why the board (Charlevoix Township) sent a letter to the city saying they were not interested in participating in a study to combine the two departments," Thompson said. "Charlevoix Township doesn't have a problem with what they're spending on their fire department and ambulance services."

He added, "Somebody is going to have to show Charlevoix Township how it would benefit them. It would benefit the city, but it would just cost the township more money for no better coverage than what they have already."

Ivan said the sharing of equipment would save the city and township thousands of dollars each year.

The matter is expected to be discussed at either the 7 p.m. April 6 or April 20 city council meeting.

Summary of Charlevoix Township Phragmites Ordinance The Township of Charlevoix Ordains: Ordinance No. 1.75 of 2009

Legislative Finding and Purpose of Ordinance.

Phragmites is an invasive species whose spread is not halted by traditional legal boundaries between parcels. Although Phragmites seeds can cause a small amount of spread, most reproduction is accomplished through runners growing along the ground. A single stand of Phragmites can spread 30-50 feet per year through these runners. If left unchecked dense Phragmites stands can block views of Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix and make beaches inaccessible, which can lead to a decline in tourism and property values. In addition, the spread of Phragmites can drive out native plant species thereby destroying beneficial wildlife habitat. As a result, the purpose of this Ordinance is to provide procedures intended to comply with federal and state due process requirements so that all property along the Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix shoreline with a Phragmites infestation can be included in a Phragmites eradication zone, and can receive effective Phragmites treatment. By including all property along the Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix shoreline with a Phragmites infestation in the Phragmites eradication zone, this Ordinance will help maximize the effectiveness of the Phragmites treatment, thereby eliminating or reducing the adverse impacts of a Phragmites infestation.

Phragmites Infestation; Written Report; Right to Access Property; Consent; Administrative Search Warrant.

Unless the Township Board directs otherwise, the Phragmites administrator shall annually conduct an inspection of all Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix shoreline property within the Township for the purposes of identifying all parcels on which a Phragmites infestation is present. The Phragmites administrator shall submit a written report of his or her findings to the Township Board no later than the Township Board's regular June meeting. The Phragmites administrator shall have the right to access all shoreline property within the Township for the purpose of conducting the Phragmites inspection. However, before entering onto a parcel to conduct the inspection the Phragmites administrator shall obtain written consent from the property owner for any such inspection. If the property owner fails to provide written consent to the Phragmites administrator of the physical inspection of the parcel, then the Phragmites administrator shall not enter onto the parcel unless authorized to do so by an administrative search warrant issued by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Phragmites Treatment; Cost.

Following the receipt of a permit from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) authorizing Phragmites treatment on the parcels within the Phragmites eradication zone, the Township shall engage the services of a professional authorized to engage in Phragmites treatment. The cost of the Phragmites treatment shall be paid for as determined by the Township Board.

The effective date of this ordinance shall be the day following its publication in a newspaper of general circulation within the Township.

A complete copy of the Ordinance is available at the Township Hall at 12491 Walter Rd.

Carol Martin, Clerk Charlevoix Township, 3-16-09

Emergency food/shelter grants awarded

Char-Em United Way and the Local Board of the federal Emergency Food and Shelter Program just completed distribution of over $80,000 in federal funds to support local food and shelter programs in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

United Way is the local administrator of the federal Emergency Food and Shelter Program (EFSP).

The Local EFSP board met recently to review requests for funds and award grants. Emmet County agencies received a total of $47,365 which will be distributed to the Women's Resource Center, Salvation Army, Manna Food Project, Brother Dan's Food Pantry, Harbor Springs Community Food Pantry, and St. Francis Church.

In Charlevoix County $32,672 has been awarded to the Women's Resource Center, Salvation Army, Manna Food Project, Good Samaritan Family Services, East Jordan Care and Share, and the Seventh Day Adventist Boyne City Community Service Center.

"We are grateful that we had nearly 14 percent more funds to distribute locally this year," said Martha Lancaster of United Way and Chair of the Local EFSP Board. "The funds to provide emergency shelter and food come from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and are distributed to counties based on unemployment rates. The good news is that more funds were available locally; the bad news is this confirms that our local unemployment rates have increased significantly."

The awards were made by a Local Board that is chaired by United Way and includes representatives from the Salvation Army, American Red Cross, Temple B'Nai Israel, Catholic Human Services, Emmanuel Episcopal Church, the Little Traverse Bay Band of Odawa Indians, both County Commissions, the Department of Human Services, both Community Foundations, and the Nchemmah House.

"These funds will be used to expand the capacities of these local agencies to meet emergency needs for food and shelter," Lancaster said. "Demand on local pantries and agencies providing rent and utility assistance have increased as much as three-fold over the past year. The EFSP helps meet that need, and United Way is pleased to make this possible by administering the program."

For more information, contact United Way at 487-1006 or info@charunitedway.org.

Sailor to see world

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

It isn't a dream, a wish or a hope. Sailing around the world will soon be reality for sailor Gary Dawson.

While the veteran charter boat captain and sailor isn't sure why he bought his first sailboat decades ago, he is certain that he must begin his upcoming seafaring adventure.

"It's not a huge decision," Dawson said of sailing around the world on a trip which could take as many as five years. "It's something I've always wanted to do — it was something I knew I was going to do."

He added, "There's an old saying: 'God laughs at men who make plans.' But, the timing was just right, and something has been guiding me my whole life. Call it whatever you want, but things have just fallen into place. I can't even explain it — it's a beautiful thing, really."

Crew Dawson will make journey with his brother Mike and one other friend on a 55-foot South African-built boat named "Shellette."

The crew of three plan to set sail by leaving April 7 from Key Largo off the Florida Coast.

Shellette will then travel to the Panama Canal, possibly stopping off in Belize if there is time, before heading to the Galapagos Islands, sailing through French Polynesia.

"Then, about the end of November, we'll head down to New Zealand to get out of hurricane season in the islands (Polynesia) and hang out in New Zealand for four to five months 'til hurricane season is over," Dawson said.

The crew will eventually sail to Australia, India and perhaps Japan and China.

"We'll spend four to five months in Australia, then work our way up the north end of Australia and then head to Indonesia, Malaysia, that whole region," Dawson said. "Our

NEWS-REVIEW

The Charlevoix Country Club will once again be open to the public for dining and golf.

David Mocini, 53, who most recently spent five seasons as general manager and director of golf at True North Golf Club in Harbor Springs, purchased the 18-hole golf course and 13,000 square foot clubhouse with associated restaurant, tennis courts and pool amenities, on March 11 from the club's founders.

The founders maintain control of the residential properties and real estate.

"The location is great and the community is one anyone would like to spend time in," Mocini, a former Michigan Professional Golfers Association (PGA) president, said. "These are tough economic times and we understand there are challenges everywhere and in particular in golf. Being in business in Michigan is a challenge. But northern Michigan remains a unique attraction."

Mocini plans to take the club in a new direction — opening the golf course and restaurant facility to non-members.

"And as we do that we will continue to provide for members and encourage them to utilize the facilities as much as they would like to. They are an important part of this operation," he said.

Mocini estimated current total membership at the Charlevoix Country Club to be around 150. He would like to see membership climb to around 200 by the end of the coming summer season.

The award-winning Jerry Matthews, design championship golf course moved to private status in January 2007 in a decision former owner Kip Thomas said he made to better serve members.

"As a semi-private club, we were trying to serve a variety of constituents. As a private club we will be able to totally focus on improving the private club experience for our members," Thomas said in a previous interview.

In December 2008, just under two years after moving to a private model, under economic pressure, Thomas decided the property back to the club's founders, nine Charlevoix resi-

No joke

No, it's not an elaborate April Fool's joke, the Charlevoix Alano Club, Serenity House and home of various 12-step programs like Alcoholics Anonymous is moving meeting locations temporarily beginning after the noon meeting on April 1 for renovation. The temporary meeting location will be at the Beacon Center across the alley from the Alano Club's back building. Patrons are asked to help carry furniture and other items to the temporary location so renovation of the restrooms and kitchen can begin. The Alano Club, which nearly a year ago demolished the old two story house which for years housed meetings, will begin breaking ground this spring on a new facility at the same address. Cats and People Get Nine Lives

A LOOK AT LIFE

Gayle Gennett

when his blood sugars climbed past 700.

Some of us would already be in a coma with those numbers, but not Dale. This incident followed on the heels of a fall on the ice just the day before.

Still full of enthusiasm, and happy to have a listening ear, he began to share things of interest that occurred in brief time frame.

This past Fall he and his Model T took a hit from a car that pulled out in front of him. I

A cat has nine lives, or so they say. I wonder how many we have.

I pondered this question when I visited Dale Boss after his decision to visit the hospital.

There are numerous individuals in our community who are still very active in their senior years, I count myself among them.

For research sake I wanted to check the similarities that existed among those of us that were active.

It came down to this: knowing your sugar and/or cholesterol levels, getting regular massages and daily exercise even if for 15 minutes a day.

If you've not had a blood test in a while maybe its time to make that part of your spring regimen.

So simple to do and it follows the old adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure." In Dale's case as with many of us, as we get older we may develop Type 2 diabetes which is really quite common.

Your body doesn't make or use insulin well.

Symptoms to look for are: fatigue, unquenchable thirst, weight loss and blurred vision. Knowing your number on this is important.

Nothing beats the need to move and flex those joints of ours, even if it's to walk down the street and back.

Health books have noted that farmer's and gardeners live longer and healthier because of their strenuous activity level. The next healthy exercising group is individuals who practice the art of Tai Chi as they experience fewer colds and flu symptoms.

I decided to ask my fellow gym mates why they use all the shiny equipment and walk for thirty minutes going nowhere.

They responded with the following: Exercise increased their energy and metabolism plus improved their sense of well being, self-esteem and reduced stress. Sounds like pretty good reasons to be active to me but it might make for fewer counseling clients in my office.

Individuals who receive regularly scheduled massages never cease to amaze me.

Ask anyone who has a healthy parent 90 years plus and it may be from human touch.

The need for human touch has been documented for centuries.

Whether you hug members of your family, your friends or a furry pet at home, it can make the difference in your outlook and blood pressure.

For the widow or widower who may not get the frequent hand holding, hugging and closeness they experience in marriage a massage by a certified massage therapist will help release endorphins to quiet their pain of loss.

A massage helps maintain physical, mental and emotional well being and calms the nervous system.

They also reduce tension, anxiety and improve blood circulation.

Therapeutic effects are cumulative, the more often you get one your body will respond positively.

Dad started getting them shortly after mom passed away.

When I moved him up here after he broke his neck, the general feel coming from his doctors on his time left here on earth was under six months.

That was over two years ago. Jenn Evans, massage therapist extraordinaire, has given him no expiration date. He may forget what he had for breakfast but he never forgets which day he gets his massage.

So I have come to the conclusion that we do get nine lives and maybe more if we just follow all of this good advice. So to kitty cats everywhere I say, "Move over we've found out how you do it."

make money; that's a given. But aside from what our advertisers do for themselves by advertising in our pages, they do much more for the rest of the community.

Companies who advertise their business with us aren't merely selling products and services, they are ensuring that we on the news end of the business can continue to provide relevant, reliable information to the community, and at a pittance: Just 75 cents per copy.

Now, I've never been one to boycott a company simply because they did not align with my ideology or because my feelings have been hurt.

I'll still listen to my favorite rock station, even if they continue to insult my ink-

ALANO APPRECIATIVE

Editor

In February 2006 members of the Serenity House-Alano Club of Charlevoix entered into a dialog with the city of Charlevoix to discuss plans for our property at 106 Mason St. The board of directors of the Alano Club had been considering options that would better serve the needs of the membership as well as the community at large.

Things remained stalled until City Manager Rob Straebel was hired in 2007.

In December 2007 The Alano Club again met with Mr. Straebel as well as the mayor and DDA members to try to get things going on this project.

From that point on our city administration has been a model of helpful cooperation as we navigate the various committees and departments necessary for a project like this. From city utilities to zoning to council and committee members, every person that we have dealt with has bent over backwards to aid us with this venture. Most notable among many has been City Planner Mike Spencer.

From researching existing zoning codes and historic precedent to waiving application fees for this non-profit (501c3), Mike has been our pilot through the often confusing maze of regulation.

Soon, with the blessing of the city council, The Serenity House-Alano Club of Charlevoix will move into a new home at 106 Mason St.

We would like to thank, in advance, all those who have helped us along the way.

Richard O'Leary
Board Chairman, Serenity House-Alano Club of Charlevoix

MESSA Plans cost less and help districts build top quality staffs

As Michigan policy makers work to rebuild our economy around new technologies, clean energy and life sciences, our schools, colleges and universities are undoubtedly a key part of the foundation.

Quality health benefits have long been a powerful career incentive for educators and a drawing card for successful school districts.

MESSA is proud to provide quality health care options to Michigan educators, including Charlevoix Public Schools.

The fact is MESSA is an efficient business operation. It is a Michigan company with more than 300 employees.

In 2005, Republicans in the state senate commissioned a comprehensive study of the school health insurance market. The actuaries, hired by senate Republicans reviewed MESSA's finances and business model, then testified that MESSA was very well run and impressive.

MESSA has also received national recognition for the third consecutive year for the superior efficiency and performance of its East Lansing-based Member Service Center by The Center for Customer-Driven Quality™ at Purdue University and BenchmarkPortal.

MESSA plans often cost less than comparable plans. Many school groups have come to MESSA to save money on their health insurance.

Pinckney schools are going to save more than $330,000 in the first six months of this year alone.

Like all Michigan citizens, educators have shared in the state's economic pain. Area school employees are making significant sacrifices to help districts balance budgets and preserve quality education.

They've bargained less-costly health plans and shouldered more costs, saving Michigan school districts more than $500 million in the past four years.

MESSA has also done its part: Our average rate increase over the past three years has been under four percent. Many districts are paying less this year for health insurance than they were three years ago.

MESSA has also used more than $140 million from its reserves to reduce rates for school districts.

If anything, MESSA's reserve levels are a sign of how quickly and drastically school employees have cut and sacrificed benefits to help their employers.

MESSA has its critics, like recent Charlevoix Courier letter writer Kyle Olson. Olson's rants are a lot like Alabama Sen. Richard Shelby's recent attacks on Michigan's auto companies and workers. They are equally extremist and disrespectful to Michigan citizens and to MESSA.

MESSA is fully transparent. We share our annual report with the public and the media, including Charlevoix Courier editors, every year.

Amazingly, for all his carping, Olson hides his funding sources.

He refuses to publicly disclose who is funding his activities.

It's no secret why area teachers are passionate and loyal to MESSA. We are the best value in the market.

But, most importantly, having a MESSA plan helps successful school districts recruit, retain and build strong, talented staffs.

Cynthia Williams,
MESSA Executive Director

Reports of our death an exaggeration

THE CRYING
TOWEL

Benjamin Gohs

"I have a bone to pick with you," my old mother would say when she was miffed over what ever nonsense I'd whipped up.

Well, after listening to a relatively new commercial on my favorite FM rock station over the last few days, I have my own bone to pick.

The commercial starts off by telling the listener they've probably heard about the shrinking newspaper. The announcer goes on to say radio is far superior to newspaper when it comes to connecting with your audience—I'm not going to debate which medium is the best way to get your advertising message to the potential customer.

I've always believed that a good advertising campaign involves all forms of media: Radio, TV, newspaper, Internet and even word of mouth.

That being said, it wasn't so much that the station was hoping to capitalize on the decline of some small and large newspapers both near and far that bothered me. I think it was the gleeful tone with which he delivered his message of death that really got me steaming.

Hey, I get it. Some people love to see others fail. Case in point: I was talking with a local business owner just last week who said while inventory was a little thin during winter, some customers asked if they were closing—again with a bit of glee in their voices.

The radio announcer went on to say that the small business Web site was the newspaper of the 21st Century. Really?

Knowing that TV is still the number one way to reach a broadcast audience, I understand radio's desperate hope to claw any revenue it can from what it hopes is an out-of-date product, but to try and convince the baker, mechanic, insurance salesman, T-shirt seller, landscaper, doctor, municipal worker, politician, school teacher, nurse and grocer that they have the time, or inclination to attend county, township, city and committee meetings; that they have time at the end of their busy day to take pictures of school and community events; that they could or would want to live without opinions from local columnists, local sports coverage and a community bulletin board for events, wedding announcements, births and deaths?

I found the commercials insulting not only to me as someone in the news business, but also to our advertisers.

Does the faceless voice on the FM dial truly believe the local companies who support their local newspaper day after day, week after week, year after year do so only out of financial gain?

Of course, we're all here to

Are you ready for Park Ave' Prowl?

Charlevoix's Alcove Café owner Rachel Wright did extensive historical research over the past few years on the corner of Bridge Street and Park Avenue where her business is located.

This led to further research up and down Park Avenue that resulted in both a Web site and a walking brochure that describes her discoveries. Rachel will be presenting a program on what has become known as the Park Avenue Prowl for the Charlevoix Historical Society at 7 p.m., April 7, at the depot on Depot Beach. Assisted by Georganna Monk, she will describe how she went about her research and relate the stories she uncovered about the buildings and people encountered along the way.

Light refreshments will be served.

Donations toward the Society's program fund will be appreciated.

For more information call 547-0373 or visit the prow! Web site at www.charlevoix-parkavenue.com.

Commission on Aging progress report

The Commission on Aging (COA) Board has conducted an organization and program review to determine progress made since the 2007 assessment was conducted by outside consultants.

The detailed reviews, which included a comprehensive report compiled by the COA staff, addressed performance and accountability throughout the COA operations. The findings were presented to the County Commissioners on March 18.

The report consisted of three parts: An organization review of internal processes including human resource systems, administrative processes and measuring, tracking and analyzing programs; a programs and services review of accomplishments and issues for each program offered by the COA; and a board review of achievements and concerns. It is the first annual report of COA performance, which was identified as a COA board responsibility during work last summer with David Emmel, the organization development consultant.

Highlights of the report include many accomplishments over the past two years including: hiring of a full-time in-home coordinator to oversee training and scheduling of direct care workers; conversion of several part-time workers to full-time; partnering with the Preservation Association of Beaver Island to provide senior center meals and activities on the island; establishment of an overall client satisfaction survey which is tracking at 98 to 100 percent satisfaction with COA services; expansion of adult day services from three to five days a week; and major improvements in the Boyne Area and County (East Jordan) senior centers. The COA and Charlevoix Senior Center boards have established a positive working relationship in our joint effort to provide senior center services in the Charlevoix area. A new volunteer program has just been approved with a full-time volunteer coordinator.

Units of service have increased from 49,968 at the end of fiscal year 2005 to 86,628 at the end of fiscal year 2008 - a 74 percent increase. Currently there are 344 in-home clients that receive services including meals on wheels, personal care and homemaking. Staff has increased by 32 percent to 26 part-time and 11 full-time today

Efforts are underway to better measure programs and client satisfaction through improved information management.

A marketing plan is being developed to include marketing research, media planning and marketing strategy. Some organization restructuring will allow for improved performance management and communications.

A strategic plan is presently under development to establish timetable program and spending plans that take into account expected revenue over the short and long term. Effective execution of plans will be carried out with the COA's new mindset for looking beyond local practices, programs and minimum standards for achieving the highest quality outcomes.

Brothers compete in Jr. Olympics

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

How do you get from Mt. McSaubia to Winter Park, Colo.?

Practice, practice, practice.

"I was 2 years old the first time I skied," said Charlevoix's 13-year-old Gunnar Lundteigen who recently competed in the Junior Olympics in Colorado. "I just really love it and it was really cool."

Though Gunnar fell a couple of times while racing down the super giant slalom, he managed to finish in 12th place out of 113 athletes from around the country.

"I met a lot of nice people and really enjoyed the experience," Gunnar said.

Gunnar's brother, 11-year-old Garret also competed in ski competition at this year's Junior Olympics.

"I finished 81 out of a hundred," Garret said. "I wasn't really ready for how fast the hill was."

He added, "I got some experience out on the hill and it was fun for me because there were so many kids out there."

The boys' mother Michele Lundteigen said, while she is proud of her sons' accomplishments, they had a humble start.

"Both boys started on our septic tank in the backyard when they were 2," she said. "Since then they've been pretty active at Mt. McSaubia ski hill here."

The boys' father Erik Lundteigen said it is nice to see his boys excel in a sport he has loved for many years.

"When I grew up, I did a lot of skiing and ski racing," said Erik Lundteigen. "Skiing is something you can do all your life—it's really a family thing."

Competition occurred from March 17 to 21.

"There were a lot of great skiers there who were focused and determined, and you just know these racers have been out in the cold and bitter days and missed school dances and went home to do homework," Michele said. "This is what our future is and that's what I was excited about."

Garret said he hopes to qualify for the event next year.

Garret Lundteigen's older brother Gunnar is pictured competing in the giant slalom race where he placed seventh against more than 100 skiers from around the country during the 2009 Junior Olympics in Colorado.

Gunnar said he will continue working toward his goal of competing in the adult Olympics some day.

"Just try it. Do your best and practice a lot," Garret said to any kids who have never tried skiing.

Erik said he is very proud of his kids for qualifying and working so hard to make it to Colorado.

He added, "I just can't say enough about Mt. McSaubia—I love that place to train; it's the greatest; you're up and down the hill and getting a lot of practice runs."

A thousand wines, house made pate and the relaxed floor plan of an old world cafe awaits you at Esperance Market and Restaurant.

Step onto the slate floor and walk along the giant planter box made of oak barrel staves stained red from the wine they once held—and yes, all those plants are real.

"The store is now just over eight years old and we're adding a new venue, a seasonal fresh menu," said Pram Acharya who owns and operates Esperance with his wife Suzanne. "As things become available locally, we'll be working with local produce farmers and products."

He added, "Right now we have maple glazed duck, and the maple syrup is from Currey Farms here in Charlevoix."

Seating for 50 is now available in either the cafe style tables or at the glass-topped, hardwood bar which contains photos and other memorabilia of the Acharya's, wine and food.

Ask what will be on the menu and things get a little tricky

"We're exploring. It's going to be ever-changing, but we have fresh made spring rolls, empanadas—one of the salads is prosciutto and arugula—and we're doing shrimp with a fresh herb risotto," Suzanne said. "It's just a lighter, fresher approach. I think everybody's eating a little more health conscious and more and more as we've worked in the industry we've seen people want fresh ideas."

Market hours, beginning with the April 14 grand opening, will remain 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Saturday; cafe hours will be Noon to 8 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and Saturdays Noon to 6 p.m., though if someone walks into Esperance at 10 a.m. and wants a cup of coffee and a piece of cheese, Pram and Suzanne will gladly oblige.

Reservations for lunch and dinner are suggested and group events are available, but call ahead for availability.

With no JV, varsity baseball deeper than ever

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

With the majority of players in their first season on varsity, baseball coach Alan Telgenhof's team is green, but eager. "We have nine freshmen so much of our team is very young," Telgenhof said. "We have four seniors: Michael Heckendorn, Jon Putman, Drew Largent and Mike Kras."

But, he added, "This will be the first full season on varsity for 14 of our 19 players."

Last year, Telgenhof's team finished 16-18 overall and 6-8 in the conference.

"It will be an interesting season for us with the mix of solid, very experienced players returning and all of the youth on the team," he said. "Senior leadership will be a key for us. We have an opportunity to have a very good season, beginning with our spring trip to Tennessee."

Telgenhof added, "I am very happy that 14 of our guys are able to go, that should be a good bonding experience for the team and the warm weather will give us a great opportunity for extra practice."

Telgenhof will be assisted by Rob Harris and Matt Teuscher.

"We will be a very aggressive team on the base paths with a lot of team speed. We will shake things up for our opponents," Telgenhof said.

"Michael Heckendorn has received all-conference and all-district honors the past two seasons. Jon Putman is beginning his fourth season on the varsity and was previously named all-conference. Clayton Mitchell was also all-conference and all-district previously."

Rayder baseball began with play on March 30 in Charlevoix, Ind. Their first home game is April 14 against Harbor Springs.

"We are playing a very challenging schedule this year with baseball powers like Traverse City Central, Harbor Light who is ranked number one pre-season in Division 4 and Frankfort who went to the state semifinals last season," Telgenhof said. "In our league, East Jordan is always tough, coming off a great season and is highly ranked in the pre-season."

Girls' softball hopes to make conference again

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

With their second place finish in the Lake Michigan Conference now a memory, the girls' varsity softball team looks to season some young players.

Head softball coach Tony Zimmerman, associate head coach Ken Hoffman and assistant coach Courtney Kemp will work with 16 varsity players because there was not enough interest to field a junior varsity squad.

"This season looks to be promising. It really is going to depend on how quickly the new players adapt to the speed of the game and get used to our system," Zimmerman said. "If they can get with the veteran players it is going to be a fun and exciting year—if we can't have some bumps in the road."

He added, "They are a great group of student athletes. They work hard and we are all excited to get the season started."

Some of the team's star players include sophomore pitcher Hannah Hybl, senior four-year varsity outfielder Amber Hoffman, four-year varsity and Taylor University soigneur catcher Lauren Mielke and junior shortstop Sarah Potter.

"Our strengths are our returning varsity players. They know the system and know what is expected of them," Zimmerman said. "The weakness will be just getting everyone on the same page."

The team has four returning seniors this season.

"All of them have solid varsity experience and we will look to them to lead the younger players throughout the season," Zimmerman said.

"We have seven freshmen on the squad this year—the most we have had in the four seasons I have been here."

He added, "There are three that we hope will have an immediate impact for us and they are pitcher/outfielder Kristin Mielke catcher/first base Chelsie Hoffman and short stop/second base Madison Zimmerman. The other newcomers look promising and we are excited to have them on the squad."

The girls' varsity softball team will have their first game on April 7, with their first home game against Harbor Springs.

"The toughest competition will be from East Jordan," Zimmerman said. "They have a solid group of returning players and are very experienced and as always will be Kalkaska, they are a very quality program and are a very quality program."

Crop of seniors could help girls' soccer

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

With six team members returning as seniors and five new members, the girls varsity soccer team may have found the perfect balance.

According to varsity girls' soccer coach Carol Madison, she has 16 members on her varsity and 15 on her junior varsity.

"The numbers should allow everyone to get plenty of playing time and game experience while ensuring we will be competitive," Madison said. "We are returning six starters on varsity along with five other letter winners who also saw game experience last year."

The returning starters are senior Tammy Potter in goal, who has made first team all-state; senior Meridith Rich, second team all-state at center back; senior KC McCary, third team all-state at center midfield; senior Olivia Catt at forward; senior Marnie Greene at outside back; and junior Madison Way at mid-field.

Madison will be aided this year by assistant varsity coach Tom Conlan, junior varsity coach Laura Nitchman and junior varsity assistant coach Casey Wilcox.

"We lost in the state semifinals to Kalamazoo Christian who went on to repeat as state champs," Madison said of last year's season. "We had won conference for the fourth year in a row, districts for the second time, and regionals for the first time."

Madison said she is looking forward to the upcoming season. "We have a great nucleus in KC, Meridith, Olivia, and Tammy," Madison said.

"These four girls know how to win games and really came up big for us in the tournament last season. I think they will really inspire the other girls to work hard and improve their skills."

She added, "We have great team chemistry, speed and good technical skill."

The lady Rayders soccer team will likely find tough competition from Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis, but added, "in our conference you really can't overlook anyone. We also have some games with Petoskey, Gaylord, Suttons Bay and Marquette which will definitely be challenging."

The girls will kick their way into the new season on April 7.

Will big numbers mean big talent on clay?

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

With 28 girls on her tennis team, coach Vinnie Klooster hopes to find some great talent.

The numbers are up significantly from the last two years, Klooster said.

"Large numbers means lots of interest and that is always good for the team," she said of her four returning players now seniors and 15 new players.

Klooster, whose team finished with a record of 3-6 and won conference at number four singles, will be assisted by coach Neil Turner.

"I'm excited that so many girls came out for the team," she said. "Many of them are not experienced players, but that's OK."

Klooster added, "We should be able to make a good showing at the first and second singles and doubles positions, and we have some good athletes who will round out our third and fourth positions."

Some of Klooster's team leaders include Kimber Wager and Christina Miller, both singles players last year.

"They will make a tough number one doubles team this year," Klooster said. "Amy Pelon and Sam Sell are two new players we expect to play strong at our top singles positions.

She added, "We have a good core of girls that have played on the team for two or three years now, and their experience will help our strength as a team."

The girls' first match is April 9 against the Petoskey junior varsity.

"We consider all our competition tough," Klooster said. "Since we are the newest team in the Lake Michigan Conference, we are always playing against more experienced players, but the girls do a great job of rising to the challenge."

The Charlevoix Rayder girls' tennis team is pictured (lying in the foreground) Kimber Wager and Christina Miller, (first row, from left) Bailey Chamberlain, Amanda Fritsch, Rachel Gilmore, Julia Hordsworth, Alyssa McCormack, Kelsey Way, Katie Mays, (second row, from left)

Track, field look to 'talented rookies'

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Half of his 36-man track and field team is new.

With so many young athletes on this year's team, coach Ken Plude is hoping his new talent will perform.

"We're young and inexperienced," Plude said. "There are some very talented rookies. We'll have to see how they develop."

But, Plude added, his team is starting out about the same as they did last season.

"We were conference champs last year and we finished fourth at regionals out of 16," he said.

will be assisting Plude this season.

Some of the teams stronger runners include senior Alex Buday, sophomore Eric Buday who made all-state last year.

Plude's only other returning senior is Bill Foley.

The Rayder varsity track and field team's strengths, Plude said, are the middle distance 800-meter, and longer distance 1600-meter and 3200-meter events.

Tough competition, the coach said, will likely come from Traverse City St. Francis and Harbor Springs in the conference and Kingsley at regional competition.

Plude's first meet was March 25 at Lake Superior State University.

The Charlevoix Rayders boys' track and field team are (in no particular order) K. Acharya, S. Belfy, Russ Bolt, John Boss, Alex Buday, Eric Buday, M. Carey, A. Devries, A. Edick, River Gauthier, Alex Gooch, Ty Haller, I. Hosper, Chris Kele, J. Kelly, B. Knoop, W. Larson, J. McLean, T. Sobleski, D. Reynolds, J. Roach, N. Salisbury, B. Shutler, L. Smith, V. Girls' track, field looking for third championship

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

With 16 new, and 17 returning runners for a total of 33 runners, the girls' varsity track team is relatively large.

According to coach Mary Plude, those big numbers, which include six returning seniors, will only help her team's chances of winning yet another championship.

"This is the largest team for the girls in at least a decade," Plude said. "We are up by eight girls from last year."

She added, "This will be a wonderful bonus for the team as we will be able to fill out all 17 events."

Plude will be assisted by Hal Evans, Pat Rajewski, Adam Wood, Kris Way and Becki Wimmer.

Coming off winning conference championships two years in a row and coming in fourth at regionals, Plude is confident her team leaders can help the new talent across the finish line.

"There is a great core of seniors: Alyssa Smith, sprints, high jump and long jump; Elise Smolenyak, 200, 400-meter dash and relays; Shauna Spencley and Alyssa Belfy in pole vault; Tanya Wynkoop in the hurdles; Chantel Novotny, 200 and sprint relays; and junior Taylor Storm, sprints, relays and long jump," Plude said.

"I have a very positive attitude about this group of girls. Besides the great senior leadership, there is a strong experienced returning group of underclassmen. We have a nicely balanced team when you add in the new freshman talent."

She added, "We have at least one or two strong competitors in each event."

Plude said her challenge will be in finding the depth to fill in the third opening in each event.

The Charlevoix Rayder girls' track and field team are pictured (front, from left) Chantel Novotny, Elise Smolenyak, Shauna Spencley, Alyssa Smith, Tanya Wynkoop, Alyssa Belfy, Alyssa McCormack (second row, from left) Annie Dipert, Linnea Jelinek, Margy Bolt, Rachel Titus, Bethany Whittaker, Maddie Alden, Kristina Alden (third row, from back) Hilary Way, Andrea

"We will need to work on developing the new athletes to step up to the varsity level if we are to reach our team goals," she said. "Our toughest competition will be Harbor Springs, Traverse City St. Francis and Boyne City in the conference."

Plude added, "They all come in with very balanced teams and the numbers to compete in all events. Reigning regional champs Benzie Central and then Kingsley in the regional come with strong track traditions of winning and the athletes have very competitive spirits."

The girls' varsity track team had their first competition on March 25 at Lake Superior State University.

Help for seniors on the way

With the number of seniors in the America expected to reach 76 million by 2030, more and more families are facing the overwhelming responsibility of caring for aging loved ones.

This growing need, along with their own desire to make a difference in the lives of those around them, has inspired David and Christine Theuerkorn to open a Home Helpers franchise to serve Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Benzie, Antrim, Charlevoix, Kalkaska, Wexford counties and surrounding areas.

"Christine and I experienced how difficult it can be when caring for an aging loved one," said David Theuerkorn. "My family and I really struggled to take care of my aging grandmother who was suffering with Alzheimer's disease. I truly believe the services Home Helpers provides will help give families peace of mind knowing their loved ones are receiving exceptional care and companionship."

He added, "Having been in this situation myself, I realize the importance of an experienced helping hand."

Home Helpers is a growing national franchise based on offering companionship and other personal services for aging adults, new mothers and others needing assistance to live in their own home.

The company provides in-home services on an hourly, daily or weekly basis with tailored packages customized to an individual's needs.

Services include companionship, meal preparation, light housekeeping, grocery shopping, transportation, laundry, recreational activities and more.

"Often, a full-time nurse or medically trained professional isn't necessary to keep an aging parent or recuperating family member in their own home," Christine said.

"When I was ordered to bed rest after having my third child, it was almost impossible for David to take care of everything."

She added, "A service like Home Helpers would have taken a lot of the burden off of David and the kids."

David and Christine reside in Traverse City.

David has 18 years of automotive industry experience, 15 of which were spent at a family-owned manufacturing business.

Christine, formerly a teacher, is a homemaker currently pursuing her master's degree in family life ministry at Concordia University.

David and Christine attend and volunteer at New Hope Community Church.

They also volunteer at Traverse City Christian School and are members of the board of directors of The Theuerkorn Foundation, a non-profit foundation dedicated to charitable giving.

Fire destroys home

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The April 4 house fire that left five people homeless remains under investigation.

While former 300 Meech St. renter Jennifer Haight and three children stay with family, her husband Cory is lodged in the Charlevoix County Jail on what Charlevoix City Police are calling an "unrelated matter."

The 28-year-old Cory pleaded guilty in district court on April 7 to retail fraud, third degree, for a shoplifting incident in Boyne City and he pleaded guilty in circuit court the same day for violating a personal protection order held by his wife for being at the 300 Meech St. residence.

"It's still under investigation and the state police fire investigators have been called in," said Charlevoix City Fire Chief Paul Ivan.

Cory is currently serving the remaining 12 days of a 15 day sentence relating to his two guilty pleas.

The fire, which had engulfed the home by 50 percent when firefighters arrived around 1:40 p.m. last Saturday, took approxi-

Jennifer and her children were not at home when the fire began.

"My mother-in-law told me my house was on fire and to get over there," she said.

Jennifer said her husband was at home at the time of the fire.

"He got very minor burns to his fingers," she said.

Police would not say why Cory was arrested.

According to Charlevoix 90th District Court, Cory was expected to be arraigned at 8:30 a.m., Tuesday, April 7.

"I didn't even see my husband," Jennifer said. "I just wanted to know he was all right."

Jennifer said she was told her husband had a warrant for his arrest, but nothing more.

"I have no idea. I'm still trying to figure that out," she added.

The Haight had been renting the house, owned by Richard Binstadt of Cincinnati, Ohio, since April.

Jennifer said this is the second house fire she has endured in her

Jury trial for Norwood mine owner

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Former Norwood Township Supervisor Wayne Wynkoop was arraigned on one count of violating the public trust, a 90-day, $500 misdemeanor.

Wynkoop allegedly violated a Michigan law which apparently prevents public servants from entering into contracts with the entities they serve when he sold gravel from his mine to the Charlevoix County Road Commission which later used some of his gravel to do roadwork on Norwood's Lakeshore Road.

"Lakeshore Road project was an ongoing issue. When I came into office that was the first thing I was approached on in 2004," Wynkoop said. "I didn't vote on it. It's amazing, two members of the board lived on Lakeshore Road should they have recused themselves from the vote?"

Wynkoop, who did not receive his special use permit to operate his gravel pit until July 9, 2007, said the road commission contacted him two to three months after the board voted to approve Lakeshore roadwork to see if he would sell them gravel. He submitted his bid to sell them gravel in March of that year.

Minutes from the May 21, 2007 Norwood Township Board meeting show Wynkoop recused himself from the vote to approve Tri-County Excavating do the grading, ditching and culverts on Lakeshore Road with gravel work to be done by the county road commission.

However, it is alleged in Michigan State Police investigation documents that Wynkoop never disclosed to the public that he had bid and won a contract to sell $21,606.80 in gravel to the Charlevoix County Road Commission.

According to the transcript from the May 21, 2007 township board meeting, Wynkoop told the board he was recusing himself from the vote and discussion on the roadwork pro-

Community conversation could steer policy

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

In what founder Phil Power calls an "engagement campaign" Michigan's Defining Moment seeks to involve 10,000 Michiganders in shaping the state's future.

Determined not to waste any of the hours on a beach in Florida after his 2005 retirement from the news business, Power set off on a campaign of community conversations which involve a wide cross-section of the population.

"Michigan's Defining Moment is ... designed to ignite and fan a citizen movement to develop, from the bottom up, a common sense, common ground agenda for Michigan's transformation," Power said. "We hope to bring citizens into the policy making process in a way that they have not been involved before."

Power said, while organized labor and various businesses contribute to politicians in hope of gaining political favor, the process largely leaves ordinary citizens "out in the cold."

"One thing we've learned is that the public has no lobbyists," he said. "The second thing we learned is most policy comes from the top down rather than bottom up."

Power said, "Groups start with a view of the world they're poised to inflict on ordinary people and the political process. We do it the other way around."

Michigan's Defining Moment consists of community conversations like the one on Thursday, April 17 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Though the event is not open to walk-ins, upwards of 100 Charlevoix area citizens have been invited to attend.

Both Charlevoix County Republican Party Chairman Tim Boyko and Charlevoix County Democrat Chairman Bill Lovett are each inviting 50 people.

"As the representative of the Republican Party in the county, I did try to make that representation with the group," Boyko said. "I tried to primarily get people that identified with the Republican Party."

But, he added, "There was an overlap in our lists and these people (the overlap) generally were very community involved, but maybe not in a partisan manner. What we probably found is the independent voter."

"We hold community conversations and invite people to define the kind of Michigan they want in the future and develop action steps to get there," Power said. "We are a think and do tank: Thinking without doing is pointless and doing without thinking ... gets you into trouble."

The resultant information culled from the meetings will then be used to create action groups which will focus on the subjects most important to them. From those meetings "policy planks" will be developed and then sent to policy makers in the government.

Power said the 2010 political season will be a "watershed election" because the seats of governor, attorney general, secretary of state and many other state level political positions will be filled with new names and faces.

The best case scenario to come from these community conversations, Power said, "A prosperous, thriving, vibrant Michigan."

To see a report on the 180 community conversations which have been held all across Michigan, visit www.thecenterformichigan.net.

"I will be interested to find out about the issues that everyone agrees on so we can work and explore and investigate the issues we don't agree on," Boyko said. "My goal for this forum is to find commonality and areas of difference, and then we can begin to understand issues we don't really need to expend a lot of energy debating."

Lovett could not be reached by press time.

Job fair draws 300 job seekers

RYAN BENTLEY
NEWS-REVIEW

CHARLEVOIX — About 300 job seekers turned out Tuesday to explore the employment possibilities available at a job fair Northwest Michigan Works! hosted at Castle Farms.

Employers in fields ranging from manufacturing to local government to hospitality — numbering about 20 in all — were on hand to seek applicants for employment.

"I was pleased with the turnout (as far as) applicants and employers," said Bill Woodrow, operations manager for the Michigan Works! service center in Petoskey.

This was the second year in which the workforce services agency arranged a chance for job seekers to interact with multiple prospective employers in one setting. Last spring's job fair drew about 400 people in search of employment.

And with two fairs scheduled in this area this year, the second is set for Tuesday, April 7, in Petoskey — Michigan Works! is on pace to see a larger number of job seekers than in 2008.

Given the area's rise in unemployment during the past year, this was a trend that agency staff expected beforehand.

While the resort industry that's a key part of the local economy has plenty of seasonal openings again this year, Woodrow noted that entry-level positions in manufacturing — which traditionally has been another mainstay for the area — have become fewer and farther between as companies have shut down local operations.

Charlevoix's Wojan Window & Door Corp. was among the employers at the job fair with positions to fill. Patrick Babin, vice president for sales and marketing at the manufacturing company, noted that the firm is seeking candidates for a marketing/communications assistant, structural/design engineer and sales manager.

Babin noted that he saw a steady flow of inquiries through the early part of the job fair, and identified a couple of promising leads for job candidates.

"We've seen a little of everything," he said, noting that applicants showed a wide range of work backgrounds. "If anything, it's just a clear reflection of the situation with the economy."

David Marvin, business manager for Stafford's Hospitality, noted that his company is looking to fill about 60 seasonal slots at its four hotel and restaurant properties around Emmet and Charlevoix counties, along with one full-time lead housekeeping position.

During Tuesday's job fair, he said the firm made contact with a handful of promising candidates for the full-time opening, and got a "good start" fielding applicants for the seasonal ones.

"I thought it was a great turnout," he said.

Scott Redman, whose work background is in quality assurance, was among the job seekers who dropped in for Tuesday's fair. Laid off from his last position about four months ago as a result of slowing sales, he's hoping to stay in Northwest Michigan.

The Petoskey resident said seasonal positions seemed more plentiful Tuesday than the full-time work he'd most like to obtain, but he did see a handful of openings — both short- and long-term — in communications and manufacturing that he plans to follow up on.

"I'm someone who's looking for a full-time position, but as we all know with the

OPINIONS yours & ours

Stop trying to live, and live already

FAITHFUL SERVANT

Stephen Guthrie

Next week I reach one of those milestones. I'm turning 62.

I have been up and down the career ladder, and I have been in the federal government for 16 years.

Now, let me put on the record that in my mind I am still about 42. After all, I have a daughter in the fourth grade, so technically I'm not allowed to think, feel, or act "old."

Funny comes in 'ha-ha' and 'strange'

FAR TO THE GROUND

Roger Knutson

Some thing about the current political circumstances reminds me of the old joke about the two cannibals who were eating a comedian.

think there is something funny going on, in both senses of that word.

Part of it is that comedians are more and more in charge of what we hear and believe.

I understand that for many young people the major source of political news on TV is the Daily Show, presented by Jon Stewart, and the Colbert Report from Steven Colbert.

Both of those comic geniuses are part of a long American tradition of poking fun at politicians and public figures.

Most people are aware of the political humor of Will Rogers, but the tradition goes back all the way to the Civil War when Orpheus C. Kerr was making joyous fun of an inept government and military.

Petroleum V. Nasby wrote of a presidential trip to Detroit in 1866, and Finley Peter Dunne skewered the inflated political balloons of folks like William Jennings Bryan at about the same time that Mark Twain was having fun with the famous.

Our own time has continued the tradition with a particular boost during the 1960's from the likes of the Smothers Brothers, who helped compatriot Pat Paulson on two unsuccessful tries at presidential election.

Mort Sahl, Dick Gregory, Richard Pryor and George Carlin were often more commentators than comedians. If they did not completely alter the political climate of their time, they at least enlivened it.

They were able to say things that real political figures never could say and were able to make us laugh at the same time.

The commentator-comedian by now has a firm place in the American political scene.

In addition to Jon Stewart and Steven Colbert, people disappointed over the choices I'd made.

Out of nowhere I found myself wishing I'd understood earlier the difference between the urgent and the important, and opted more often for quality instead of quantity. I began to daydream how much money I'd have today if I'd learned earlier how to acquire without the need to acquire.

I found myself disappointed in having spent so much of myself making a living that I'd somehow gotten sidetracked on making a life. And suddenly I was deeply regretful over the people I'd shored or offended along the way to upward mobility.

In short, I found myself wishing I'd known then what I know now, for I would have stopped striving and started living long before I finally did.

The Bible authors struggled with the paradoxical futility of life, too.

David writes of the blink of an eye that is our years on earth, sixty years, or seventy if we're lucky, and compares it to the flower that blossoms, then withers with age, and disappears so that its place remembers it no more.

Solomon takes two chapters of Ecclesiastes to enumerate his great wealth and accomplishments, then dismisses it all as futile vanity. He bemoans the striving of man, laboring in the sun, his mind troubled, only to pass it all on to heirs who did not work for it.

And Solomon, in all his wisdom, concludes that there is no point to all that striving except that a man should enjoy to the fullest the life that God has given him, regarding it as a gracious gift from a benevolent Father.

In the face of apparent pointlessness, Solomon opted for a life of grateful rejoicing and doing good with the days we are granted.

I think maybe he's on to something there.

MISMANAGEMENT OF FUNDS

Editor:

Due to the recent bail-out and the blatant mismanagement of funds occurring in the private sector as well as the public sector, the idea of government transparency has recently received a great deal of attention. New organizations and websites have been created purely to provide information regarding our government's bottom line.

Citizens have started blogs to track spending not only in Washington, D.C. but in Lansing and other state capitals around the nation. What's clear is that the potential for open and obvious government has never been so ripe. It's an insult that government does not provide this information in an affordable, easy-to-use manner.

In an effort to push back the curtain on at least part of the Michigan House of Representatives, I have published on my online office the budget allotment for my office as well as my staff's salaries. According to the Michigan House of Representatives Financial and Business office, I am the very first lawmaker in Lansing to post such information on-line.

I hope others will follow.

Why is this important you might ask? Well, let me tell you. Last year, after it became certain the Legislature wasn't going to return the $352 million in excess tax dollars the state over-collected in 2007, talks quickly turned to spending the surplus on such things as $14 million to the Detroit Zoo, the Detroit Institute of the Arts and the Detroit Historical Society.

Perhaps public disclosure of the state's spending habits will help guide some accountability and transparency in government. If nothing else, it will provide an avenue for taxpayers to find out how government is spending their money. Is that really too much to ask?

It's no secret that Michigan is in terrible economic shape however it does seem that our executive branch would like to keep the secret of state spending. Recently, I asked the Governor to create an easy-to-use Web site where people can see exactly how their taxpayer dollars are being spent.

The Governor's administration claims the cost of creating a Web site is exorbitant. However states like Oklahoma built a Web site for as little as $8,000.

in software plus staff time and it took me less than two clicks of a mouse to post my expenses on-line. I find it hard to believe that our state cannot afford a system similar to Oklahoma's when the benefits of such a system would only equal more effective spending.

In a time where every penny counts, it is no longer acceptable to make it difficult for citizens to see where their money is going. I hope you will take the opportunity to access my office's financial information by visiting www.gophouse.com/cisenheimer.htm and clicking on the Government Transparency link.

PUBLIC LANDS MANAGEMENT ACT

Editor:

In a recent letter to the editor, Charlevoix resident John Haggard is quick to criticize my vote on S. 22, the Omnibus Public Lands Management Act of 2009, but failed to obtain the most recent information before firing off his letter.

If Mr. Haggard had bothered to research the legislation he would have found that an amendment was added to S. 22 by the House to protect hunting on public lands. The amendment provided for the protection of recreational activities otherwise allowed by law or regulation on public lands, including hunting, fishing and trapping, and also clarifies states' authority to manage fish and wildlife populations. Inclusion of the amendment led to the NRA's endorsement of the legislation.

I voted in support of S. 22 but it failed by two votes in the House. The legislation will soon be reconsidered and I expect it will also contain protections for Americans' gun rights.

Cancer survivors strong and fashionable

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

The Circle of Strength cancer support group's annual fashion show will feature spring fashions and a luncheon.

Organizers hope the show, with fashions modeled mainly by cancer survivors and their family members, will entertain as well as educate people on the pervasiveness of the many types of cancer.

"It's just a fun day to raise awareness," said Circle of Strength volunteer and co-founder Kim Stevens.

Tickets for the noon to 3 p.m., Saturday, April 18 show cost $10. Both the luncheon and fashion show will occur in the Charlevoix Public Library's community room.

Tickets are available by calling 547-8950 or visiting the Charlevoix Area Hospital's gift shop.

Stevens, a cancer survivor herself, said supporting the Circle of Strength support group is one of her highest priorities.

"I found one (support group) in Petoskey after I was diagnosed in April 2000, because there wasn't one in Charlevoix," she said. "Diane Gorkiewicz came to me and wanted to start a program and since we have continued to grow — we are now with the community education program through the hospital."

Gorkiewicz, a fellow cancer survivor and co-founder of the group said dealing with something as devastating as cancer would be even tougher without support.

"The benefits are amazing," she said. "The problem is we are taught to keep our own business private and not everybody is in that place — sometimes people get so scared they don't access help."

Gorkiewicz added, "We don't know all the answers yet, but this helps people in their ability to cope and gives them access to resources and books and sometimes it's just having someone call and check on you to see how you are doing."

In addition to providing educational materials, the Circle of Strength offers rides to oncology appointments, help with cancer patients struggling to pay their bills and even a person to join you at an appointment if necessary.

"It would be nice if we could work together and make it all go away, but in the meantime we're working together to get people through it," Gorkiewicz said.

The Circle of Strength currently hosts two regular support groups: One from 10:30 a.m. to noon, the first Wednesday of each month; the second is 7 p.m., the first Tuesday of each month at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"It's really important to have a partner or family member who is supportive," Stevens said. "Also, talking to women who have been through it and knowing you're not alone, that someone has been through similar circumstances, that's kind of what led me to where I am now: I did get help and now I feel I have to reach out and help women with cancer diagnoses."

Jacob Mitchell takes Honorable Mention in statewide Severe Weather Poster Contest

Jacob Mitchell, a student at Charlevoix Elementary School in Charlevoix, was awarded Honorable Mention in the 2009 statewide Severe Weather Awareness Poster Contest, sponsored by the Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness.

Mitchell was honored at a ceremony at the State Capitol in Lansing on March 31, 2009.

Jacob is the son of Charles and Ann Smalley of Charlevoix.

The contest, open to students enrolled in fourth or fifth grade, is a project of a coalition formed in 1991 to coordinate public information efforts regarding flood, tornado and winter safety. Posters were judged on their illustration of the importance of preparedness in the event of severe weather.

First, second and third place as well as an honorable mention winner were selected from the more than 670 posters submitted. The awards ceremony will be held in conjunction with Michigan Severe Weather Awareness Week as declared by Governor Jennifer Granholm.

"Although there were many quality posters submitted to the contest, Jacob demonstrated the importance of being prepared in his creative artwork and message," Lori Conarton, coalition member representing the Insurance Institute of Michigan said.

The Michigan Committee for Severe Weather Awareness is comprised of the following organizations: Insurance Institute of Michigan, National Weather Service, Michigan Emergency Management & Homeland Security, WDIV-TV, Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, Michigan Earth Science Teachers Association, American Red Cross, Michigan Emergency Managers Association, Michigan Sheriffs' Association and State Farm Insurance.

Think you've got what it takes? Play Texas Hold 'Em for charity

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

If you know when to hold them and fold them, buy your ticket now for the Charlevoix Elks' poker tournament.

Noticing the need of local food pantries and other area charities, the Elks decided to host this Texas Hold 'Em game night.

"The money is going to stay here," said Charlevoix Elks Lodge #2856 member Christopher Jones. "It's not going to Petoskey, it's not going to Traverse City, it's going back out into the community."

The Texas hold 'Em tournament begins at 6:30 p.m. at the Leslie T. Shapton American Legion Post, 106 East Garfield Ave. in Charlevoix.

"If you think you're good, then come on out," Jones said. "If you are a beginner who's unsure about your skill level, come on out."

He added, "I think it's going to be a fun time for advanced players as well as beginners—there is obviously skill to it, but it's also about luck."

A minimum of 50 registered players is required to hold the event and the prize purse will be half of the total buy-in and add-on chip sales.

Should 100 players register and purchase add-on chips, the prize purse will reach $5,000 with $2,500 for first place, $1,500 for second, $750 for third and $250 for fourth. If 50 players are not registered, all tickets will be refunded. Players must be at least 21 years of age.

You may register the evening of the event from 5:30 p.m. to 6:15 p.m. or buy your tickets in advance by calling (231) 330-6971 or e-mail chxels@yahoo.com.

A $75 buy-in nets players $2,500 in chips with an add-on of $1,000 in chips available for purchase at registration for an additional $25. Draft beer, wine, pop and appetizers are included with the initial buy-in.

"Proceeds will be distributed along the lines of who needs the money the most," Jones said. "If you want to have a good time and you could use a tax write-off, we'd be happy to help."

He added, "It's money well spent."

Visit www.elks.org for more information on how to join the Elks Lodge.

Woman abducted over invisible children

BENJAMIN GOHS
EDITOR

Valler

Alicia Valler will likely be abducted when she goes to Grand Rapids on April 25 ... and she is just fine with that.

Valler will join hundreds in Grand Rapids and thousands worldwide who will participate in mock abductions for the group Invisible Children to raise awareness about the theft of children in Uganda who are then forced to fight in a 23-year-old war on the African continent.

We kind of live in a bubble here, and we don't see what these kids go through," said Valler, an 18-year-old Charlevoix Public School senior. "When I was 5, I was playing with Barbies. These kids are having sex and shooting people and seeing their parents killed in front of them."

The crisis originated in the mid-1980s when a group called the Lord's Resistance Army rebelled against the Ugandan government and began abducting children by the hundreds in order to fill its military's ranks.

"Call whoever you can call, e-mail whoever you can e-mail, do whatever you can do to tell people about this," Valler said. "We will camp out all night and the only way to leave is to have someone abduct you and then have a member of the media come interview you about it and then you're supposed to have a rescuer come rescue you."

Just last December, the Lord's Resistance Army in Uganda, headed by General Joseph Kony, murdered more than 600 people and abducted another nearly 160 children.

According to an INTER-

POL notice, Kony is wanted by the International Criminal Court on 12 counts of crimes against humanity and 21 counts of war crimes.

In addition to participating in "The Rescue of Joseph Kony's Child Soldiers" event in Grand Rapids, Valler has designed hats she hopes will be ready for sale next week. Proceeds will go to help the Invisible Children organization.

Once they are ready, the hats will be available for sale for $12 each in the Charlevoix High School lunchroom at lunchtime. Call 547-3222 for availability.

Jury trial

posal due to possible conflict "on the material."

The law in question: MCL 15.323 - contracts of public servants with public entities states that, except with certain exceptions, a public servant must disclose any pecuniary interest in a contract to the official body that has power to approve said contract.

The complaint at the root of this issue came from the Norwood Township Citizens for Health and Safety's lawyer Karen Ferguson.

The Norwood citizens for health and safety is a group which has, for years, opposed Wynkoop's gravel mining operation.

The case goes to pre-trial at 10 a.m., April 21 in Charlevoix's 33rd District Court, but it will be handled by special prosecutor James R. Linderman of Emmet County. Charlevoix County Prosecutor John Jarema requested the special prosecutor due to his close working relationship with 33rd Circuit Judge Richard Pajtas.

Pajtas a Wynkoop neighbor who was turned in to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources by Wynkoop in summer, 2008 for mowing a portion of Fisherman's Island State Park and driving motor vehicles on the same.

Pajtas wife Dana, now a Norwood board member, has also been a staunch opponent of Wynkoop's mine.

Wynkoop asked Charlevoix's 90th District Judge Richard May step down from the case because Wynkoop planned to call his colleague judge Pajtas as a witness in his jury trial.

Wynkoop resigned as supervisor in November, 2007.

From the Director's Desk Dear Neighbors,

Spring has arrived, and amidst the snow, rain and sun we can see change beginning to transform in front of us. For some, spring means cleaning closets, removing cob webs from little visited places, and swapping the winter gear for warmer weather items. As merchants and as consumers, can we not apply the same principles to transform our local economy?

Spring is, after all, about change. As we clean, we find things that are broken and need mending or replacing. We find a forgotten project or idea. Perhaps we completely abandon the current space for a newly renovated one. Perhaps transformation comes in the form of volunteering your spare time, or simply by hosting your far away friends for a weekend.

Erin Bemis

Clear out the cobwebs, and think fresh. Be the one to initiate change. Together, we CAN make a difference.

Snowboarding for glory

BENJAMIN GOMS

Tackling Copper Mountain with a broken face?

Though still recuperating from recent injuries including a broken nose, black eyes and a concussion that he sustained while training at Boyne Mountain, Charlevoix veteran snowboarder John Curtis is on his way to compete in the USA Snowboarding Association games in Copper Mountain, Colo.

"I'm excited. It's a good chance to be seen and make connections in the industry," Curtis said. "And, I hear Colorado is getting pounded with powder, so I'm definitely excited about free-riding when I'm not competing."

Curtis began his journey to Copper Mountain April 3 but his road to national competition has been much longer.

"You have to compete in a regional series. In Northern Michigan we have a Middle Earth Snow Series," he said. "I did that in open class division and I won everyone besides one."

The Middle Earth Series occurred from January through March and consisted of competition at hills including Boyne Mountain, Boyne Highlands, the Otsego Club and Nubs Nob.

Curtis will compete in the slop style event, which consists of a downhill course of rails, boxes and other features upon which he must ride and perform tricks.

"It's huge," he said. "There will be like 1,500 competitors of all age groups and probably like 13 or 14 features."

The competition begins April 5 and ends April 10.

Since Curtis has competed in events of similar size, he said it won't be the course which intimidates him, but the memory of his recent injury.

"Probably the second week of March I was up at Boyne Highlands training, learning new tricks and I hit this jump and over-rotated my spin backflip and just ended up smashing my face into the landing," he said. "I was wearing a helmet, and that saved my brain, but the gap from takeoff to landing is probably 20 feet and the momentum is what got me."

Curtis spent 14 days resting following the accident

"I just have to get back on my board and try to be on top of my game," he said. "I'm kind of scared, but I'm going to kind of push that out of my mind—it's kind of an honor to be invited to this stuff, so I need to go out there and forget about it."

If Curtis places well enough in the competition, he could be invited to the coveted Winter XGames.

Curtis is currently ranked 22 in open class slopestyle.

On to Copper Mountain

Veteran snowboarder John Curtis of Charlevoix is seen here performing a hard turn which throws snow into the air—also known as a "slush"—while training on Saturday, March 28, at Boyne Mountain. Curtis leaves today, April 3, for Copper Mountain, Colo., for the USA Snowboarding Association games. If Curtis places high enough in the event, he could be invited to the holy grail of snowboarding, the Winter XGames.

Your Tax Refund: Invest Today for Tomorrow's Goals

Ben Muladore
Financial Advisor

The tax-filing deadline arrives next week. Will you be getting a refund? If so, take the time to consider how best to use it — because, when used wisely, your tax refund can give you a few added steps on the road toward achieving your financial goals.

Of course, if you filed your taxes weeks ago, you might have already received a refund. But given the current economic environment, you might have kept the money in a "holding place" while you waited for an uptick in the financial markets. At any rate, if you have access to a refund this year, you now have the opportunity to put that money to good use.

How? Here are a few ideas:

• Help fund your IRA. In 2008, the average federal tax refund was $2,429, according to the Internal Revenue Service. If you were to receive that amount, it would cover almost half of your IRA contribution for this year, as the annual limit is $5,000. (You can put in $6,000 if you're 50 or older). A traditional IRA grows tax deferred, while a Roth IRA grows tax free, provided you have held your account for at least five years and don't take withdrawals until you reach age 59-1/2. Your IRA may have taken a hit last year, but if you fund it with quality investments and avoid making withdrawals until retirement, you can take important steps to help rebuild your portfolio.

• Help build an emergency fund. You could use part of your refund for an IRA and part to help build an emergency fund. Ideally, you should have six to 12 months' worth of living expenses in a liquid account to help pay for unexpected costs, such as a major car repair, a new furnace or a costly medical bill. Without such an emergency fund, you might be forced to dip into your long-term investments to pay for these costs — and that can hurt your progress toward your financial objectives.

• Help rebalance your portfolio. Based on your risk tolerance, time horizon and long-term goals, you may have decided to put a certain percentage of your assets in "growth" vehicles and a certain percentage in income-oriented investments. At that point, your portfolio was in equilibrium. But during the long bear market, your portfolio may have sustained enough losses to become "unbalanced." In other words, some of your investments may have lost so much value that they no longer make up the percentage of your holdings that you had originally intended. Of course, you could wait for these investments to bounce back — and they may, given enough time — but if you wanted to speed up the rebalancing process, you could use your tax refund to add the right types of new investments to your mix.

Ironically as it may seem, there may not be a better year in which to invest your refund. You can find many quality investments at reasonable prices today, so your refund can help you add extra shares to your accounts — and the more shares you own, the better off you may be when the market turns around. So put your refund to work soon.

Council focused on energy issues

EDITOR

Determined to stay abreast of an issue which affects everyone, Charlevoix City Council's recent meeting focused mainly on utilities.

Council members voted unanimously to purchase more cost-efficient blocks of energy in addition to setting public hearings on both their energy optimization and cross connection plans.

"Because of the economic downturn, the current prices for these blocks of energy are relatively low," stated city electric and water department superintendent Don Swem in his presentation to council. "It would be to our advantage to obtain this low priced power before the prices go back up—if they do."

Until 2010, Charlevoix remains a member of the Michigan Public Power Agency, a group of municipalities which jointly own coal plants and a gas turbine generator in Kalkaska.

When the power agency ceases to exist, Charlevoix will have the option to buy hours of electricity in so-called blocks of energy.

"At this point, the best plan we have is an interim plan to buy some blocks of energy that would be available from 2011 through 2015," Swem stated.

Swem added that it could take until 2015 before the municipalities agree on a replacement for the old power group.

Continuing with the theme of energy, council approved two public hearings to begin at 7 p.m., May 4 in council chambers.

The first hearing will be on the city's energy optimization plan which is intended to "entice customers" to make purchases and take steps to reduce their energy use.

The energy optimization plan is a requirement since the Michigan legislature passed Public Act 295 in 2008.

Early projections are that the plan could save the city 64 megawatt hours or one percent of its retail sales.

Proposed motivators to the public could include incentives for those who buy compact fluorescent bulbs, recycling refrigerators and freezers, purchasing appliances with the Energy Star—meaning the appliance uses less energy than its counterparts—logo, and updating heating, ventilation and air-conditioning equipment.

The second hearing will be on the city's cross connection control plan.

The plan deals with ensuring water pipe systems are properly installed so "water of undesirable quality" does not reverse direction and end up in the fresh water supply.

Swem said the cross connection plan's paperwork is outdated and that this will merely be a housekeeping matter in updating some language.

To get a copy of either plan, call city clerk Carol Ochis at 547-3250.
